the mind of the man sometimes described as Japan's god of management.

The scope of our activities is ever expanding. In March 1980, we began publication of an English language Asian edition. And plan to issue a South American edition in Spanish from October 1980.

PHP—Peace and Happiness through Prosperity—is Japan's only international, English language, monthly magazine. It is read by opinion leading businessmen, educationalists and journalists in over 120 countries in the 5 continents of the world. This is an impressive record for a magazine that began publication only ten years ago.

Through the medium of PHP we, the editorial staff, seek to make a meaningful contribution to an improved society. Society, however, is not an abstract entity. Its quality depends on the standards of the individuals who make up its members. Only by raising individual standards can we hope to bring about a significant improvement in the world around us. We at PHP try to do this by promoting a frank exchange of opinions, contributed by authors as far apart as Denver and Delhi. This will in turn create a basis for increased international understanding and lead to a relaxation of political, economic and social tensions.

The content of PHP closely follow this editorial policy of broadening the readers' outlook of the world and its people. Because our contributors are drawn from all walks of life and from all corners of the globe, the subjects they choose to write about are as diverse as the origins of the writers themselves.

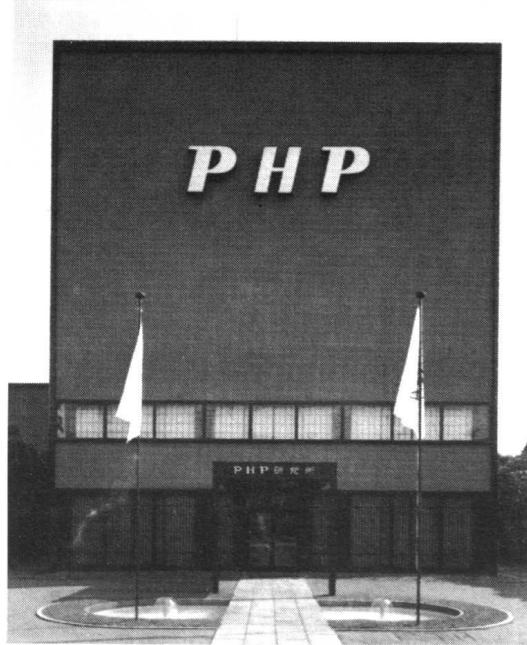

Every edition of PHP carries a series of 3 regular articles. In one we look towards the 21st. century. International contributors examine the problems we may be facing then and offer advice or possible solutions.

Faces of Japan gives foreign interviewers the opportunity to talk with senior executives of leading Japanese corporations. The reader is given an objective view of Japanese industry and a profile of some of the people whose influence shape the tastes and trends of Japanese society. Another regular feature is contributed by PHP's founder, Konosuke Matsushita, based on his reflections of over 60 years as an industrialist.

A fascinating opportunity to see into
