Part III Reading Comprehension

Directions: In this part there are four passages followed by some questions, each with four suggested answers. Choose the one you think is the best answer.

Passage 1

This year, a new course has been added to the choices at our university. The course is called Information Technology. Students from Art Department, Engineering Department and other Departments all take the course. The content of this course may be endless, because there are so many things to be explored and today's society is so depended on computers and new developments technology. Even if your school does not have the same course as I am taking, it would be a worthwhile effort to try to develop a program. Not only would you benefit from the information learned, but the rest of the students at your school would also benefit a lot.

There are four purposes of the course. The first is to learn practical skills in computing, communications and networking, or data storage. The second is to understand the great influence of information technology on social communities. The third is to gain knowledge of how information technology can be used in imaginative ways. The fourth purpose is to learn applications of information technology that do good to people. These four purposes not only show that this program really teaches valuable information to the students, but also demonstrate this course can add something new to any major.

Some things about computers are easier than you may fear. First, computers are logical. Things that at first seem difficult will make sense to you after you learn the rules. Second, it is really not hard to learn enough to use today's machines. You do not need to be a great brain. But you do have to learn to think in new ways. And you do have to keep a good bit of information in your head. Finally, there are many people around who are really enthusiastic about computers. These people are always happy to be of help.

6. The writer's purpose to write the passage is to tell the readers _____.

10. According to the passage, computers are described to be _____.
A) difficult      B) special      C) enthusiastic      D) logical

Passage 3

A revolution is under way. The technology of computer science is having a great influence on our lives, and the most immediate result of this technology is its effect on employment. Robots and computer-controlled machines have already joined the work force in highly developed countries. They have taken over most jobs on the car assembly line. One big American company has shown that it is now possible to replace half its 37,000 assembly workers with machines. Robots carry out boring tasks very efficiently for an hourly "wage" of about $5. The average human worker on a car assembly line, in contrast, earns about $18 an hour.

What does the future hold, if the computer is taking jobs away from humans? If large groups in society are dissatisfied and restless, there will be an increase in violent crimes.

A great social change is necessary if we are to survive the automation revolution. It is up to the politicians to deal with the problem. An obvious solution is a shorter working week. Less time at work would mean more time for entertainment, and more opportunities for further education. A greater demand for entertainment would lead to an increase in job opportunities. In theory, even the unemployed should have a reasonable income. After all, thanks to the new technology, it will be economical to pay people not to work.

11. According to the passage robots are used in factories to _____.

13. It is implied in the passage that _____.
  - A) it is necessary to have a great change in society
  - B) computers are replacing human workers

  - B) not very much money will be spent
  - C) the new technology will not make the government lose money
  - D) it is reasonable for them to have an income

Passage 4

Why does the progress of modern world happen so fast? Surely because progress of a particular kind is actually taking place around us and is becoming more and more obvious. Although mankind has undergone no general improvement in intelligence or morality, it has made extraordinary progress in the accumulation (积累) of knowledge. Knowledge began to increase as soon as the thoughts of one individual could be communicated to another by means of speech. With the invention of writing, a great advance was made, for knowledge could then be not only communicated but also stored. Libraries made education possible, and education in its turn added to libraries: the growth of knowledge was made faster by the invention of printing. All these were comparatively slow until, with the coming of science, the speed was suddenly raised. Then knowledge began to be accumulated according to a systematic plan. The stream became a river; the river has now become the sea. Moreover, as soon as new knowledge is acquired, it is now turned to practical use. What is called "modern civilization" is not the result of a balanced development of all man's nature, but of accumulated knowledge used to practical life. The problem now facing humanity is: What is going to be done with all this knowledge? As is so often pointed out, knowledge is a two-edged weapon which can be used equally for good or evil(邪恶). It is now being used for both. For instance, while some people are using science to kill men's bodies, surgeons use it to save lives. We have to ask ourselves very seriously what will happen if this double uses of knowledge, with its ever-increasing power, continue.

16. In the second sentence, "progress of a particular kind..." here refers to progress in _____.

- A) the improvement of intelligence      B) the improvement of morality
C) the accumulation of knowledge      D) none of the above

17. Knowledge progress becomes _____ now.

- A) faster than ever    B) slower and slower    C) possible      D) impossible

18. Knowledge increases by means of _____.

- A) speech      B) writing      C) science      D) A), B) and C)

19. The sentence "The stream became a river; the river has now become the sea." means _____.

- A) you can use knowledge to explain how the stream became a river and how the river has become the sea
B) knowledge increases more and more
C) streams will become seas at last
D) knowledge can spread as water

20. Practical use of knowledge results in _____.

- A) development of man's nature      B) modern civilization
C) men's death      D) saving of lives
