前言

编写总则

在信息时代,英语写作作为一种交际行为,其重要性是毋庸置疑的。本教材的编者在长期的教学实践中发现,学生的写作兴趣、教材的选择、教学方法的运用、教学活动的设计、学生在教学活动中的主动性等因素均在不同程度上影响着写作能力的提高。为此,在教材的编写设计方面,作者希望达到以下目标:

1. 教材内容符合高等院校英语写作教学的要求,同时有助于包括成教、自考、专升本等多种教育类型中英语专业学生英语写作基础能力的培养和训练。
2. 教材涵盖措辞、句、段、章的基本概念和展开技巧,有助于学生系统地提高英语写作的能力。
3. 各单元内容由浅及深,层层推进,方便学生理解掌握与实践运用。
4. 教材行文语言难度符合学生的认知水平,体例样式生动耐读,有助于激发学生的写作兴趣。
5. 教材的范文及相关练习努力做到贴近大学生的校园生活和他们关心的话题,具有时代气息;难度适中,通俗易懂,易于仿写;语言材料的输入和输出相结合,自主学习与合作学习相结合;有助于启发学生思考,增强其逻辑思辨能力;有助于互动与反馈,便于学生之间进行沟通交流。

各单元主要板块内容的设计

1. 学习焦点导入(Lead-in):通过互动式学习等生动的交际方式,引入各单元的学习重点,通过解决问题来激发学生深入学习的兴趣。
2. 范例学习(Sample Writing):通过数目不等的范文,帮助学生打开思维,增加知识及语言输入。范文配有精当的注释,文后附有拓展思维的讨论题,以帮助学生强化对各单元学习焦点的认识。
3. 写作技巧(Writing Techniques):在范例学习的基础上,对各单元涉及的具体写作技巧进行概括和总结,从理论上加强对学生写作实践的指导。
4. 课堂活动(In-class Activities):把写作过程分解成具体的多个环节,分阶段进行实践和训练,通过构思、整理提纲、写作、修改、改写等各个环节的练习,帮助学生逐点、逐步解决写作中各个侧面、各种类型的难题。通过真实的语境和交际需要,借助脚手架式的、灵活多样的写作活动,方便学生实践并掌握写作技巧部分论及的具体的英语写作能力和技巧。

5. 课后练习 (After-class Activities): 对课堂活动进行深度和广度两个维度上的拓展, 通过各种类型的写作任务, 加强学生独立从事英语写作进而达到交际目标的能力。

编者希望通过这本教材向学生传递这样一个信息: 英语写作是一个生动有趣的过程, 也是一个传达思想、实现创新的重要手段。

配套《练习参考答案》

出于方便教与学的考虑, 本教材的配套图书《英语写作进阶练习参考答案》提供所有范文讨论题以及课堂活动和课后练习的参考答案, 供教师与学生参考、使用。

致谢

本教材编写受四川外国语大学教材建设基金资助。在编写过程中, 编者参考了大量的国内外文献, 并以注释的形式对所引用的文献出处进行了说明。少数引用文字已在教学中使用多年, 作者虽已努力, 但仍无法追溯其来源, 作者为此特向其原作者致歉, 同时致以深深的敬意。美籍教师Timothy G. Hoffman校阅了全书的文稿, 特此致谢。

Unit 1

Diction

UNIT OBJECTIVES

At the end of the unit you will

1. be familiar with a basic knowledge of diction in English writing;
2. be able to classify the levels of English words from a stylistic point of view;
3. be familiar with the meaning of a word from two aspects: denotative and connotative; and
4. be able to distinguish general words from specific words.

Writing is a way to reach out to the world. When you write, you write to explore your ideas and feelings through words. A good choice of words can best allow you to communicate your thoughts to the readers. The difficulty in word choice is caused partially by the vast number of available English words, but even a large vocabulary stock can not guarantee your proper use of words in the writing. What you should do is to learn to use words that are most useful and most often used in communication.

To communicate your ideas precisely and effectively, you should choose the right words that are exact, fresh, vivid, and appropriate. A good choice of word is always made with reference to a particular sentence. A word that is perfectly appropriate to be used in a certain place may not be exact or appropriate in another place. It is the situation or context that helps to show a reader what you intend to express. To understand this distinction, you should study the basic knowledge of diction.

PART I LEVELS OF WORDS

Directions

Work in pairs to match words or phrases which express the same ideas in the following sentences, and then answer the questions that follow.

- 1a. The relationship between television and cinema grew increasingly symbiotic in the 1980s as television companies invested heavily in feature film making.
- 1b. TV and the movies got more and more dependent on each other in the 1980s as TV companies put a lot of money into making movies.
- 2a. The relative disadvantage of women with regard to their earnings and levels of asset ownership indicates that within classes there is extensive economic inequity based on gender.
- 2b. Women earn less than men and own less than men. Why is this so?

Questions:

1. Can you sense a shift in the underlined words in the above sentences? What is the shift?
2. How do the words that writers choose to express their ideas affect the text?

Sentences 1a and 1b, Sentences 2a and 2b say the same thing respectively but differ widely in the degree of formality. One of the reasons for the difference in formality between the sentences is the “words” the writer has chosen to express his point of view. The wording of the informal text is much more colloquial and conversational while the formal text creates a more academic tone by using a formal and specialized language. Informal language can make your academic content sound anecdotal and impressionistic. Therefore, formal language is often used in research, analysis and critical thinking.

Considering the stylistic difference, English words may be divided into four types: formal words, standard words, colloquial words and slang.

Formal words are also called learned words, advanced words or literary words. These words are more widely used by educated rather than by uneducated people, and are more likely to be used on formal occasions instead of informal occasions. They are, for the most part, used in written language and generally confined to the realm of serious textbooks, academic or technical works, and most essays written at university settings. For example, you would use formal words when you write a letter of application for a job.

Formal words tend to be impersonal and precise, and more specialized and complex than those employed in everyday speech.

Directions

Sample reading

The inequity in the distribution of wealth in Australia is yet another indicator of Australia's lack of egalitarianism. In 1995, 20% of the Australian population owned 72.2% of Australia's wealth with the top 50% owning 92.1%. Such a significant skew in the distribution of wealth indicates that, at least in terms of economics, there is an established class system in Australia. McGregor (1988) argues that Australian society can be categorized into three levels: the Upper, Middle and Working classes.

Work in pairs and discuss the following questions.

1. What is your general impression of the sample paragraph, formal or informal? Why?
2. What are the formal words in the sample paragraph? What effects do they have on writing?
3. What do you think of the other words?

The sentences in this paragraph are all long and carefully constructed. They contain several formal words, and specific sociological and social science terminology. One must, however, beware of excess. Formal writing can easily become incomprehensible because it is too convoluted or wordy.

Most of the words in the sample paragraph, however, are standard words which are commonly used every day and in all kinds of writing. They are familiar to the widest group of educated speakers and writers.

Directions

Work in pairs and fill in the blanks the standard word counterparts of the words listed.

awfully _____	mad _____	over with _____
kind of _____	sure _____	get it _____
movie _____	math _____	exam _____

The standard word counterparts of the words listed above are: awfully — very, mad — enthusiastic, over with — finished, kind of — slightly, sure — certainly, get it — understand, movie — cinema, math — mathematics, exam — examination.

Colloquial or informal words include words and expressions that are used in everyday spoken language and other informal situations. They are the kinds of words that people, educated or uneducated alike, use when they are talking together informally. Those words are considered to be characteristic of or only appropriate for casual, ordinary, familiar, or informal conversation rather than formal speech or writing. For example, many good writers use colloquial words for humor or for an informal and relaxed tone.

Slang are highly informal words and expressions that are not considered standard in the speaker's language. They are more often met in speech than in writing, though writers of fiction often use slang expressions to mould or establish a character. To split is the slang counterpart of the more standard word to leave. Slang words may be vivid, cheerful, and interesting. However, they may, when used inappropriately, make the writer or speaker sound offensive or funny. For example,

On hearing that his grandmother had kicked the bucket, we wrote him a letter to express our deep sympathies.

The sentence does not sound sympathetic because the slang expression kick the bucket might lower the dignity of formal or serious speech or writing. As slang often does not last long enough to have a clear and established meaning, it is not encouraged in college writing.

PART II THE MEANING OF WORDS

Directions

Read the following sentences and work in pairs to distinguish the italicized parts.

1. There are over 2,000 vagrants in the city.
2. There are over 2,000 people with no fixed address in the city.
3. There are over 2,000 homeless in the city.

All three of these expressions refer to exactly the same people, but they will invoke different associations in the reader's mind: A vagrant is a public nuisance while a homeless person is a worthy object of pity and charity. Presumably, someone writing an editorial in support of a new shelter would use the positive form, while someone writing an editorial in support of anti-loitering laws would use the negative form.

The difference of the above words indicates the two aspects of the meaning of a word: denotative and connotative. Denotation refers to the "literal," "obvious" or "commonsense" meaning of a word, the "dictionary definition." Words with similar denotations, however, may differ in connotation which refers to the associations or the emotional suggestions related to that word. The words maxim, epigram, proverb, saw, saying, and motto, for instance, all have roughly the same denotation. Because of their different connotations, however, proverb would be the appropriate word to use in reference to a saying from the Bible; saw in reference to the kind of wisdom handed down anonymously; epigram in reference to a witty statement.

Connotative associations or suggestions may be good or bad, and thus a word may have a positive connotation or a negative connotation. Denotations are generally neutral, whereas connotations may reflect feelings, attitudes and emotional overtones, and vary widely. Understanding the difference between denotation and connotation is important to understand definitions and how concepts are used.

For example, famous meaning “well-known” or “widely recognized” has a positive connotation, whereas notorious and infamous which have the same denotation as famous have quite negative connotation of “being known widely and usually unfavorably.” Here, the word choice is not between denotations and connotations but between favorable and unfavorable connotations: famous conveys an approving attitude while notorious and infamous stand on the opposite side.

PART III GENERAL AND SPECIFIC WORDS

Directions

The following are general words. Work in pairs to give as many specific words as possible to each of them.

a good man:

clothing:

kitchen utensil:

flower:

It is easy to recognize the difference between general and specific words by looking at the exercise above. The general words name classes or groups; specific words name individual objects, or qualities that compose the group. Specific words are more concrete and informative than the general ones, and make the reader see, hear, or feel what the writer wishes to express.

Effective writing requires both general and specific words, but broadly speaking, specific words make a piece of writing more exact, vivid, colorful, and impressive to the reader. Study the following samples:

General John has a good sense of humor.

Specific John loves to tell funny stories about his childhood and to play practical jokes on his friends.

General The math test was easy.

Specific The math test had only fifteen true-false questions, and all of the answers came from the first five pages of the book.

General In spring, the weather in Beijing can be very nasty.

Specific In spring, the wind may blow all day long. The air is then filled with fine dust which sometimes shuts out the sun. There is no escape from the fine dust. It gets into your eyes, your ears, your nostrils, and your hair, and penetrates through closed windows.
