Things that concern us personally, the nation or the whole world, all have their rhyme and reason, just as a vehicle, regardless whether it is a train, car or bicycle, each leave a path in their wake. Tracing those paths or discussing those reasons are both perfectly everyday things to do, but perhaps these humble words can fulfill a greater purpose. The Left Hand is not really a left hand, but a man with a wide range of experiences, including living as a student and keeping all human interactions conducted in an orderly manner. Being an official, doing my job, just a matter of weathering the storm. Appreciating the trials and tribulations of life, including the everyday affairs of the home, all of which contribute to the creation of these heartfelt words, wherein lie the traces of my soul ...

Prologue by Left Hand

Having drawn "Suicide Rabbit" and twelve other personal creations, with works published by the Washington Post, featured on Phoenix Television and by one hundred other media companies; further having edited the work of Taiwanese comic artists Cai Zhizhong, Jimmy, Zhu Deyong and over one hundred other comic publications, I have also been honoured with a prize for publishing by the government. With two strings to my bow, I remain dedicated to the career of a native Chinese illustrator. Having been presented with these quotations and been greatly inspired by them, I happily draw the life of mankind...

Reflections on Life

There is no rehearsal for life.
Everyday is a live broadcast.

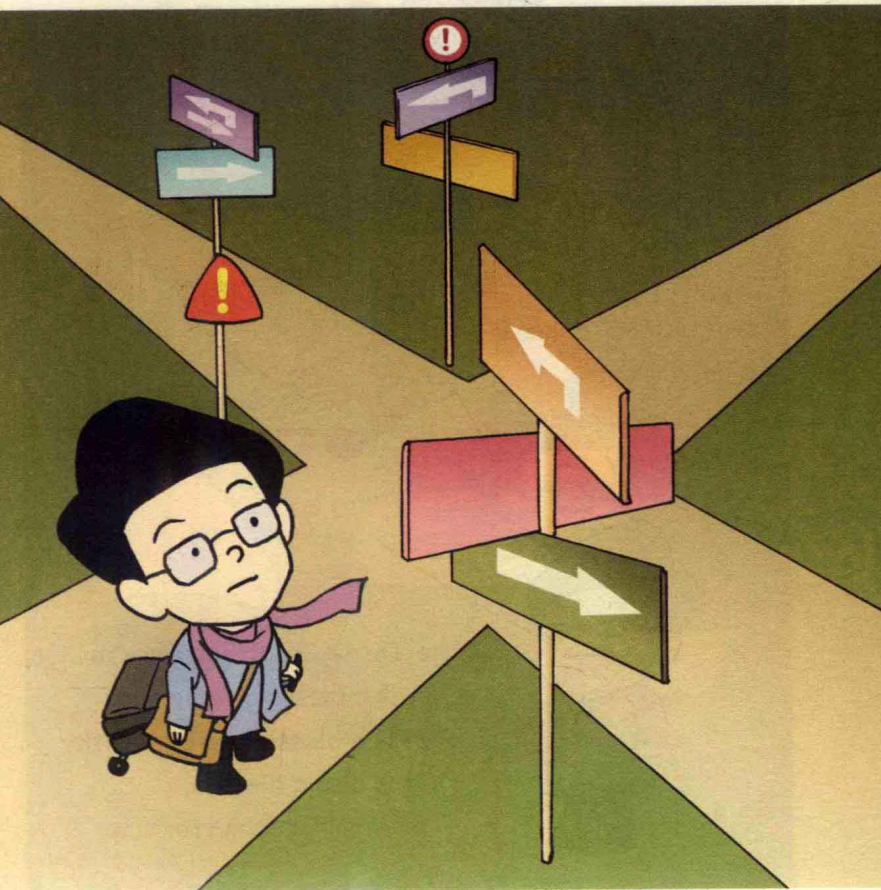

A meaningful life is not the one where you are dealt a good hand, but where you play a bad hand well.

Fun and games are a necessary part of life,
not the way of life.

Although the path of life is long,
the important stages are often only a matter of a few steps.

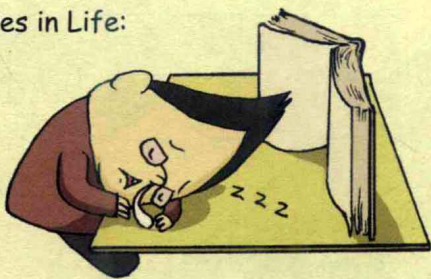

The Three Great Regrets in Life:

- 1) Not having a choice
- 2) Not knowing how to choose
- 3) Constantly making choices

The Three Great Tragedies in Life:

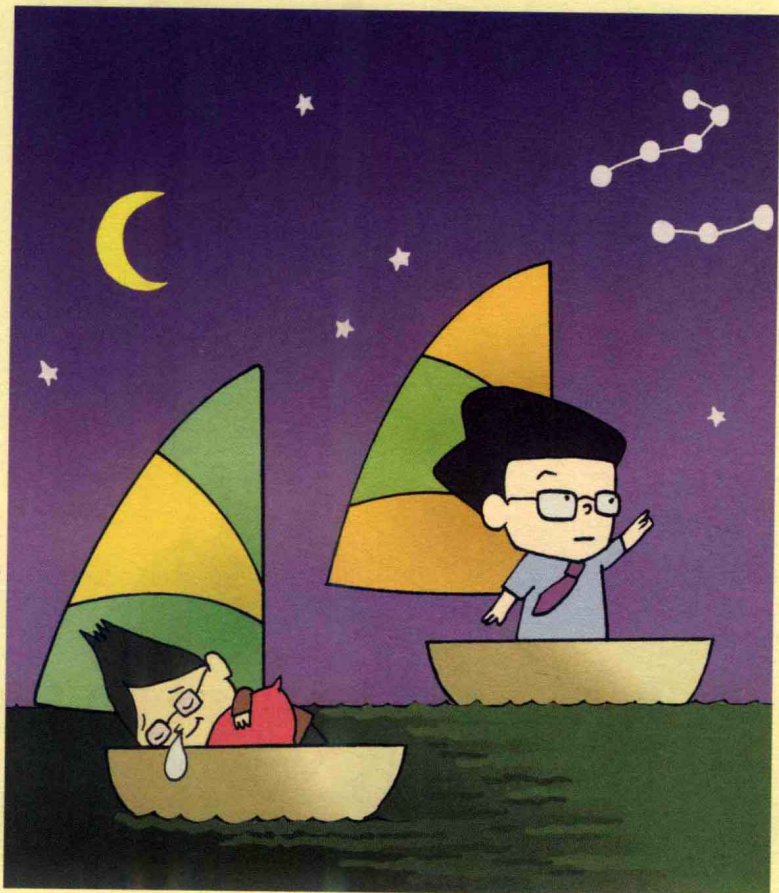

- 1) Not learning from a good teacher
- 2) Not getting to know a good friend
- 3) Not seizing a good opportunity

The Three Great Blessings in Life:

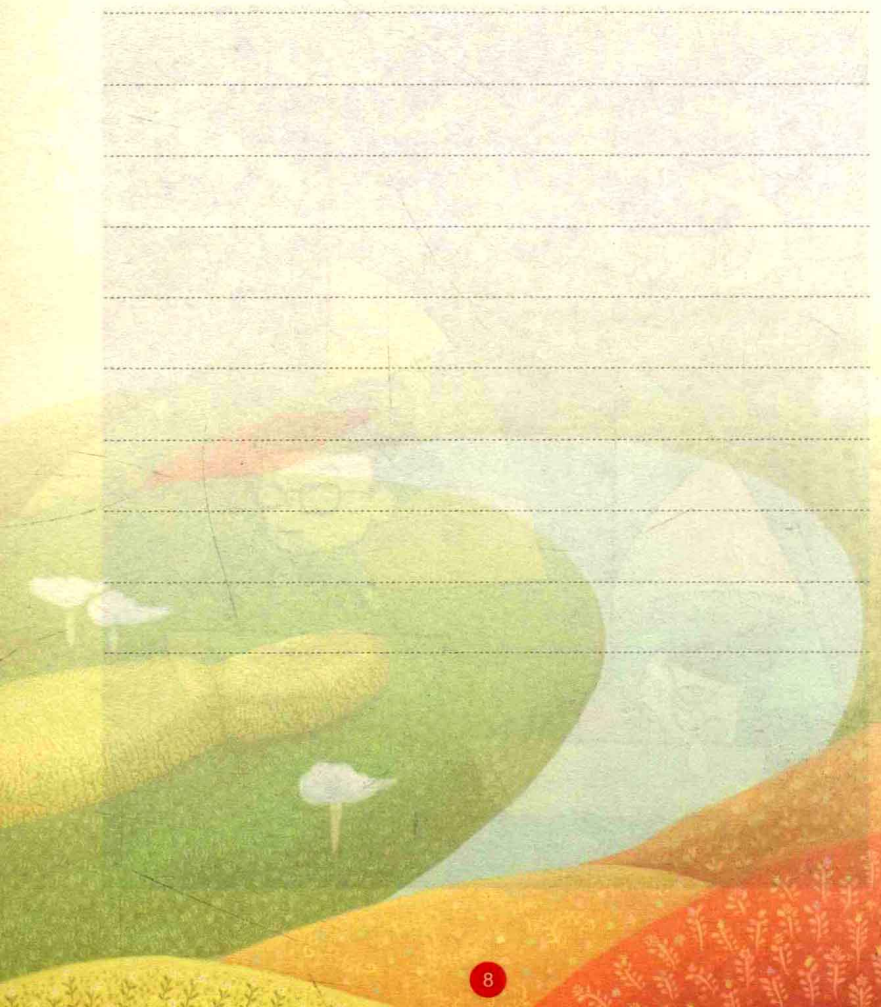

- 1) It is a blessing to be safe
- 2) It is a blessing to be healthy
- 3) It is also a blessing to experience misfortune

There are no fair winds for those who have set no course in life.

Space for Thoughts

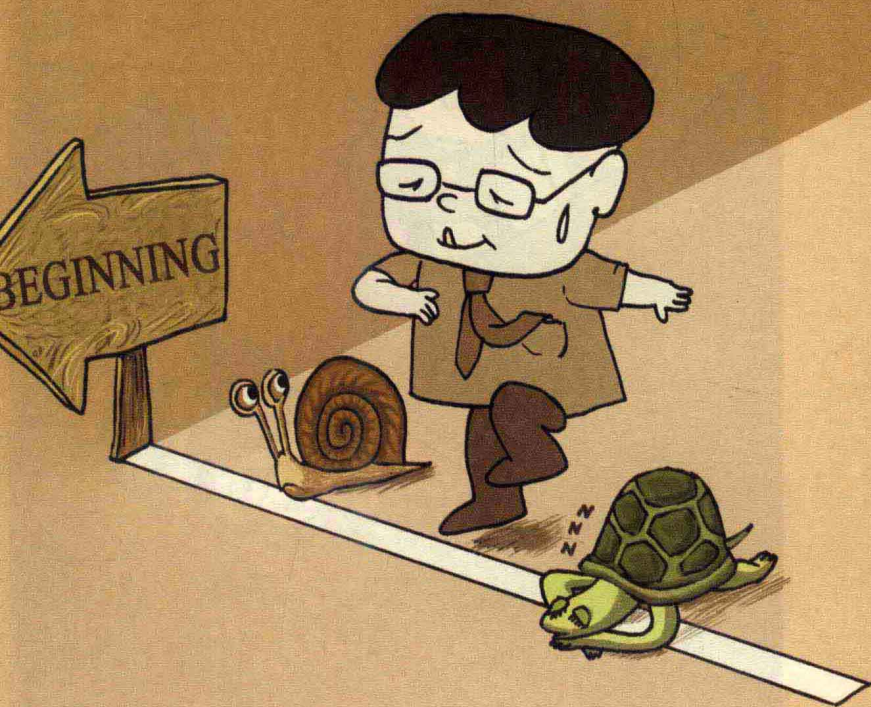

Busy yourself with chasing your dreams,
by all means,
but do not allow yourself to become so busy that you forget to dream.

Life is a lot like breathing:
with every breath we let out,
we let go of our worries and with every breath we take in, we prepare to take on something new.

The only kind of person who never takes a wrong turn is someone who is walking on the spot.

Is there no path that is easy to take?
Yes, there is, but it is the path downhill.
