

Sixth Edition

PERSONALITY

Theory and Research

LAWRENCE A. PERVIN

Sixth Edition

PERSONALITY

Theory and Research

Lawrence A. Pervin

Rutgers, The State University

JOHN WILEY & SONS, INC.

New York

Chichester

Brisbane

Toronto

Singapore

Cover Photo: P.R. Productions/Superstock

Acquisitions Editor	Karen Dubno
Marketing Manager	Carolyn Henderson
Production Supervisor	Elizabeth Austin
Designer	Laura Nicholls
Manufacturing Manager	Andrea Price
Copy Editing Supervisor	Marjorie Shustak
Photo Editor	Jennifer Atkins
Photo Research Director	Stella Kupferberg
Illustration	Jaime Perea

This book was set in 10/12 pt Aster by TCSYSTEMS, Inc. and printed and bound by R.R. Donnelley & Sons. The cover was printed by Lehigh Press.

Recognizing the importance of preserving what has been written, it is a policy of John Wiley & Sons, Inc. to have books of enduring value published in the United States printed on acid-free paper, and we exert our best efforts to that end.

Copyright © 1970, 1975, 1980, 1984, 1989, 1993, by John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

All rights reserved. Published simultaneously in Canada.

Reproduction or translation of any part of this work beyond that permitted by Sections 107 and 108 of the 1976 United States Copyright Act without the permission of the copyright owner is unlawful. Requests for permission or further information should be addressed to the Permissions Department, John Wiley & Sons.

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data:

Pervin, Lawrence A.

Personality : theory and research / Lawrence A. Pervin.—6th ed.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 0-471-57170-9

1. Personality. I. Title.

BF698.P375 1993

155.2—dc20

92-21052

CIP

Printed in the United States of America

10 9 8 7 6 5 4

Printed and bound by R.R. Donnelley & Sons, Inc.

PREFACE

Personality, in individuals and in the field of psychology that studies it, is always in a state of evolution. The sixth edition of Personality: Theory and Research continues my long-standing attempt to capture this dynamic aspect of people and the field and to present it to students effectively. The current edition retains the four major goals of earlier editions:

1. Presentation of the major theories of personality current in the field. My intent is to give in-depth coverage to the major theoretical approaches rather than to cover many theories in a more superficial manner.
2. Integration of theory with research. My intent here is to demonstrate the linkage between personality theory and personality research; that is, to show how developments in one can, and should, be part and parcel of developments in the other.
3. Integration of case material with theory. Here my intent is to provide a case illustration of each theory and then to show how the various theories relate to the same person. The question asked and examined in the text is: Are the pictures of a person gained through the lens of each theory of personality totally different from one another, or are they expressive of different angles of the same person?
4. Objective, unbiased treatment of each theoretical approach. My effort always has been to understand each theory on its own terms and then to evaluate it in relation to standard criteria. Thus, discussion of each major theory is followed by an analysis of the strengths and limitations of that approach. Rather than persuade the student of the value of one theory over all others, I attempt to present an accurate statement of each and have the student come to his or her own conclusion.

Each new edition of Personality: Theory and Research provides me with an opportunity to capture new theories of personality and new approaches to the study of personality while retaining the important contributions made by earlier approaches. Preparing the revision is a personal learning experience, in the sense of determining major developments in the field that should be presented in the new edition and in determining new ways to present the material in order to enrich the student's own learning experience.

The sixth edition of Personality: Theory and Research retains coverage of the contributions made by theories covered in previous editions of the text. It also presents developments on the cutting edge, which lie in two particular areas. First, a consensus appears to be emerging among trait theorists concerning the fundamental units of personality. Important developments also are occurring in relation to the inherited aspects of personality traits and the possible biological and evolutionary bases of these traits. These new developments are presented in Chapters 9 and 10. Second, important developments are occurring in the closely related social cognitive and information-processing approaches to personality. These approaches have always been strong in their focus on systematic research, but recently the scope of research has broadened to consider important aspects of human emotion and motivation. These developments are discussed in Chapters 12 to 14.

Pedagogical changes in the sixth edition make the material more available to the student. The study of a single case from the standpoint of the various theories has always been a part of the text. In the past, this case—the Case of Jim—was presented at the end of the text. In this edition, the relevant portions of the case are presented in association with each theory so that the student can trace the development of an emerging picture of the whole individual. Also, the Current Applications boxes, which illustrate the relevance of emphasized concepts to issues we face in our daily lives and draw the connections between theory and application, have been retained and updated. In addition, illustrations from daily life and tables summarizing the theories give increased emphasis to the major concepts and theoretical points of each approach. Improved readability, additional subheadings to clarify chapter coverage, a glossary at the end of each chapter, and outlined chapter reviews serve to enhance student comprehension.

It is my hope that in reading the sixth edition of Personality: Theory and Research, students will gain an appreciation of three things: (1) the mystery of human personality and the efforts of psychologists to unravel this mystery; (2) the contributions that come from clinical case studies and from systematic research; and (3) the contributions of alternative approaches to the field. I also hope that students will both discover a particular theory of personality that makes personal sense to them and gain respect for the insights offered by alternative approaches.

The instructor's resource guide for Personality: Theories and Research is a full teaching resource for the instructor. It includes (1) suggested lecture topics and resource materials; (2) instructional aids; (3) questions for thought and discussion; and (4) multiple-choice and true-false test items.

INSTRUCTOR'S RESOURCE GUIDE

Suggested lecture topics in each chapter either expand upon the material presented in the text or bring in new material directly related to the text. In following this format, the lectures remain integrated with the text without duplicating it. In most cases, the suggestions include a brief description of the content that might be included in the lecture and a number of references (bibliography included at the end of the manual) that can be reviewed for discussion of the issue under consideration.

The instructional aids include films, tapes, and demonstrations that can be presented in conjunction with the texts and lectures. For the films and tapes there is a brief description of the content, a listing of the distributor, and, in most cases, price information. Distributors' addresses are given at the end of the manual.

The questions for thought and discussion include items designed to challenge the student to make use of what has been learned and to think critically about its implications for further inquiry. The questions require the student to build on and go beyond the information presented. They may serve as a basis for lecture material, as a foundation for large or small group discussions, or for essay test questions.

Finally, the test items provide a testing resource to check on the progress being made by students. The number of items is greatly expanded and improved over the fifth edition, and the items are also available to instructors on disk in both IBM and Macintosh versions.

In my efforts to present a comprehensive, scholarly, and interesting textbook I have been assisted by many people. Students in my classes have been a constant source of stimulation and useful feedback. In terms of recent developments in trait theory, I am particularly appreciative of the comments of Robert R. McCrae and Lewis Goldberg. The helpful reviews and suggestions for revision of the following professors are gratefully acknowledged:

ACKNOWLEDG-MENTS

John B. Campbell, Franklin & Marshall College
Scott J. Dickman, University of Massachusetts–Dartmouth
Norman Endler, York University
Carol E. Franz, Boston University
Kirby Gilliland, the University of Oklahoma
Michael L. Hirt, Kent State University

Jeffrey Holm, University of North Dakota
James J. Johnson, Illinois State University
Sharon Lamb, Bryn Mawr College
Christopher A. Langston, Purdue University
Kevin Lanning, Oregon State University
Alice Lacata, University of Virginia
Sam McFarland, Western Kentucky University
Diana C. Rudolph, West Texas State University
Gregory T. Smith, University of Kentucky
Teddy D. Warner, Iowa State University

Finally, I am especially grateful for the efforts of the staff at Wiley who contributed their skills and talents to the sixth edition, in particular editors Deborah Moore and Karen Dubno.

Lawrence A. Pervin
Rutgers, the State University

CONTENTS

CHAPTER 1

PERSONALITY THEORY: FROM EVERYDAY OBSERVATIONS TO SYSTEMATIC THEORIES	1
DEFINING PERSONALITY	2
PERSONALITY THEORY AS AN ANSWER TO THE QUESTIONS OF WHAT, HOW, AND WHY	3
Structure	4
Process	5
Growth and Development	7
Environmental Determinants	7
Culture	7
Social Class	7
Family	8
Genetic Determinants	9
Psychopathology and Behavior Change	11
Summary	11
IMPORTANT ISSUES IN PERSONALITY THEORY	11
Philosophical View of the Person	12
Internal and External Determinants of Behavior	12
The Unity of Behavior and the Concept of the Self	13
Varying States of Awareness and the Concept of the Unconscious	15
Relationships Among Cognition, Affect, and Overt Behavior	16
The Influence of the Past, Present, and Future on Behavior	16
Summary	17
EVALUATION OF THEORIES	18
Comprehensiveness	18
Parsimony	18
Research Relevance	19
Summary	19
THEORY AND THE HISTORY OF SCIENTIFIC PROGRESS	19
Stages of Scientific Development	19
Developmental Stage	20
Normal Science: Paradigms	20

Scientific Revolutions	20
Summary	21
THEORY AND THE STUDY OF PERSONALITY		21
MAJOR CONCEPTS	22
REVIEW	22
CHAPTER 2
<hr/>
THE SCIENTIFIC STUDY OF PEOPLE	23
THREE GENERAL APPROACHES TO RESEARCH		24
Case Studies and Clinical Research	25
Laboratory Studies and Experimental Research	26
Personality Questionnaires and Correlational Research	27
RESEARCH ON STRESS AND HELPLESSNESS		28
Clinical Research	28
Reactions to Battle Stress	28
Responses to Illness	30
Summary	32
Laboratory, Experimental Research	32
Negative Effects of Stress	32
Learned Helplessness	33
Correlational Research and Questionnaires	37
Internal-External Locus of Control	37
Causal Attributions: Explanatory Style	39
Attributional Style Questionnaire (ASQ)	40
Explanatory Style	42
GOALS OF RESEARCH: RELIABILITY AND VALIDITY		44
Reliability	44
Validity	46
Sources of Error: Demand Characteristics and Experimenter Expectancy Effects	46
Summary	47
EVALUATING ALTERNATIVE RESEARCH TACTICS		47
Case Studies and Clinical Research: Strengths and Limitations		47
The Use of Verbal Reports	48
Laboratory, Experimental Research: Strengths and Limitations		50
Correlational Research and Questionnaires: Strengths and Limitations	51
Summary of Strengths and Limitations	52
THE ETHICS OF RESEARCH AND PUBLIC POLICY		53
THE DISCIPLINES OF SCIENTIFIC PSYCHOLOGY		54
PERSONALITY ASSESSMENT	55
Categories of Personality Tests	56
Personality Theory and Personality Assessment	57
The Case Of Jim	57
Autobiographical Sketch	58

MAJOR CONCEPTS	59
REVIEW	60

CHAPTER 3

A PSYCHODYNAMIC THEORY: FREUD'S PSYCHOANALYTIC THEORY OF PERSONALITY	63
SIGMUND FREUD (1856–1939): A VIEW OF THE THEORIST	65
FREUD'S VIEW OF THE PERSON AND SOCIETY	68
FREUD'S VIEW OF SCIENCE, THEORY, AND RESEARCH	70
PSYCHOANALYSIS: A THEORY OF PERSONALITY	71
Structure	71
Levels of Consciousness	72
Perception Without Awareness	73
Subliminal Psychodynamic Activation	76
How Important a Concept?	77
Id, Ego, and Superego	77
Process	83
Life and Death Instincts	83
The Dynamics of Functioning	83
Anxiety and the Mechanisms of Defense	84
Growth and Development	94
The Development of Thinking Processes	94
The Development of the Instincts	94
Stages of Development	95
Erikson's Psychosocial Stages of Development	99
The Importance of Early Experience	102
MAJOR CONCEPTS	109
REVIEW	111

CHAPTER 4

A PSYCHODYNAMIC THEORY: APPLICATIONS AND EVALUATION OF FREUD'S THEORY	113
CLINICAL APPLICATIONS	114
Assessment: Projective Techniques	114
The Rorschach Inkblot Test	115
The Thematic Apperception Test (TAT)	118
Illustrative Research Use and Evaluation	121
Psychopathology	123
Personality Types	124
The Oral Personality	124
The Anal Personality	125
The Phallic Character	126
Conflict and Defense	127

Behavior Change	129
Insights into the Unconscious: Free Association and Dream Interpretation	130
The Therapeutic Process: Transference		132
CASE EXAMPLE: LITTLE HANS	134
Description of the Problem	134
Events Leading Up to Development of the Phobia		134
Interpretation of the Symptom	135
The Solution to the Oedipal Conflict		137
Overall Evaluation	138
THE CASE OF JIM	138
Rorschach and TAT: Psychoanalytic Theory		138
Comments on the Data	142
Jim's Response to the Projective Tests		143
Projective Tests and Psychoanalytic Theory		143
RELATED POINTS OF VIEW AND RECENT DEVELOPMENTS	144
Two Early Challenges to Freud		144
Alfred Adler (1870–1937)	145
Carl G. Jung (1875–1961)	147
The Cultural and Interpersonal Emphasis		149
Karen Horney (1885–1952)	149
Harry Stack Sullivan (1892–1949)		152
Recent Developments Within Traditional Psychoanalytic Theory		154
Object Relations Theory	155
Narcissism and the Narcissistic Personality		155
Testing Psychoanalytic Concepts	156
CRITICAL EVALUATION	158
Major Contributions	158
Limitations of the Theory		159
Summary Evaluation	162
MAJOR CONCEPTS	163
REVIEW	163

CHAPTER 5

A PHENOMENOLOGICAL THEORY: CARL ROGERS' PERSON-CENTERED THEORY OF PERSONALITY	167
CARL R. ROGERS (1902–1987): A VIEW OF THE THEORIST	169
ROGERS' VIEW OF THE PERSON	172
ROGERS' VIEW OF SCIENCE, THEORY, AND RESEARCH	173
THE PERSONALITY THEORY OF CARL ROGERS	173
Structure	174
The Self	174

Measures of the Self-concept	174
The Q-Sort Technique	176
Adjective Checklist and Semantic Differential		178
Process	180
Self-actualization	180
Self-consistency and Congruence	182
States of Incongruence and Defensive Processes		183
Research on Self-consistency and Congruence		185
The Need for Positive Regard	186
Growth and Development	187
Self-actualization and Healthy Psychological Development		187
Research on Parent-child Relationships	188
MAJOR CONCEPTS	191
REVIEW	192

CHAPTER 6

A PHENOMENOLOGICAL THEORY: APPLICATIONS AND EVALUATION OF ROGERS' THEORY 195

CLINICAL APPLICATIONS	196
Psychopathology	197
Self-experience Discrepancy	197
Change	199
Therapeutic Conditions Necessary for Change	199
Outcomes of Client-centered Therapy	201
Summary of Distinguishing Characteristics	201
CASE EXAMPLE: MRS. OAK	202
Description of the Client and Problem	202
Description of the Therapy	202
Description of the Outcome	204
THE CASE OF JIM	204
Semantic Differential: Phenomenological Theory	204
Comments on the Data	206
RECENT DEVELOPMENTS	207
Rogers' Shift in Emphasis: From Individuals to Groups and Society	207
RELATED POINTS OF VIEW	207
The Human Potential Movement	207
Kurt Goldstein	208
Abraham H. Maslow	209
Existentialism	212
CRITICAL EVALUATION	213
Phenomenology	214
The Concept of Self	215
Conflict, Anxiety, and Defense	216
Psychopathology and Change	218
Summary Evaluation	218

MAJOR CONCEPTS	220
REVIEW	221

CHAPTER 7

A COGNITIVE THEORY OF PERSONALITY: GEORGE A. KELLY'S PERSONAL CONSTRUCT THEORY OF PERSONALITY	223
GEORGE A. KELLY (1905–1966): A VIEW OF THE THEORIST	225
KELLY'S VIEW OF THE PERSON	227
KELLY'S VIEW OF SCIENCE, THEORY, AND RESEARCH	228
THE PERSONALITY THEORY OF GEORGE A. KELLY	230
Structure	230
Types of Constructs	231
The Role Construct Repertory (Rep) Test	234
Cognitive Complexity–Simplicity	238
Process	240
Anticipating Events: Predicting the Future	241
Anxiety, Fear, and Threat	242
Summary of the Process View	244
Growth and Development	245
MAJOR CONCEPTS	247
REVIEW	248

CHAPTER 8

A COGNITIVE THEORY OF PERSONALITY: APPLICATIONS AND EVALUATION OF KELLY'S THEORY	251
CLINICAL APPLICATIONS	252
Psychopathology	252
Problems in the Construct System	252
Suicide and Hostility	255
Summary	255
Change	256
Conditions Favoring Change	256
Fixed-role Therapy	257
Illustrative Research	259
CASE EXAMPLE: RONALD BARRETT	260
Self-descriptive Sketch	260
Kelly's Construction	260
Fixed-role Therapy	261
THE CASE OF JIM	262
Rep Test: Personal Construct Theory	262
Comments on the Data	264

RELATED POINTS OF VIEW AND RECENT DEVELOPMENTS	265
CRITICAL EVALUATION	266
Strengths and Limitations of the Theory	266
Summary	268
COMPARISON WITH FREUD AND ROGERS	269
Kelly and Freud	269
Kelly and Rogers	270
Kelly, Freud, and Rogers	272
MAJOR CONCEPTS	273
REVIEW	274

CHAPTER 9

TRAIT APPROACHES TO PERSONALITY: ALLPORT, EYSENCK, AND CATTELL	275
THE TRAIT CONCEPT	276
THE TRAIT THEORY OF GORDON W. ALLPORT (1897–1967)	277
Kinds of Traits	279
Functional Autonomy	279
Idiographic Research	280
Comment on Allport	281
THE TRAIT-TYPE, FACTOR-ANALYTIC THEORY OF HANS J. EYSENCK (1916–)	281
Trait Measurement: Factor Analysis	281
Basic Dimensions of Personality	283
Questionnaire Measures	283
Research Findings	286
Biological Basis	287
Psychopathology and Behavior Change	288
Comment on Eysenck	289
THE TRAIT, FACTOR-ANALYTIC APPROACH OF RAYMOND B. CATTELL (1905–)	290
Cattell's View of Science	291
Cattell's Theory of Personality	293
Kinds of Traits	293
Sources of Data: L-data, Q-data, OT-data	294
Summary	298
Stability and Variability in Behavior	298
Comment on Cattell	300
TRAIT THEORY: ALLPORT, EYSENCK, AND CATTELL	301
MAJOR CONCEPTS	301
REVIEW	303

CHAPTER 10TRAIT THEORY: THE FIVE-FACTOR MODEL; APPLICATIONS
AND EVALUATION OF TRAIT THEORY 305*THE FIVE-FACTOR MODEL OF PERSONALITY 306*Analysis of Trait Terms in Ratings and Language 308

The Fundamental Lexical Hypothesis 308

The Big Five in Personality Questionnaires 309

Traits as Inherited Personality Characteristics 310An Evolutionary Perspective 312*Applications of the Model 315

Vocational Interests 315

Diagnosis of Personality Disorders 315

Treatment 316

Summary and Comment 316

CASE EXAMPLE: A 21-YEAR-OLD WOMAN 317THE CASE OF JIM 319*The 16 P.F. Questionnaire: Trait, Factor-Analytic Theory 319

Comments on the Data 321

The Stability of Personality: Jim 5 and 20 Years Later 322Five Years Later: Self-report of Life Experiences and Personality
Changes 322*Life Experiences* 322*Personality Changes* 324

Twenty Years Later 325

Five-Factor Model: Self-ratings and Ratings by Wife on the NEO-PI 326EVALUATION: THE PERSON-SITUATION*CONTROVERSY 328*Longitudinal Stability 328*Cross-situational Stability 329*Conclusion 330*OVERALL EVALUATION OF TRAIT THEORY 330*Strengths of the Theory 331

Active Research Effort 331

Interesting Hypotheses 331

Potential Ties to Biology 331

Limitations of the Theory 332

Problems with the Method: Factor Analysis 332

Problems with the Trait Concept 332

What Is Left Out or Neglected? 333

MAJOR CONCEPTS 335REVIEW 335

CHAPTER 11

BEHAVIORAL APPROACHES TO PERSONALITY	337
THE BEHAVIORAL VIEW OF THE PERSON AND SCIENCE	338
Watson's Behaviorism	340
PAVLOV'S THEORY OF CLASSICAL CONDITIONING	341
Principles of Classical Conditioning	342
Psychopathology and Change	344
Conditioned Emotional Reactions	344
The "Unconditioning" of Fear of a Rabbit	345
Additional Applications of Classical Conditioning	348
Systematic Desensitization	348
A Reinterpretation of the Case of Little Hans	351
Further Developments	352
SKINNER'S THEORY OF OPERANT CONDITIONING	353
A View of the Theorist	353
Skinner's Theory of Personality	356
Structure	356
Process: Operant Conditioning	357
Growth and Development	359
Psychopathology	359
Behavioral Assessment	361
ABA Research Design	362
Sign and Sample Approaches to Assessment	363
Behavior Change	364
STIMULUS-RESPONSE THEORY: HULL, DOLLARD, AND MILLER	365
A View of the Theorists	365
Clark L. Hull (1884-1952)	365
John Dollard (1900-1980) and Neal E. Miller (1909-)	366
The S-R Theory of Personality	368
Structure	368
Process	369
Growth and Development	370
Psychopathology	370
Types of Conflict	371
A COMPARISON OF BEHAVIORAL APPROACHES WITH EARLIER VIEWS	373
CRITICAL EVALUATION	373
Strengths of Behavioral Approaches	373
Limitations of Behavioral Approaches	375
MAJOR CONCEPTS	376
REVIEW	379

CHAPTER 12SOCIAL COGNITIVE THEORY: BANDURA
AND MISCHEL 383*A VIEW OF THE THEORISTS 385

Albert Bandura (1925–) 385

Walter Mischel (1930–) 386

VIEW OF THE PERSON 388VIEW OF SCIENCE, THEORY, AND RESEARCH 389*SOCIAL COGNITIVE THEORY OF PERSONALITY 389*Structure 389

Competencies—Skills 390

Goals 390

The Self and Self-efficacy Beliefs 390

Microanalytic Research Strategy 391

Process 391

Observational Learning 391

Acquisition vs. Performance 392*Vicarious Conditioning* 394

Goals, Standards, and Self-regulation 394

Self-efficacy and Performance 395

Summary of the View of Motivation 397

Growth and Development 398

Development of Aggressive Behavior 398

Learning Delay of Gratification Skills 400

MAJOR CONCEPTS 403REVIEW 404*CHAPTER 13*SOCIAL COGNITIVE THEORY: APPLICATIONS
AND EVALUATION 407*CLINICAL APPLICATIONS 408*Psychopathology 408

Dysfunctional Expectancies and Self-conceptions 408

Self-efficacy and Anxiety 409*Self-efficacy and Depression* 409*Self-efficacy and Health* 409Change 411

Modeling and Guided Participation 411

Relevant Research 412

CASE EXAMPLE: THE BOMBARDIER 416THE CASE OF JIM 419*Social Cognitive Theory: Goals, Reinforcers, and*Self-efficacy Beliefs 419

Goals 419