Acknowledgments

To our consultants who were generous in making available to us their specialized knowledge, we offer our grateful thanks. They are: Wolfgang Bernard Fleischmann, Dean of the School of Humanities and Professor of Comparative Literature, Montclair State College, Upper Montclair, New Jersey; Alex Preminger, Associate Professor, Brooklyn College, City University of New York, Brooklyn, New York; George J. Becker, former Chairman of the English Department, Swarthmore College, Swarthmore, Pennsylvania; James Robert Hewitt, Director of N.Y.U. in Paris, New York University, New York City; George R. McMurray, Professor of Foreign Languages, Colorado State University, Fort Collins, Colorado; Debra Popkin, Assistant Professor of French, Baruch College, City University of New York, New York City; Friedhelm Rickert, Assistant Professor of German, University of Denver, Denver, Colorado; Pabitra Sarkar, Visiting Instructor of Bengali, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, Minnesota; Martin Tucker, Professor of English, Long Island University, Brooklyn, New York; Leon M. Zolbrod, Professor of Japanese Literature, University of British Columbia, Vancouver, Canada.

We appreciate the cooperative spirit of our contributors who reconciled scholarly standards with the requirements of a reference work serving the general reader as well as the student of literature.

We also wish to acknowledge our indebtedness to the editorial staff for their dedicated participation in the preparation of this volume. To Paula Rumbaugh, for overall editorial assistance and for planning and supervising the comprehensive index to all four volumes, our particular thanks. Also deserving of special mention are Edith Friedlander, for coordinating editorial research, Muriel Paster, for secretarial and administrative assistance, and Olivia Kelly, for picture research.
