PREFACE

The contents of the present volume, like those of volume 47, come from many jurisdictions. That they appear at all in their present form is largely due to the efforts of Mr. P. J. Allott, Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. He will, during the period until the end of 1977, while I am acting as the Legal Adviser of the Department of Foreign Affairs in Canberra, bear the principal burden of editorial responsibility. Users of these volumes will, I pray, be tolerant of our solutions of the problems which result from an editorial process divided by the great distance which separates Mr. Allott from me and, perforce, me from my records.

We have thought it may be helpful to set out here, rather than in the terse form of the Table of Contributors which has appeared in the past, some indication of the sources of the decisions published in this volume.

Those of the International Court of Justice are taken, with permission, from its published Reports. The extensive summaries were prepared by the late Miss A. L. W. Munkman.

The decisions of the Court of Justice of the European Communities are sent to us, through the kindness of Mr. C. Dwyer, in an English text (translated, where English is not the language of the original judgment by the staff of the Registry of the Court). The selection of decisions appropriate for publication in these Reports has been made by Mr. Lawrence Collins, and he has also prepared the summaries.

The decisions of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation are sent to these Reports by the Registrar of that Court and are prepared for publication by Dr. Michael Akehurst.

The Austrian decisions have been communicated by Professor Ignaz Seidl-Hohenveldern and have been translated principally by Dr. G. Handl.

The Belgian cases have been culled from the Belgian reports in the Squire Law Library in Cambridge.

The large group of French cases were chosen and prepared for publication by the late Miss Munkman, who left behind her an impressive accumulation of work which is gradually being published.

The decisions of Commonwealth countries (British Guiana, Cyprus, Kenya, New Zealand, Tanzania and Uganda) are the product of searches in British libraries by Mr. A. D. Watts, a Legal Counsellor in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, who has long been most generous to these Reports.

The decisions from Israel have been selected and translated into English by Mr. P. Elman.

In expressing my deep gratitude to all those who have helped in the ways described above, I need hardly say how dependent these Reports are upon the continuing good-will and assistance of scholars and practitioners such as those mentioned above, for whom the knowledge that they are contributing to the science of international law must remain the principal reward.

The editorial work on the cases after they have been received from the contributors has been done largely by Mr. Allott and myself. Dr. G. M. White has—as on so many occasions in the past—participated in the publication stage by preparing so skilfully the Index as well as the Table of Treaties. For this I thank her warmly. Miss E. E. Jansen has compiled the other Tables. My secretary, Mrs. S. Rainbow, has worked valiantly in Cambridge to do all that is necessary there. I am most grateful to them.
