Notes on Contributors

J.N. Adams was Senior Research Fellow at All Souls College, Oxford, from 1998 to 2010. His numerous publications on Latin include The Regional Diversification of Latin 200 BC–AD 600 (2007), Bilingualism and the Latin Language (2003), Wackernagel's Law and the Placement of the Copula esse in Classical Latin (1994), The Latin Sexual Vocabulary (1982) and The Vulgar Latin of the Letters of Claudius Terentianus (1977). In 2009 he was awarded the Kenyon Medal for Classical Studies and Archaeology by the British Academy.

Philip Burton is Reader in Latin and Early Christian Studies at the University of Birmingham. His previous publications include The Old Latin Gospels (2000) and Language in the Confessions of Augustine (2007), as well as articles on Latin linguistics and on the reception of Classical Antiquity. He is currently working on an edition on the Old Latin traditions of John (www.iohannes.org) for the Vetus Latina series.

David Butterfield is the W.H.D. Rouse Research Fellow and Lector in Classics at Christ's College, Cambridge, and works primarily upon the textual criticism and transmission of Latin literature. He has co-edited The Penguin Latin Dictionary (London, 2007) and A.E. Housman: Classical Scholar (London, 2009), and has written various articles on Latin poets (particularly Lucretius) and the history of Classical scholarship.

Anna Chahoud is Professor of Latin at Trinity College Dublin. She is the author of C. Lucilii Reliquiarum Concordantiae (1998), of articles on Republican Latin and the grammatical tradition, and co-editor of Colloquial and Literary Latin (2010). She is currently finalising a commentary on the fragments of Lucilius for Cambridge University Press.

James Clackson is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Classics at the University of Cambridge. His books include The Blackwell History of the Latin Language (2007, with Geoff Horrocks), and Indo-European Linguistics: An Introduction (Cambridge, 2007). His research interests include historical and comparative linguistics, the sociolinguistics of the ancient world, and the Armenian language.

Greti Dinkova-Bruun is Associate Fellow at the Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies, Toronto. She has published widely on a range of topics within the field of Medieval Studies. A noted palaeographer, she is responsible for a number of critical editions and translations of medieval texts including the poetry of Alexander of Ashby, Alexandri Essebiensis Opera Poetica (2004) and The Ancestry of Jesus (2005). Since January 2010 she has been the Editor-in-Chief for the Catalogus Translationum et Commentariorum (CTC).

Rolando Ferri is Professor of Latin at the University of Pisa. He studied at Pisa, Princeton and London, where he was Momigliano Student in the Arts in the years 1993–1996. He has published books on Horace (I dispiaceri di un epicureo, 1993) and Senecan tragedy (Octavia attributed to Seneca, 2003), and he has edited books devoted to the Roman school (F. Bellandi and R. Ferri, ed., Aspetti della scuola nel mondo romano, 2008) and to Latin lexicography (R. Ferri, ed., The Latin of Roman Lexicography, 2010). He now works on the bilingual Greek–Latin glossaries and their value as evidence for the study of Late and Vulgar Latin.

Thorsten Fögen teaches Classics at Durham University and the Humboldt University of Berlin. Among his research interests are the history of linguistic ideas, ancient rhetoric, literary criticism, non-verbal communication and semiotics, ancient technical writers, women in antiquity, animals in antiquity and ancient epistolography. He is the author of “Patrii sermonis egestas”: Einstellungen lateinischer Autoren zu ihrer Muttersprache (2000), “Utraque lingua”: A Bibliography of Bi- and Multilingualism in Graeco-Roman Antiquity and in Modern Times (2003), and Wissen, Kommunikation und Selbstdarstellung. Zur Struktur und Charakteristik römischer Fachtexte der frühen Kaiserzeit (2009).

Benjamin W. Fortson IV teaches Classical languages and Indo-European philology at the University of Michigan. His publications include articles and reviews on Indo-European and historical linguistics, as well as an introductory textbook in Indo-European (Indo-European Language and Culture, 2nd edn, 2010) and a monograph on Plautine metrics and linguistics (Language and Rhythm in Plautus, 2008).

Michèle Fruyt is Professor of Latin Linguistics at the University of Paris-Sorbonne (Paris IV) and Director of the Centre Alfred Ernout for Latin linguistics. Her research mainly concerns the following: a description of the Latin lexicon from both a synchronic and a diachronic perspective, focusing on the way elements of the language were perceived by Latin speakers (motivation, de-motivation, re-analysis); semantic issues in the functioning of the language; the structural organization of the Latin lexicon; word-formation; the morpho-syntactic evolution of Latin, including grammaticalization, deixis and endophor, verbal periphrases, etc.

Giovambattista Galdi holds a PhD in Classical Philology from the University of Bologna (2002). He was scientific co-worker at the Thesaurus Linguae Latinae in Munich from 2001 to 2003 and wrote his Habilitation at the University of Trier from 2003 to 2007. Currently, he is Assistant Professor of Latin Language at the University of Cyprus (Nicosia). His main areas of interest lie in the field of Late and Vulgar Latin, epigraphic language and Greek–Latin bilingualism. He is the author of Grammatica delle iscrizioni latine dell'impero (province orientali). Morfo-sintassi nominale (2004) and of numerous articles on Latin language.

Bruce Gibson is Professor of Latin at the University of Liverpool. His principal research is concerned with the literature of the Roman Empire, with significant connections with various aspects of Roman history and culture. His work also engages with the transmission of Latin texts in manuscripts and with Renaissance scholarship. His publications include an edition and commentary of Statius, Silvae 5 (Oxford, 2006).

Hilla Halla-aho works as a researcher at the Department of World Cultures, University of Helsinki. Her main interests are the language of Latin non-literary texts as well as variation and change in Latin syntax. Her publications include the monograph The Non-Literary Latin Letters: A Study of Their Syntax and Pragmatics (2009).

Geoffrey Horrocks is Professor of Comparative Philology in the University of Cambridge. His publications include The Blackwell History of the Latin Language (2007, with James Clackson), and Greek: A History of the Language and Its Speakers (2nd edn, 2010). His research interests include the history and structure of the Greek and Latin languages (including Medieval and Modern as well as Ancient Greek), linguistic theory, and historical linguistics.

Christina Shuttleworth Kraus is Thomas A. Thacher Professor of Latin at Yale University. She works on Latin historiography, primarily on Livy and Tacitus, and is currently preparing a commentary (together with A.J. Woodman) on Tacitus' Agricola.

Caroline Kroon is Professor of Latin at the VU University Amsterdam. She is the author of Discourse Particles in Latin: A Study of nam, enim, autem, vero and at (1995), and co-editor of Theory and Description in Latin Linguistics (2002).

Her main research interests lie in the fields of pragmatics, discourse linguistics, and, especially, the linguistic articulation of narrative. She is currently supervising a linguistic-narratological research programme on ancient war narrative.

Matthew McCullagh teaches at St Paul's School in London. He received his doctorate in Classics from Cambridge University, and he has taught both at Cambridge University and at Royal Holloway, University of London. He is currently preparing a monograph on the prehistory of the Greek aorist passive.

Wolfgang de Melo teaches in the Department of Latin and Greek at the University of Ghent and is a Quondam Fellow of All Souls College, Oxford. His book The Early Latin Verb System: Archaic Forms in Plautus, Terence, and Beyond was published in 2007. His main scholarly interests are the linguistic aspects of Early Latin; the development from Indo-European to Latin, and from Early to Classical Latin; and the closest relatives of Latin (Faliscan, Oscan, Umbrian, Venetic).

Alex Mullen is Lumley Research Fellow in Classics at Magdalene College, University of Cambridge. She has published on linguistic and cultural contacts in Roman Britain and southern Gaul and is currently co-editing a multi-authored volume on multilingualism in antiquity.

John Penney is University Lecturer in Classical Philology at the University of Oxford and Fellow of Wolfson College, Oxford. His research interests include Indo-European phonology and morphology, the languages of pre-Roman Italy, and Tocharian. He has also published articles on historical aspects of the language of Latin verse and prose.

J.G.F. Powell is Professor of Latin at Royal Holloway, University of London. He has published editions of Cicero's Cato Maior de Senectute (Cambridge, 1988), of Laelius de Amicitia (Warminster, 1990), and of De Re Publica and De Legibus (Oxford Classical Text, 2006), has edited Cicero the Philosopher (Oxford, 1995), and Logos: Rational Argument in Classical Rhetoric (BICS Supplement 2007), and co-edited Author and Audience in Latin Literature (Cambridge, 1992), Cicero's Republic (BICS Supplement 2001) and Cicero the Advocate (Oxford, 2004). He is working on, among other things, a new Latin grammar for Wiley-Blackwell.

Bruno Rochette is Professor of Greek and Latin Language and Literature at the University of Liège, Belgium. He is the author of Le latin dans le monde grec. Recherches sur la diffusion de la langue et des lettres latines dans les provinces hellénophones de l'empire romain (1997) and of articles on various aspects of Greco-Latin bilingualism.

Rex Wallace is Professor of Classics and Associate Dean of Personnel and Research for the College of Humanities and Fine Arts at the University of Massachusetts Amherst. His research interests are the languages of ancient Italy and historical/comparative linguistics. He is the author of The Sabellic Languages of Ancient Italy (2007), Zikh Rasna: A Manual of Etruscan Language and Inscriptions (2009), and numerous articles on Etruscan and Italic linguistics.

Roger Wright is Emeritus Professor of Spanish at the University of Liverpool. He is the author of (inter alia) Late Latin and Early Romance in Spain and Carolingian France (1982), Early Ibero-Romance (1995), and A Sociophilological Study of Late Latin (2003). His research interests centre on both the linguistic and the historical aspects of the transitional period between Latin, Romance and the Romance languages.
