

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF
TWENTIETH-CENTURY FICTION

TWENTIETH-CENTURY AMERICAN FICTION

VOLUME II

General Editor
Brian W. Shaffer

Volume Editors
Patrick O'Donnell, David W. Madden, and Justus Nieland

The Encyclopedia of Twentieth-Century Fiction

General editor: Brian W. Shaffer

Volume II

Twentieth-Century
American Fiction

Volume editors:

Patrick O'Donnell, David W. Madden, and Justus Nieland

 WILEY-BLACKWELL

A John Wiley & Sons, Ltd., Publication

This edition first published 2011
© 2011 Blackwell Publishing Ltd

Blackwell Publishing was acquired by John Wiley & Sons in February 2007. Blackwell's publishing program has been merged with Wiley's global Scientific, Technical, and Medical business to form Wiley-Blackwell.

Registered Office

John Wiley & Sons Ltd, The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, United Kingdom

Editorial Offices

350 Main Street, Malden, MA 02148-5020, USA

9600 Garsington Road, Oxford, OX4 2DQ, UK

The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, UK

For details of our global editorial offices, for customer services, and for information about how to apply for permission to reuse the copyright material in this book please see our website at www.wiley.com/wiley-blackwell.

The right of Brian W. Shaffer, Patrick O'Donnell, David W. Madden, Justus Nieland, and John Clement Ball to be identified as the authors of the editorial material in this work has been asserted in accordance with the UK Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, except as permitted by the UK Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, without the prior permission of the publisher.

Wiley also publishes its books in a variety of electronic formats. Some content that appears in print may not be available in electronic books.

Designations used by companies to distinguish their products are often claimed as trademarks. All brand names and product names used in this book are trade names, service marks, trademarks or registered trademarks of their respective owners. The publisher is not associated with any product or vendor mentioned in this book. This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold on the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering professional services. If professional advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

The encyclopedia of twentieth-century fiction / general editor, Brian W. Shaffer.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-4051-9244-6 (hardcover : alk. paper)

1. English fiction--20th century--History and criticism--Encyclopedias. 2. American fiction--20th century--History and criticism--Encyclopedias. 3. Commonwealth fiction (English)--History and criticism--Encyclopedias. 4. Authors, English--20th century--Biography--Dictionaries. 5. Authors, American--20th century--Biography--Dictionaries. 6. Authors, Commonwealth--20th century--Biography--Dictionaries. I. Shaffer, Brian W., 1960-- II. O'Donnell, Patrick, 1948-- III. Ball, John Clement, 1960-- IV. Title: Encyclopedia of 20th-century fiction.

PR881.E48 2011

823'.910903--dc22

2010016469

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

Set in 9.5/11.5 Minion by Thomson Digital, Noida, India

Printed and bound in Singapore by Fabulous Printers Pte Ltd

Acknowledgments

Patrick O'Donnell thanks the Office of the Vice President for Research and Graduate Studies at Michigan State University for an IRPG grant, as well the MSU English Department chair, Stephen Arch, for a research-leave semester – both were instrumental in the completion of the volume. He thanks Diane O'Donnell for her love and patience throughout. David W. Madden thanks the California State University, Sacramento, Office of Human Resources for a single-semester sabbatical and the Office of Research and Sponsored Projects for a research grant that aided in the completion of this project.

He further thanks his chair, Professor Sheree Meyer, for her encouragement and support, and he dedicates his work on this project to his wife, Mary Davis, for all her love, help, and support. Justus Nieland thanks Sarah Wohlford, Lila Nieland, and Iris Nieland for the everyday joy they provide. All of the editors wish to acknowledge the inestimable generosity, good humor, and fine efforts of the contributors to this volume; it has been a pleasure to work with them.

Patrick O'Donnell, David W. Madden,
and Justus Nieland

Notes on Contributors to Volume II

Victoria Aarons is professor and chair, Department of English, Trinity University, where she teaches courses on American Jewish and Holocaust literatures. In addition to numerous scholarly articles and book chapters, Aarons is the author of A Measure of Memory: Storytelling and Identity in American Jewish Fiction and What Happened to Abraham? Reinventing the Covenant in American Jewish Fiction, both of which received a CHOICE Award. A scholar of Holocaust literature, Aarons is a contributor to Holocaust Literature: An Encyclopedia of Writers and Their Work. She is the 2006 recipient of the Piper Professor Award and the 1993 recipient of Trinity University's Z. T. Scott Faculty Fellowship.

Joseph Alkana is associate professor at the University of Miami, where he teaches American literature before 1900. He is the author of The Social Self: Hawthorne, Howells, William James, and Nineteenth-Century Psychology (1997); coeditor of Cohesion and Dissent in America (1994); and author of articles for scholarly journals on American literature and culture.

Carole Allamand is an associate professor of French literature at Rutgers University. She is the author of a book on Marguerite Yourcenar and numerous articles on twentieth- and twenty-first-century French and American fiction, and autobiography.

Thomas C. Austenfeld is professor of American literature at the University of Fribourg, Switzerland. He is the author of American Women Writers and the Nazis: Ethics and Politics in Boyle, Porter, Stafford, and Hellman (2001), and editor of Kay Boyle for the Twenty-First Century: New Essays (2008). He has published scholarly articles on Katherine Anne Porter, Frank Norris, Derek Walcott, Wallace Stevens, Louise Erdrich, Philip Roth, and Peter Taylor. He is a contributor to the annual American Literary Scholarship and was named Alumni Distinguished Professor at North Georgia College & State University in 2006.

Peter J. Bailey is Piskor Professor of English at St. Lawrence University in Canton, New York, where he chairs the English Department. He is the author of Reading Stanley Elkin, The Reluctant Film Art of Woody Allen, and Rabbit (Un)Redeemed: The Drama of Belief in John Updike's Fiction.

Alexander M. Bain is assistant professor of twentieth-century British and American literature at the University of Oklahoma. His articles have appeared in NOVEL and American Literary History, and he is currently working on a book entitled Making the Heart of the World: Patriotism and Print Culture from Versailles to Bandung.

Jessica S. Baldanzi teaches American literature, international literature, graphic novels, and creative writing at Goshen College, where she is an assistant professor. Her publications include articles on topics from Jean Toomer to The Sopranos. She is currently exploring the history of eugenics in Indiana, and working on a book about representations of eugenic ideology in the literature of the twentieth and twenty-first centuries.

Debra Romanick Baldwin is associate professor at the University of Dallas. While most of her research is devoted to the work of Joseph Conrad, she has also published essays on St. Augustine, Flannery O'Connor, and Primo Levi.

Laura Barrett is associate professor of English literature at Wilkes Honors College/Florida Atlantic University, Jupiter. Her essays on Don DeLillo, E. L. Doctorow, F. Scott Fitzgerald, Wright Morris, and others have appeared in Journal of Modern Literature, Modern Fiction Studies, Papers on Language and Literature, Studies in the Novel, and Western American Literature.

Victor Bascara is associate professor of Asian American studies in the Department of Asian American Studies at the University of California, Los Angeles. He is the author of Model Minority Imperialism (2006) and various articles, reviews, and entries on American cultural politics, US imperialism, critical race theory, and gender and sexuality.

Ludmiła Gruszeńska Blaim is an associate professor of English and American literature at the University of Gdansk, Poland. Her field of interest is space and genre conventions in modernist and postmodernist literature. She is author of Wizje i re-wizje w poezji T. S. Eliota (1996) and Gra w SS. Poetyka (nie)powiesci Jerzego Kosinskiego (2005), and coeditor of Texts of Literature, Texts of Culture (2005) and Eseje o współczesnej poezji brytyjskiej i irlandzkiej (2005).

Martyn Bone is associate professor of American literature at the University of Copenhagen, Denmark. He is the author of The Postsouthern Sense of Place in Contemporary Fiction (2005) and editor of Perspectives on Barry Hannah (2006). He has published articles in numerous journals including American Literature, Journal of American Studies, Comparative American Studies, and Mississippi Quarterly.

Virginia Brackett is associate professor of English at Park University, located just north of Kansas City. She has authored 13 books, including the award-winning Restless Genius: The Story of Virginia Woolf and the Facts on File Companion to 16th and 17th-Century British Poetry. She has published numerous articles, reviews, and stories for both adults and young readers and directs the Park University Ethnic Poetry Reading Series and the University's Honors Program. Brackett received Outstanding Faculty Awards in 2006 and 2008.

Patricia L. Bradley is an associate professor of English at Middle Tennessee State University. She is the author of Robert Penn Warren's Circus Aesthetic and the Southern Renaissance (2004) and other scholarly articles on Bobbie Ann Mason, Mark Twain, Nathaniel Ward, Nathaniel Hawthorne, and Kate Chopin as well as on Warren. She is the past president of the Robert Penn Warren Circle and has served on the Circle Board of Directors and with the Advisory Group to the Robert Penn Warren Center at Western Kentucky University.

Judith Brown is assistant professor of English at Indiana University, Bloomington. She is author of Glamour in 6 Dimensions: Modernism, Aesthetics, Culture (2009). Her articles include "A Certain Laughter: Sherwood Anderson's Experiment in Form" (2007); "Borderline, Sensation, and the Machinery of Expression" (2007); and "Cellophane Glamour" (2008).

Cedric Gael Bryant holds the Lee Family Professorship in English and American Literature at Colby College. His scholarly work has appeared in various academic journals and volumes, including Southern Review, African American Review, MELUS, Mississippi Quarterly, and The Oxford Companion to African American Literature. His current book project explores the gothic tradition within African American fiction and poetry in the modernist and postmodernist periods.

David Buehrer is a professor of English at Valdosta State University, Georgia, where he teaches courses in modern and contemporary American fiction, critical theory, and world literature. His review essay on Joseph Heller appeared in Contemporary Jewish-American Novelists: A Bio-Critical Sourcebook, edited by Joel Shatzky and Michael Taub (1997). He has published numerous articles and reviews on twentieth-century American and Latin American novelists, including Saul Bellow, Gabriel García Márquez, and Manuel Puig, and in scholarly journals such as Critique: Studies in Contemporary Fiction, Journal of Evolutionary Psychology, and WVU Philological Papers.

Nancy Bunge, a professor at Michigan State University, is the interviewer and editor of Finding the Words: Conversations With Writers Who Teach (1985) and Master Class: Lessons from Leading Writers (2005); the editor of Conversations With Clarence Major (2002); and the author of Nathaniel Hawthorne: A Study of the Short Fiction (1993). She has held senior Fulbright lectureships at the University of Vienna in Austria, the Free University of Brussels and the University of Ghent in Belgium, and the University of Siegen in Germany. At Michigan State, she has won the Teacher-Scholar Award and the Fintz Award for her teaching.

Stephen J. Burn is the author of David Foster Wallace's Infinite Jest: A Reader's Guide (2003) and Jonathan Franzen at the End of Postmodernism (2008), and coeditor of Intersections: Essays on Richard Powers (2008). He is an associate professor at Northern Michigan University.

Michael Butter is junior research fellow in the School of Language and Literature at the Freiburg Institute for Advanced Studies in Germany. He has published essays on American and German literature, film, and popular culture, and coedited Zeichen der Zeit, a collection of interdisciplinary essays on semiotics, and American Studies/Shifting Gears, a volume that probes new venues for European American studies.

Donna M. Campbell is associate professor of English at Washington State University. She is the author of Resisting Regionalism: Gender and Naturalism in American Fiction, 1885–1915 (1997), and her work has appeared in Studies in American Fiction, Legacy, American Literary Realism, and Studies in American Naturalism. In addition to the Edith Wharton chapter in Resisting Regionalism, her work on Wharton includes essays in Jack London: One Hundred Years a Writer (2002) and Twisted From the Ordinary: Essays on American Literary Naturalism (2003), and articles forthcoming in the Edith Wharton Review and the Journal of Popular Culture.

Benjamin D. Carson is an assistant professor of English and coordinator of the US Ethnic Studies Minor at Bridgewater State College, Bridgewater, Massachusetts. He has published articles on Gerald Vizenor, Ana Castillo, Virginia Woolf, and Edith Wharton, among other writers, and is currently editing a collection of essays on Native American literature entitled Sovereignty, Separatism, and Survivance: Ideological Encounters in the Literature of Native North America.

Daniela Caselli teaches English and American literature at the University of Manchester, UK. She is the author of Beckett's Dantes: Intertextuality in the Fiction and Criticism (2005) and Improper Modernism: Djuna Barnes's Bewildering Corpus (2009). Her articles on modernism, critical theory, and comparative literature have appeared in Textual Practice, Journal of Beckett Studies, Yearbook of English Studies, Critical Survey, Samuel Beckett Today/Aujourd'hui, The Italianist, and Strumenti Critici.

Tom Cerasulo is assistant professor of English and Shaughnessy Family Chair for the Study of the Humanities at Elms College in Chicopee, Massachusetts. He has published on film adaptations, on ethnicity, and on the cultural history of American authorship. Recent work appears in Arizona Quarterly, MELUS, and Studies in American Culture. He is currently writing a book reconsidering Hollywood's effect on American literary authors.

Hillary L. Chute is junior fellow in literature in the Harvard Society of Fellows. In addition to articles and reviews in American Periodicals, Literature and Medicine, Modern Fiction Studies, PMLA, Postmodern Culture, Twentieth-Century Literature, and WSQ: Women's Studies Quarterly, Chute was coeditor of the special issue of Modern Fiction Studies on "Graphic Narrative" (2006). She is the author of the forthcoming book Out of the Gutter: Women's Contemporary Graphic Narrative, and is associate editor of Art Spiegelman's MetaMaus.

Deborah Clarke is a professor of English at Arizona State University. She is the author of Driving Women: Fiction and Automobile Culture in Twentieth-Century America (2007); Robbing the Mother: Women in Faulkner (1994); and numerous articles on twentieth-century American fiction.

Gavin Cologne-Brookes is professor of American literature at Bath Spa University. He is the author of The Novels of William Styron: From Harmony to History (1995). As well as essays on John Steinbeck's legacy in the work of Joyce Carol Oates, Cormac McCarthy, and Bruce Springsteen, he has also written Dark Eyes on America: The Novels of Joyce Carol Oates (2005); coedited Writing and America (1996) with Neil Sammells and David Timms; and guest-edited a Studies in the Novel special issue on Oates (2006).

Lauren Coodley attended University of California, Berkeley, majoring in conservation, and has two master's degrees, in psychology and history, from Sonoma State University. She has been a community college teacher for three decades. Her books include Napa: The Transformation of an American Town (2004, rev. 2007); The Land of Orange Groves and Jails: Upton Sinclair's California (2004); California: A Multicultural Documentary History (2008); and If Not to History: Recovering the Stories of Women in Napa (2009).

David Coughlan is a lecturer in the Department of Languages and Cultural Studies, University of Limerick, Ireland. His publications include articles on Paul Auster in Modern Fiction Studies and on Thomas Pynchon in Critique, and essays in the edited collections The Visual-Narrative Matrix; Spaces and Crossings; Space, Haunting, Discourse; and Heroes and Home Fronts. He would like to acknowledge the support of the Irish Research Council for the Humanities and Social Sciences in the writing of his entry on Paul Auster.

Gloria Cronin teaches African American, Jewish American, women's, and twentieth-century American literatures, and contemporary theory, at Brigham Young University. She is editor of the Saul Bellow Journal and executive director of the International Saul Bellow Society. She is an executive coordinator of the American Literature Association, and has served on committees for the National Endowment for the Humanities. In 1991 her Sixty Other Jewish Fiction Writers (9,000 entries) won the Pozner Bibliography Prize awarded by the Jewish Library Association. She has published extensively in the fields of Jewish American and African American literatures. Her Encyclopedia of Jewish American Literature (with Alan L. Berger) is forthcoming from Facts on File. In 2007 she was named to the Brigham Young University College of Humanities professorship.

Kirk Curnutt is professor and chair of English at Troy University Montgomery in Montgomery, Alabama. He is the author of The Cambridge Companion to F. Scott Fitzgerald and managing editor of the Fitzgerald Review, published by the F. Scott Fitzgerald Society. He also serves as vice president of the Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald Museum, which is located in Montgomery.

Leland de la Durantaye is the Gardner Cowles Associate Professor of English at Harvard University. He is the author of Style Is Matter: The Moral Art of Vladimir Nabokov (2007), and Giorgio Agamben: A Critical Introduction (2009), as well as articles on twentieth-century literature and philosophy.

Annette Debo is associate professor of English at Western Carolina University. She is currently at work on The American H.D.: Nation and Modernist Identity. Her articles have appeared in African American Review, Callaloo, Paideuma, South Atlantic Quarterly, Quarterly Review of Film and Video, CLA Journal, and College Literature.

James M. Decker is an associate professor of English at Illinois Central College. He is author of Ideology (2003) and Henry Miller and Narrative Form: Constructing the Self, Rejecting Modernity (2005). In addition to contributing numerous articles to such publications as College Literature and Style, he is editor of Nexus: The International Henry Miller Journal. In 2007, Decker received his college's Gallion Award for outstanding teaching.

Joseph Dewey is an associate professor of American literature at the University of Pittsburgh–Johnston. In addition to numerous articles on modern and contemporary American literature and culture, he is author of In a Dark Time: The Apocalyptic Temper in the American Novel of the Nuclear Age (1992), Novels From Reagan's America (1996), Understanding Richard Powers (2002), and Beyond Grief and Nothing: A Reading of Don DeLillo (2007).

Tamas Dobozsy is a professor of twentieth-century American literature in the Department of English and Film Studies at Wilfrid Laurier University. He has published articles on Charles Bukowski, Mavis Gallant, Philip Roth, Raymond Carver, Richard Ford, and John Coltrane in journals such as Modern Fiction Studies, Canadian Literature, Philip Roth Studies, Critical Survey, and Genre.

Christopher Douglas is associate professor of English at the University of Victoria. He is the author of A Genealogy of Literary Multiculturalism (2009) and Reciting America: Culture and Cliché in Contemporary American Fiction (2001).

Leigh Anne Duck is an associate professor of English at the University of Memphis. She is author of The Nation's Region: Southern Modernism, Segregation, and U.S. Nationalism (2006), as well as essays on “postplantation” literature and film, the comparative study of Southern US and South African literature, and the work of William Faulkner, Zora Neale Hurston, and Alice Walker.

John Dudley is associate professor of English and coordinator of graduate studies for the English Department at the University of South Dakota. He is the author of A Man's Game: Masculinity and the Anti-Aesthetics of American Literary Naturalism, published in 2004 by the University of Alabama Press. He has published several articles on nineteenth- and twentieth-century American literature and is currently working on a study of African American literature and culture between 1890 and 1920.

John N. Duvall is professor of English and the editor of MFS Modern Fiction Studies at Purdue University. Among his books are Race and White Identity in Southern Fiction (2008), The Identifying Fictions of Toni Morrison (2000), and Faulkner's Marginal Couple: Invisible, Outlaw, and Unspeakable Communities (1990). He also has edited several collections, including The Cambridge Companion to Don DeLillo (2008) and Productive Postmodernism: Consuming Histories and Cultural Studies (2002).

Jonathan P. Eburne teaches in the Departments of Comparative Literature and English at the Pennsylvania State University, where he is Josephine Berry Weiss Early Career Professor in the Humanities. He is the author of Surrealism and the Art of Crime (2008).

Justin D. Edwards is professor and head of English at Bangor University. He is author of Postcolonial Literature (2008); Understanding Jamaica Kincaid (2007); Gothic Canada: Reading the Spectre of a National Literature (2005); Gothic Passages: Racial Ambiguity and the American Gothic (2003); and Exotic Journeys: Exploring the Erotics of U.S. Travel Literature (2001). He is also the coeditor of Other Routes: 1500 Years of Travel Writing by Asians and Africans (2006); Downtown Canada: Writing Canadian Cities (2005); and American Modernism Across the Arts (1999).

Julia Ehrhardt is Reach for Excellence Associate Professor of American Studies and Women's and Gender Studies at the University of Oklahoma Honors College. She is the author of Writers of Conviction: The Personal Politics of Zona Gale, Dorothy Canfield Fisher, Rose Wilder Lane, and Josephine Herbst (2004), and several articles on twentieth-century American women writers.

Nikolai Endres is an associate professor of world literature at Western Kentucky University in Bowling Green. He teaches great books, literary criticism, classics, mythology, and gay and lesbian studies. His research focuses on the classical tradition and includes articles on Plato, Petronius, Gustave Flaubert, Walter Pater, Oscar Wilde, John Addington Symonds, Edward Carpenter, André Gide, E. M. Forster, Mary Renault, Gore Vidal, and others.

Daylanne K. English is chair of the English Department and associate professor of African American literature at Macalester College. She is the author of Unnatural Selections: Eugenics in American Modernism and the Harlem Renaissance (2004), and has published articles on African American literature and culture in African American Review, American Literary History, American Literature, and Critical Inquiry. She is also the recipient of the MLA's Foerster Prize for her essay “W. E. B. Du Bois's Family Crisis.” English is currently at work on a second book titled Political Fictions: Time and Justice in African American Literature.

Mark S. Ferrara is an assistant professor of English at the State University of New York College at Oneonta. His recent scholarly work on literary utopia includes “A Religion of Solidarity: Looking Backward as a Rational Utopia,” and “Utopia, Desire, and Enlightenment in Honglou meng,” appearing in the journals Renascence and Mosaic, respectively. He is the former director of the Chinese Cultural Exchange Program at Drake University and has taught in South Korea, in China, and on a Fulbright Scholarship in Turkey.

Andre Furlani is associate professor in the Department of English, Concordia University, Montreal. His publications are primarily in the fields of modern and contemporary American, British, and Canadian literature. He is the author of Guy Davenport: Postmodern and After, and is preparing a Wittgensteinian study of Samuel Beckett.

Samuel Gaustad is a professor of humanities at Seminole Community College. He has served on the faculties of Florida Community College at Jacksonville, Phillips Community College of the University of Arkansas, University at Albany, and Hartwick College. Gaustad has contributed articles to the Dictionary of Literary Biography, vol. 278, and The Continuum Encyclopedia of British Authors, as well as serving as a contributing editor for Listener Magazine.

James R. Giles is professor emeritus at Northern Illinois University. He is the author of nine books, including The Spaces of Violence (2006); Violence in the Contemporary American Novel (2000); Understanding Hubert Selby, Jr. (1998); and The Naturalistic Inner-City Novel in America (1995). He is also the coeditor of seven books, including five volumes of the Dictionary of Literary Biography.

Michael Patrick Gillespie is the Louise Edna Goeden Professor of English at Marquette University. In addition to his work on the writings of William Kennedy, he has written books on James Joyce, Oscar Wilde, and chaos theory as applied to literary criticism. His latest work, The Myth of an Irish Cinema, appeared in the fall of 2008.

Mimi Reisel Gladstein is a professor at the University of Texas at El Paso, where she has chaired the English and Philosophy Departments and the Department of Theatre, Dance, and Film, and was first director of women's studies. Gladstein is president of the John Steinbeck Society of America and the author of three books about Ayn Rand. Her latest book is The Last Supper of Chicano Heroes: The Works of José Antonio Burciaga, co-edited with Daniel Chacon.

William Gleason is associate professor of English at Princeton University, where he teaches in the Department of English and the Program in American Studies. A specialist in nineteenth- and twentieth-century American literature and culture, with particular interest in popular culture, social history, and material culture, he is the author of The Leisure Ethic: Work and Play in American Literature, 1840–1940 (1999), as well as essays on such figures as Frederick Douglass, Charles Chesnutt, Edgar Rice Burroughs, Edith Wharton, Thomas Pynchon, Louise Erdrich, and Charles Johnson.

Sarah Gleeson-White is senior lecturer in US literature in the Department of English at the University of Sydney. She is the author of Strange Bodies: Gender and Identity in the Novels of Carson McCullers, as well as articles on McCullers, Eudora Welty, Flannery O'Connor, and Cormac McCarthy.

Andrew S. Gross is assistant professor of American literature at the John F. Kennedy Institute of the Free University of Berlin. His research interests include road narratives, representations of the Holocaust, and mid-century American poetry. He has published widely on these and related fields and is currently completing a book on the Holocaust and trauma theory.

Huey Guagliardo is professor and coordinator of English at Louisiana State University–Eunice. He edited Perspectives on Richard Ford (2000) and Conversations With Richard Ford (2001). He also has published numerous essays, interviews, and reviews in scholarly journals.

P. Jane Hafen (Taos Pueblo) is a professor of English at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. She is author of Reading Louise Erdrich's Love Medicine, and "Story Speaks for Us': Centering the Voice of Simon Ortiz"; editor of Dreams and Thunder: Stories, Poems and the Sun Dance Opera by Zitkala-Sa; and coeditor of A Great Plains Reader. She is a Clan Mother for the Native American Literature Symposium.

Jaime Harker is an assistant professor of English at the University of Mississippi. She is the author of America the Middlebrow: Women's Novels, Progressivism, and Middlebrow Authorship Between the Wars, and the coeditor of The Oprah Effect: Essays on Oprah's Book Club.

Oliver Harris is professor of American literature at Keele University. He has edited The Letters of William S. Burroughs, 1945–1959 (1993); Junky: The Definitive Text of "Junk" (2003); The Yage Letters Redux (2006); and "Everything Lost": The Latin American Notebook of William S. Burroughs (2008). The author of William Burroughs and the Secret of Fascination (2003), he is the coeditor of Naked Lunch@50: Anniversary Essays (2009), as well as the editor of a new edition of Burroughs's novel, Queer (forthcoming in 2010).

Matthew Hart is an assistant professor at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, where he teaches in the Department of English and the Unit for Criticism and Interpretive Theory. His work has appeared or is forthcoming in such journals as American Literary History, Contemporary Literature, Modernism/Modernity, and Twentieth-Century Literature.

Steven Hartman is senior research fellow in American literature at Uppsala University and associate professor of Anglophone literature at Växjö University, both in Sweden. Hartman has received grants from the Swedish Research Council, the US Fulbright Program, and the Thoreau Society and Wenner-Gren Foundations and was selected, on the basis of his short fiction, as the 2001 New York State Thayer Fellow in the Arts. His literary scholarship and creative writing have appeared in many journals internationally.

Maria Hebert-Leiter is currently teaching at Pennsylvania College of Technology and studies the representation of Louisiana ethnicities in American literature and contemporary American ethnic and Southern literature generally. Her latest book, Becoming Cajun, Becoming American: The Acadian in American Literature From Longfellow to James Lee Burke, was published by Louisiana State University Press in 2009. Her work on the literature of the US South and Louisiana has been published in MELUS (Journal of Multi-Ethnic Literature of the United States) and Mississippi Quarterly.

Scott Henkel is an assistant professor in the Department of English at Binghamton University, State University of New York. His writing has appeared in Workplace: A Journal of Academic Labor and is forthcoming in the Rodopi Press collection of essays commemorating the 70th anniversary of John Steinbeck's novel The Grapes of Wrath, and in the Walt Whitman Quarterly Review. He is currently working on a book titled "Leaves of Grassroots Politics: Democracy, the Swarm, and the Literatures of the Americas."

Luc Herman teaches American literature and narrative theory at the University of Antwerp. Besides publishing widely on Pynchon, he is the author of Concepts of Realism (1996), and co-author and translator (with Bart Vervaeck) of Handbook of Narrative Analysis (2005).

Peter C. Herman is professor of English literature at San Diego State University. He is the author of "Royal Poetrie": Monarchic Verse and the Political Imaginary of Early Modern England (2010); Destabilizing Milton: Paradise Lost and the Poetics of Incertitude (2005); and Squitter-Wits and Muse-Haters: Sidney, Spenser, Milton and Renaissance Antipoetic Sentiment (1996). He has also edited numerous anthologies, including Approaches to Teaching Milton's Shorter Poetry and Prose (2007), Historicizing Theory (2004), and Rethinking the Henrician Era: New Essays on Early Tudor Texts and Contexts (1994).

Lisa Hinrichsen is an assistant professor of English at the University of Arkansas, where she teaches courses on American literature, literary theory, and the literature of the American South. She has contributed essays to the Southern Literary Journal, the Journal of Modern Literature, and Etudes Faulkneriennes, and she is currently finishing a manuscript on the roles that trauma, fantasy, and misrecognition play in modern and contemporary Southern literature.

Andrew Hoberek is associate professor of English at the University of Missouri–Columbia, where he teaches courses in twentieth- and twenty-first-century US literature. He is the author of The Twilight of the Middle-Class: Post-World War II American Fiction and White-Collar Work, and the guest editor of the Fall 2007 special issue of Twentieth-Century Literature on the topic "After Postmodernism."

Matthew Hofer teaches American and British modernism at the University of New Mexico, where he is a member of the English Department faculty. He has published scholarly work on many twentieth-century authors, including Langston Hughes.

Melissa J. Homestead is associate professor of English and women's and gender studies at the University of Nebraska–Lincoln and vice president for membership and finance of the Society for the Study of American Women Writers. She is the author of American Women Authors and Literary Property 1822–1869 (2005) and essays on American women authors such as Susanna Rowson, Catharine Sedgwick, Fanny Fern, Augusta Jane Evans, Sarah Orne Jewett, and Bess Streeter Aldrich. With Anne L. Kaufman, she is working on a study of the creative partnership between Willa Cather and Edith Lewis.

Alex Hunt is an associate professor of English at West Texas A&M University. He has published scholarship on Western and Southwestern American literature, neo-regionalism, eco-criticism, and multicultural literatures.

Anthony Hutchison is a lecturer in American intellectual and cultural history at the University of Nottingham, United Kingdom. He is the author of Writing the Republic: Liberalism and Morality in American Political Fiction (2007).

James M. Hutchisson is professor of American literature and director of graduate studies in English at The Citadel in Charleston, South Carolina. He has written widely on American and Southern literature, including books on Lewis, Poe, DuBose Heyward, and the Southern literary renaissance. His scholarly articles have appeared in such journals as Studies in the Novel, American Literary Realism, and Journal of Modern Literature. He was twice winner of The Citadel's award for Outstanding Faculty Achievement in Scholarship.

Katharine Nicholson Ings is associate professor of American literature and journalism as well as director of gender studies at Manchester College, Indiana. She specializes in literary narratives about black and white men and women during the Civil War. Her publications on this topic include "Blackness and the Literary Imagination: Uncovering The Hidden Hand" (1996), and "Between Hoax and Hope: Miscegenation and Nineteenth-Century Interracial Romance" (2006). In addition, Ings has over 10 years of experience as a copyeditor for W. W. Norton.

Mark C. Jerng is assistant professor of English at University of California, Davis. He has published articles on Chang-rae Lee, Kazuo Ishiguro, William Faulkner, and Charles Chesnutt. He is currently completing a book manuscript on stories of transracial adoption in American literature.

Scott J. Juengel is associate professor of English at Michigan State University, where he teaches eighteenth- and nineteenth-century transatlantic literature, as well as the history and theory of the novel. His work has appeared in ELH, Novel, differences, Studies in Romanticism, Studies in Popular Culture, Eighteenth Century: Theory and Interpretation, and other journals.

Kathy Jurado is an assistant professor of English and affiliated faculty of the Chicana/o-Latina/o Studies Program at Michigan State University. She recently received her PhD from the American Culture Program at the University of Michigan, where she completed her dissertation titled "Alienated Citizens: 'Hispanophobia' and the Mexican Im/migrant Body." Her research interests reside in the areas of popular culture, im/migration studies, and Chicana/o-Latina/o literature.

Catherine Kasper is an associate professor at the University of Texas at San Antonio. She is the author of Field Stone (2005), Notes from the Committee (2009), and several other works of fiction and poetry. She is the author of the article "Steven Millhauser's American Gothic." She has worked as an editor and guest editor for several publications, and currently is coeditor of American Letters & Commentary.

Steven G. Kellman is a professor of comparative literature at the University of Texas at San Antonio. He is the author of Redemption: The Life of Henry Roth (2005), The Translingual Imagination (2000), and The Self-Begetting Novel (1980); editor of Switching Languages: Translingual Writers Reflect on Their Craft (2003); and coeditor of volumes on Don DeLillo, Leslie Fiedler, William Gass, and Vladimir Nabokov. In 2007 Kellman was awarded the Nona Balakian Citation for Excellence in Reviewing by the National Book Critics Circle.

John M. Krafft teaches English at the Hamilton campus of Miami University. He is a founding coeditor of the journal Pynchon Notes.

Michael Kreyling is Gertrude Conaway Vanderbilt Professor of English at Vanderbilt University. Among his critical work are three books on Eudora Welty: Eudora Welty's Achievement of Order (1980); Author and Agent: Eudora Welty and Diarmuid Russell (1991); and Understanding Eudora Welty (1999).

Daphne Lamothe is an associate professor in the Department of Afro-American Studies at Smith College. She is the author of Inventing the New Negro: Narrative, Culture, Ethnography (2008), which focuses on the intersection of ethnography and the African American imagination during the New Negro Movement. She has also written essays for a number of publications on Zora Neale Hurston's use of Vodou imagery to represent New Negro subjectivity, Jean Toomer's incorporation of Gothic figures of racial miscegenation in Cane, and Gloria Naylor's representation of migration and cultural memory in Mama Day.

Hellen Lee-Keller is an assistant professor of multiethnic literatures at California State University, Sacramento. She is the author of several articles and book reviews on labor history, women writers, and immigration in scholarly journals and literary encyclopedias.

Mark Levene teaches English at the University of Toronto. He has written about Arthur Koestler, the short story, Canadian literature, and Robert Stone.

Jonathan P. Lewis is assistant professor of English at the University of North Carolina at Pembroke, where he teaches composition and literary studies. He did his doctoral work at the University of California, Riverside and edited Tomorrow Through the Past: Neal Stephenson and the Project of Global Modernization (2006).

Saundra Liggins is an associate professor of English at the State University of New York at Fredonia. Her current project involves exploring the influence of the gothic tradition in African American literature.

Tiffany Ana López is associate professor of English at the University of California, Riverside and editor of Chicana/Latina Studies: The Journal of Mujeres Activas en Letras y Cambio Social. Her books include Growing Up Chicana/o (1993) and The Alchemy of Blood: Violence as Critical Discourse in U.S. Latina/o Writing (forthcoming). Her research focuses on issues of violence and trauma in American literature. Among her awards, she is the recipient of a Fulbright Award in Barcelona, Spain and resident fellowships at the Center for Ideas and Society at the University of California, Riverside. She gratefully acknowledges Joelle Guzman and Lisette Lasater for their generous and talented research contributions to this entry.

Gerald R. Lucas is an assistant professor of English at Macon State College in central Georgia, where he teaches composition, literature, and media studies. His interests include speculative fiction, new media, and online pedagogy. He is a member of the executive board of the Norman Mailer Society and serves as deputy editor of the Mailer Review.

Josh Lukin is a visiting assistant professor in Temple University's English Department and a faculty affiliate of Temple's Institute on Disabilities. He is the editor of Invisible Suburbs: Recovering Protest Fiction in the 1950s United States (2008), and coeditor of "Fifties Fictions" in Paradoxa: Studies in World Literary Genres (2003). He has contributed chapters to the anthologies Daughters of Earth: Twentieth-Century Feminist Science Fiction (2006) and Engaging Tradition, Making It New: Essays on Teaching Recent African American Literature (2008). His work has also appeared in Anarchist Studies, MLN, New York Review of Science Fiction, Extrapolation, and Minnesota Review.

David W. Madden is a professor of American and Irish literatures at California State University, Sacramento. He is author of Understanding Paul West (1993) and editor of Critical Essay on Thomas Berger (1995). In addition to numerous articles and reviews in scholarly journals, he has guest-edited two issues of the Review of Contemporary Fiction on Paul West (1991) and Alan Burns (1997). Madden was awarded his campus's Outstanding Scholarly Achievement Award in 2007 and an Outstanding Teaching Award in 1999.

Joshua J. Masters is an assistant professor of English at the University of West Georgia. His articles have appeared in Arizona Quarterly, American Studies, the Journal of Narrative Theory, Critique, and MWA Review, and he is currently completing a manuscript tentatively titled "The Bullet and the Book: The Symbol of the Book and the Adventure of Writing the American West, 1803–93."

John T. Matthews is professor of English at Boston University. He is the author of The Play of Faulkner's Language, "The Sound and the Fury": Faulkner and the Lost Cause, and William Faulkner: Seeing Through the South, as well as numerous essays on Faulkner, modern American fiction, and Southern literature. He has recently edited The Blackwell Companion to the Modern American Novel, 1900–1950, and is presently at work on a book on narrative representations of Southern plantation history in American literature.

Pamela R. Matthews is professor of English and associate dean in the College of Liberal Arts at Texas A&M University. She is the author of Ellen Glasgow and a Woman's Traditions (1994), and the editor of Perfect Companionship: Ellen Glasgow's Selected Correspondence With Women (2005) and, with David McWhirter, Aesthetic Subjects (2003).

Jake Mattox is assistant professor in the Department of English at Indiana University South Bend. He has published articles and book reviews in scholarly journals on Martin Delany, Black Nationalism in the Americas, and the US West.

Adam McKible is associate professor of English at the John Jay College of Criminal Justice in New York, where he teaches American and African American literature. He is coeditor, with Suzanne Churchill, of Little Magazines and Modernism: New Approaches (2007). He rediscovered and introduced When Washington Was in Vogue by Edward Christopher Williams (2004) and is the author of The Space and Place of Modernism: The Russian Revolution, Little Magazines, and New York (2002), as well as various essays on modernism, little magazines, and African American literature.

Marci R. McMahon is an assistant professor of multiethnic literature at the University of Texas–Pan American. Her essays on feminist history and early-twentieth-century Mexican American women authors appear in Frontiers: A Journal of Women Studies; The Hispanic American Literature Volume; and Women's Studies: An Interdisciplinary Journal. Her manuscript, "Domestic Negotiations: Chicana Domesticity as a Critical Discourse of US Literature and Culture," highlights the fraught relationship between domesticity and nation in several Chicana literary and visual texts produced in the late twentieth and early twenty-first centuries.

Sheree L. Meyer is a professor of English and currently chair at California State University, Sacramento. In addition to her primary field of interest in early modern British literature, she is the author of numerous articles on literary theory and pedagogy published in journals such as College English, College Literature, and Pedagogy. She was proud to have the opportunity of offering a preview lecture on Norman Mailer and meeting him during his final book tour for Castle in the Forest.

Carey Mickalites is an assistant professor of English at the University of Memphis, and specializes in modernism and twentieth-century British and American fiction. He has published or has work forthcoming on Ford, Joyce, and Conrad in Studies in the Novel, the Journal of Modern Literature, and Criticism.

Tyrus Miller is professor of literature at the University of California, Santa Cruz. He is author of Late Modernism: Politics, Fiction, and the Arts Between the World Wars (1999) and Singular Examples: Artistic Politics and the Neo-Avant-Garde (2009).

Douglas L. Mitchell received his PhD from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He is currently assistant professor of English at the University of Mobile in Alabama and is the author of A Disturbing and Alien Memory: Southern Novelists Writing History (2008).

Deborah M. Mix is an associate professor of English at Ball State University and the author of "A Vocabulary of Thinking": Gertrude Stein and Contemporary North American Women's Innovative Writing (2007).

Robert Morace teaches at Daemen College in Amherst, New York. His publications include John Gardner: Critical Perspectives (coedited with Kathryn VanSpanckeren, 1982); John Gardner: An Annotated Secondary Bibliography (1984); The Dialogic Novels of Malcolm Bradbury and David Lodge (1989); Irvine Welsh's "Trainspotting" (2001); and Irvine Welsh, a study of the Welsh phenomenon (2007). His "Life and Times of Death and the Maiden" won the 1997 Berger Prize for best theater essay.

Michael P. Moreno is assistant professor of English: Diversity Emphasis at Green River Community College in Auburn, Washington. In addition to a number of scholarly journal articles on cross-ethnic literature and the American suburb, he has contributed to several collections including Reel Histories: Studies in American Film (2008), and We Wear the Mask: Paul Lawrence Dunbar and the Politics of Representative Reality (2009). He holds a PhD in English from the University of California, Riverside with emphases in Latina/o literature, twentieth- and twenty-first-century American literature, and spatial theory.

Paul Morrison is professor of English and film studies at Brandeis University. He is the author of The Poetics of Fascism: Ezra Pound, T. S. Eliot, and Paul de Man (1996), and The Explanation for Everything: Essays on Sexual Subjectivity (2002).

Omri Moses is an assistant professor of English literature at Concordia University, Montreal. He is the author of several scholarly essays about modernist literature and painting, including a work in progress on Gertrude Stein's investment in "lively" habits, and its pertinence to the Darwinian account of life.

Roark Mulligan is an associate professor at Christopher Newport University in Newport News, Virginia, where he teaches literature and writing. He has authored essays on Theodore Dreiser that have appeared in American Literary Realism and Dreiser Studies. Currently, he is editing The Financier for the Dreiser edition and is serving as president of the International Theodore Dreiser Society.

Brenda Murphy is Board of Trustees Distinguished Professor of English at the University of Connecticut. Among her books are The Provincetown Players and the Culture of Modernity (2005); Congressional Theatre: Dramatizing McCarthyism on Stage, Film, and Television (1999); Tennessee Williams and Elia Kazan: A Collaboration in the Theatre (1992); American Realism and American Drama, 1880–1940 (1987); and, as editor, the Cambridge Companion to American Women Playwrights (1999) and a special issue of Lit on Mary McCarthy (2004).

Leonard Mustazza is distinguished professor of English and American studies at Pennsylvania State University. In addition to numerous scholarly articles, among them one on Tom Wolfe, he is the author of nine books, including Forever Pursuing Genesis: The Myth of Eden in the Novels of Kurt Vonnegut; The Critical Response to Kurt Vonnegut; and Ol' Blue Eyes: A Frank Sinatra Encyclopedia. His latest book is a two-volume edition titled The Literary Filmography: 6,200 Adaptations of Books, Short Stories and Other Nondramatic Works.

Neil Nakadate teaches literature in the Department of English at Iowa State University, where he received the award for Outstanding Achievement in Teaching and has been named university professor. He has edited two books on Robert Penn Warren and has written a critical study of Jane Smiley's fiction (1999). Other publications have appeared in Aethlon, ISLE, Cottonwood, Flyway, Mississippi Quarterly, Western Humanities Review, Genre, Tennessee Studies in Literature, and Annals of Internal Medicine.

Justus Nieland is associate professor of English at Michigan State University, where he specializes in literary and visual modernisms, the avant garde, and film studies. He is the author of Feeling Modern: The Eccentricities of Public Life (2008), and co-author of Film Noir: Hard-Boiled Modernity and the Cultures of Globalization (2009). His work has appeared in the journals Modernism/modernity, NOVEL: A Forum on Fiction, Modernist Cultures, and Arizona Quarterly, and in the Blackwell Companion to the Modern American Novel.

Margot Norris is Chancellor's Professor of English and Comparative Literature at the University of California, Irvine. Her research interests include modernist literature and art, James Joyce, literature and war, and feminism and gender studies. She is the author of Writing War in the Twentieth Century (2000), Suspicious Readings of Joyce's "Dubliners" (2003), Joyce's Web: The Social Unraveling of Modernism (1992), Beasts of the Modern Imagination: Darwin, Nietzsche, Kafka, Ernst, and Lawrence (1985), and The Decentered Universe of Finnegans Wake (1976).

Patrick O'Donnell is professor of English and American literature at Michigan State University. He is the author of several books on modern and contemporary fiction, including John Hawkes: Passionate Doubts: Designs of Interpretation in Contemporary American Fiction; Echo Chambers: Figuring Voice in Modern Narrative; Latent Destinies: Cultural Paranoia in Contemporary US Narrative; and The American Novel Now: Reading American Fiction Since 1980. He is coeditor of Intertextuality and Contemporary American Fiction, editor of New Essays on "The Crying of Lot 49," and an associate editor of The Columbia History of the American Novel. He has provided the introduction and notes to the Penguin Twentieth Century Classics editions of two works by F. Scott Fitzgerald, This Side of Paradise and The Curious Case of Benjamin Button and Other Jazz Age Stories.

Kevin Ohi is the author of Innocence and Rapture: The Erotic Child in Pater, Wilde, James, and Nabokov (2005); Henry James and the Queerness of Style (forthcoming); and numerous articles on Victorian and American literature, queer theory, and film. Currently at work on a book entitled "Dead Letters Sent: Queer Literary Traditions," he is associate professor of English at Boston College.

Marc Oxoby has taught English and general humanities classes at the University of Nevada, Reno, where he also completed his doctoral work. He has contributed to Critique, Film & History, The St. James Encyclopedia of Popular Culture, and other publications. He is also the author of The 1990s (2003), the concluding volume of the Greenwood Press American Popular Culture Through History series.

Tim Page is a professor of journalism and music at the University of Southern California. He won the Pulitzer Prize for Criticism in 1997. He wrote or edited more than a dozen books, including The Glenn Gould Reader, The Unknown Sigrid Undset, Tim Page on Music, and Parallel Play. Page became interested in the life and work of Dawn Powell in 1991 and was instrumental in the discovery of Powell's papers and subsequent reissue of most of her books. Page has edited Powell's diaries, letters, plays, and short stories, and written introductions to a half dozen of her novels. He wrote the biography Dawn Powell (1998) and edited and annotated the Library of America's two-volume collection of Powell's work in 2001.

Linda Palmer is professor emeritus at California State University, Sacramento, where she was vice chair of the English Department and director of writing programs, specializing in Native American writers. She has published works on Leslie Silko and delivered conference papers on James Welch, Simon Ortiz, and Linda Hogan. She was awarded her campus' Outstanding Teaching Award and Outstanding Contribution to the University Award.

Jennifer Parchesky is assistant professor of English at Arizona State University. Her work on popular women writers and filmmakers of the 1920s and 1930s has appeared in Legacy, Cinema Journal, and Film History. She is currently completing a book on middle-class and middlebrow fiction in the early twentieth century.

Donald E. Pease is the Avalon Foundation Professor of the Humanities at Dartmouth College and director of the Futures of American Studies Institute. He is the author of Visionary Compacts: American Renaissance Writings in Cultural Context and The New American Exceptionalism, and the editor of several volumes including National Identities and Postnational Narratives and, with Amy Kaplan, Cultures of United States Imperialism.

Nancy J. Peterson, an associate professor of English and American studies at Purdue University, focuses on contemporary American literature and culture, with a particular interest in ethnic American literatures. She is the author of Beloved: Character Studies (2008) and Against Amnesia: Contemporary Women Writers and the Crises of Historical Memory (2001), and editor of Toni Morrison: Critical and Theoretical Approaches (1997). She serves on the advisory board for Modern Fiction Studies and has guest-edited special issues of the journal on Toni Morrison (2006 and 1993), "Racechange and the Fictions of Identity" (2003), and "Native American Literature" (1999).

Rhonda S. Pettit teaches literature and creative writing at the University of Cincinnati–Raymond Walters College in Blue Ash, Ohio. In addition to her scholarship on Parker (A Gendered Collision, 2000; and The Critical Waltz, 2005), she has published articles on other poets as well as her own poetry. She is the recipient of writing grants from the Kentucky Arts Council, the Kentucky Foundation for Women, and Hedgebrook.

Kathleen Pfeiffer is associate professor of English and coordinator of the American Studies Program at Oakland University in Rochester, Michigan. She is the author of Race Passing and American Individualism (2003) and has edited and introduced the reissues of Carl Van Vechten's Nigger Heaven (2000) and Waldo Frank's Holiday (2003). She has published essays in African American Review, Women's Studies, and Legacy; her forthcoming book is titled Brother Mine: The Correspondence of Jean Toomer and Waldo Frank.

Jonathan L. Price is a professor of English at California State University, Sacramento and has taught contemporary American fiction, film, composition, and grammar there since 1968. He has also taught at the University of Rome and Ramkhamhaeng University in Bangkok. In addition to several articles and presentations on modern and contemporary fiction and poetry, he is the co-author of two texts, Write in Time (1992) and Grammar Demystified (2006).

David M. Raabe is professor emeritus of English at the University of Nebraska–Omaha. He has published a number of articles on American writers, including Raymond Carver and Ernest Hemingway.

Paula Rabinowitz is professor of English at the University of Minnesota. Her books include Black & White & Noir: America's Pulp Modernism (2002) and They Must Be Represented: The Politics of Documentary (1994). She is currently coediting a four-volume series with Cristina Giorcelli for the University of Minnesota Press entitled "Habits of Being: Clothing and Identity," as well as completing a manuscript on early paperbacks, popularized modernism, and censorship.

Christopher T. Raczkowski is an assistant professor of English literature at the University of South Alabama, Mobile. He has authored articles and essays on noir aesthetics, modernism, and crime published in Modern Fiction Studies, Studies in the Novel, and elsewhere.

Nicholas F. Radel is professor of English at Furman University, South Carolina. Coeditor of The Puritan Origins of American Sex (2000), he has written numerous articles on early modern and modern literature and sexuality, including early scholarly and biographical studies of Edmund White. A new study of White and race is forthcoming in Modern Fiction Studies.

Robert Rebein is an associate professor of English and creative writing at Indiana University–Purdue University, Indianapolis. He is the author of Hicks, Tribes, & Dirty Realists: American Fiction After Postmodernism (2001), as well as numerous essays and reviews in literary magazines and journals.

Doug Rice is a professor of creative writing and film at California State University, Sacramento. He is the author of Skin Prayer: Fragments of Abject Memory; A Good C-tboy is Hard to Find; and Blood of Mugwump. He coedited Federman: A to X-X-X-X. He is the executive publisher of Nobodaddies Press and has published numerous works in journals and anthologies, including Discourse, Fiction International, Zyzzyyva, Gargoyle, and Black Ice. In 2004, Rice was the recipient of his campus's President's Award for Research and Creative Activity.

Chaunce Ridley is a professor of African American, American, and minority literatures at California State University, Sacramento. His most recent publications are "The Blues, Unamuno, and the Triumph of Self-Mockingly Examined Lives in Ralph Ellison's Invisible Man," in Interdisciplinary Humanities (2006); and "Tension, Conversation, and Collectivity: Examining the Space of Double-Consciousness in the Search for Shared Knowledge," in Complicating Constructions: Race, Ethnicity, and Hybridity in American Texts (2005), the latter co-written with CSUS colleagues Sheree Meyer and Olivia Castellano.

Martin Riker is associate director of Dalkey Archive Press. He received his PhD from the University of Denver, and his critical writing on contemporary fiction has appeared in numerous publications.

Terry Roberts is the director of the National Paideia Center at the University of North Carolina. He is the former editor of the Thomas Wolfe Review and author of the Literary Masterpieces volume on Look Homeward, Angel.