

THE ENCYCLOPEDIA OF
TWENTIETH-CENTURY
FICTION

---

TWENTIETH-CENTURY WORLD FICTION

VOLUME III

General Editor
Brian W. Shaffer

Volume Editor
John Clement Ball

 WILEY-BLACKWELL

The Encyclopedia of Twentieth-Century Fiction

General editor: Brian W. Shaffer

Volume III

Twentieth-Century
World Fiction

Volume editor:
John Clement Ball

 WILEY-BLACKWELL

A John Wiley & Sons, Ltd., Publication

This edition first published 2011
© 2011 Blackwell Publishing Ltd

Blackwell Publishing was acquired by John Wiley & Sons in February 2007. Blackwell's publishing program has been merged with Wiley's global Scientific, Technical, and Medical business to form Wiley-Blackwell.

Registered Office

John Wiley & Sons Ltd, The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, United Kingdom

Editorial Offices

350 Main Street, Malden, MA 02148-5020, USA

9600 Garsington Road, Oxford, OX4 2DQ, UK

The Atrium, Southern Gate, Chichester, West Sussex, PO19 8SQ, UK

For details of our global editorial offices, for customer services, and for information about how to apply for permission to reuse the copyright material in this book please see our website at www.wiley.com/wiley-blackwell.

The right of Brian W. Shaffer, Patrick O'Donnell, David W. Madden, Justus Nieland, and John Clement Ball to be identified as the authors of the editorial material in this work has been asserted in accordance with the UK Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise, except as permitted by the UK Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988, without the prior permission of the publisher.

Wiley also publishes its books in a variety of electronic formats. Some content that appears in print may not be available in electronic books.

Designations used by companies to distinguish their products are often claimed as trademarks. All brand names and product names used in this book are trade names, service marks, trademarks or registered trademarks of their respective owners. The publisher is not associated with any product or vendor mentioned in this book. This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold on the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering professional services. If professional advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional should be sought.

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

The encyclopedia of twentieth-century fiction / general editor, Brian W. Shaffer.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-4051-9244-6 (hardcover : alk. paper)

1. English fiction--20th century--History and criticism--Encyclopedias. 2. American fiction--20th century--History and criticism--Encyclopedias. 3. Commonwealth fiction (English)--History and criticism--Encyclopedias. 4. Authors, English--20th century--Biography--Dictionaries. 5. Authors, American--20th century--Biography--Dictionaries. 6. Authors, Commonwealth--20th century--Biography--Dictionaries. I. Shaffer, Brian W., 1960-- II. O'Donnell, Patrick, 1948-- III. Ball, John Clement, 1960-- IV. Title: Encyclopedia of 20th-century fiction.

PR881.E48 2011

823'.910903--dc22

2010016469

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

Set in 9.5/11.5 Minion by Thomson Digital, Noida, India

Printed and bound in Singapore by Fabulous Printers Pte Ltd

Acknowledgments

My involvement in the Encyclopedia of Twentieth-Century Fiction began three years ago with an invitation from Emma Bennett of Wiley-Blackwell and Brian Shaffer, the project's editor-in-chief. Both were tremendously helpful throughout the process and a pleasure to work with, as were Isobel Bainton and Amy Clark. I was assisted immeasurably in developing my list of headwords by colleagues who generously agreed to look over my draft lists and offer feedback; they all agreed to write entries as well, and I am grateful to them all: Jennifer Andrews, John Eustace, Chelva Kanaganayakam, Laura Moss, and Neil ten Kortenaar. Two anonymous reviewers for Wiley-Blackwell also made helpful suggestions before the assignments began, as did various contributors at later stages. I could not have finished this project on time without the expertise of three graduate students who worked as research or editorial assistants. Linnet Humble and Laura Pearson did exhaustive searches of criticism on the authors and topics covered by the volume so I could identify prospective contributors; Laura also tracked down several hundred email addresses. Joshua Prescott diligently and effectively corrected formatting and suggested line edits on numerous draft entries. For their dedication, intelligence, and work ethic, I thank all three of these most promising young researchers; my gratitude as well to the University of New Brunswick for providing funding and for sabbatical release during the busy final year in which the draft entries were submitted and edited.

To the 161 authors or co-authors of the volume's 196 entries, this volume is as much your collective creation as it is mine. I tip my hat to you all for your willingness to hop aboard when I asked, for the insightfulness and elegant concision of your work, and for putting up with my cuts, comments, and questions. Although I know many of you, I have met the majority of you only by email, since you are as international a group as is the volume itself. Special thanks to contributors who offered or agreed to take on more than one entry, and to Rowland Smith, whose excellent entry on Nadine Gordimer arrived just three weeks before he passed away; it thus became, unexpectedly, his final piece of scholarly writing after a distinguished career.

My final thanks to my family, as always, for your loving support and inspiration.

John Clement Ball

Notes on Contributors to Volume III

Micheline Adams is an assistant professor of English at St. George's University in Grenada. A Trinidadian, she graduated from the University of New Brunswick, where she wrote a doctoral thesis on Erna Brodber and Jamaica Kincaid. She has published articles on Caribbean women's narrative in Sargasso, the College of the Bahamas Research Journal, and Anthurium.

Chiji Akoma is associate professor of English at Villanova University. He teaches African diaspora literatures and anglophone postcolonial studies. Author of Folklore in New World Black Fiction, he has also published essays in such journals as Research in African Literatures, Oral Tradition, Wasafiri, and Modern Fiction Studies.

Maria-Sabina Draga Alexandru is associate professor of English at the University of Bucharest. She holds a PhD in postcolonial literature from the University of East Anglia and has published widely on contemporary Indian fiction in English, postmodernism, women's literature, and ethnic studies. Her latest book is Identity Performance in Contemporary Non-WASP American Fiction (2008). She is currently working on a book entitled Performance and Performativity in Contemporary Indian Fiction in English.

Stella Algoo-Baksh, professor of English at the Memorial University of Newfoundland, is the author of Austin C. Clarke: A Biography and Austin C. Clarke and His Works. Her articles and reviews appear in The Reordering of Culture: Latin America, the Caribbean and Canada: In the Hood and in Canadian Literature, English Studies in Canada, Canadian Journal of African Studies, and Journal of West Indian Literature.

Jennifer Andrews is a professor in the Department of English at the University of New Brunswick and the coeditor (with John Clement Ball) of Studies in Canadian Literature. She is the author of numerous articles on English Canadian and American literature and the co-author of Border Crossings: Thomas King's Cultural Inversions (2003). She recently completed a new monograph on contemporary Native North American women poets.

John Attridge did his PhD at the University of Sydney on Joseph Conrad, Ford Madox Ford, and the rise of professionalism. He has written articles on Ford, Conrad, Henry James, and Murray Bail for journals such as Modernism/Modernity, ELH, and the Henry James Review. He currently teaches at the Paris Diderot University.

John Clement Ball, editor of the World Fiction volume of the ETCF, is a professor of postcolonial and Canadian literatures in the Department of English at the University of New Brunswick. He is the author of two books, Imagining London: Postcolonial Fiction and the Transnational Metropolis (2004) and Satire and the Postcolonial Novel: V. S. Naipaul, Chinua Achebe, Salman Rushdie (2003), and coeditor of the journal Studies in Canadian Literature.

Mita Banerjee is professor and chair of American studies at the University of Siegen, Germany. Her research interests include postcolonial literature (The Chutneyfication of History: Salman Rushdie, Michael Ondaatje, Bharati Mukherjee and the Postcolonial Debate, 2002), ethnic American literature (Race-ing the Century, 2005), and the American Renaissance (Ethnic Ventriloquism: Literary Minstrelsy in Nineteenth-Century American Literature, 2008). She is currently working on a project that explores the intersection between naturalism and naturalization in nineteenth-century American fiction.

Salhia Ben-Messahel is the author of Mind the Country: Tim Winton's Fiction, the first book-length critical study of one of Australia's major authors. Her publications include the editing of Des frontières de l'interculturalité, with Presses du Septentrion, Charles de Gaulle University–Lille 3, and several articles on Australia, place, and representation. She is senior lecturer of English at the Charles de Gaulle University–Lille 3.

Bruce Bennett is emeritus professor at the University of New South Wales. He is an Officer of the Order of Australia and a fellow of the Australian Academy of the Humanities. He has held visiting appointments at universities in Asia, Europe, and North America. His books include Spirit in Exile (1991), An Australian Compass (1991), The Oxford Literary History of Australia (1998), Australian Short Fiction (2002), and Homing In (2006).

Neil Kalman Besner has taught Canadian literature at the University of Winnipeg since 1987, where he has been chair of the English Department, Dean of Humanities, Dean of Arts, and Deputy Provost and Associate Vice President (International). He has written books on Mavis Gallant (The Light of Imagination, 1988), and on Alice Munro's Lives of Girls and Women (1991); he has edited two collections of essays on Carol Shields (1995, 2003), a translation of a Brazilian biography of Elizabeth Bishop (Rare and Commonplace Flowers, 2002), and coedited collections of short stories (The Short Story in English, 1991) and poetry (Uncommon Wealth, 1997).

Delys Bird is a senior honorary research fellow in English and cultural studies at the University of Western Australia. Her major publications have been on Australian women writers, in particular Elizabeth Jolley and Katharine Susannah Prichard.

Nicholas Birns is editor of Antipodes and co-author of A Companion to Australian Literature Since 1900. He teaches at the New School in New York. In 2008, he was a visiting fellow at the Literature, Identity, and Culture project at the University of Wollongong in Australia.

Ann Blake is an honorary associate of La Trobe University, Melbourne, and formerly a senior lecturer. She is the author of Christina Stead's Politics of Place (1999) and co-author of England through Colonial Eyes in Twentieth-Century Fiction (2001). She has published articles on Shakespeare and other dramatists, crime fiction, and Christina Stead. Her latest publications are new editions of Sheridan's The School for Scandal and Farquhar's The Beaux' Stratagem.

M. Keith Booker is the James E. and Ellen Wadley Roper Professor of English and director of the program in comparative literature and cultural studies at the University of Arkansas, Fayetteville. He has written or edited more than 30 books on literature, culture, and literary/cultural theory, including The African Novel in English: An Introduction and The Chinua Achebe Encyclopedia.

Clare Bradford's articles appear in journals including Children's Literature, Children's Literature Association Quarterly, Canadian Children's Literature, Children's Literature in Education, and Journal of Australian Studies. She is the author and co-author of 11 books, of which five are works of fiction for children. Her 2001 book Reading Race won the Children's Literature Association Book Award and the International Research Society for Children's Literature Award. She is a professor of literary studies at Deakin University.

Sarah Brouillette is an assistant professor in the Literature Faculty at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where she teaches contemporary British, Irish, and postcolonial writing, and topics in print culture and media studies. Her first book, Postcolonial Writers in the Global Literary Marketplace, was published in 2007.

Heidi Butler is a doctoral candidate in English at the University of New Brunswick. Her academic interests include Canadian historical fiction, Atlantic literature, and Canadian invader-settler narratives. In 2007, she was awarded a Canada Graduate Scholarship by the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada; her doctoral dissertation examines contemporary Atlantic Canadian novelists' representations of adolescent girls.

David Callahan teaches at the University of Aveiro in Portugal, concentrating on world literature in English. The author of Rainforest Narratives: The Work of Janette Turner Hospital (2009), he has also edited Australia – Who Cares? (2007) and Contemporary Issues in Australian Literature (2002).

M. Y. Chiu is assistant professor and undergraduate program coordinator in the Department of English at the University of Macau. Chiu teaches literature with special emphases on colonial writing and world literatures in English.

Rohit Chopra is assistant professor in the Department of Communication at Santa Clara University. He is the author of Technology and Nationalism in India: Cultural Negotiations from Colonialism to Cyberspace (2009). He has published articles in several journals including Cultural Studies, the Economic and Political Weekly, and South Asian Review, as well as book chapters in edited volumes.

Maureen Clark is an honorary research fellow at the University of Wollongong where she teaches across the disciplines of media and cultural studies and English Studies. Her monograph Mudrooroo: A Likely Story was published in 2007. She has also published numerous book chapters and articles on the writing of both Mudrooroo and Janette Turner Hospital with refereed journals including Journal of Commonwealth Literature, Journal of the Association for the Study of Australian Literature, Australian Literary Studies, Kunapipi, and New Literatures Review.

Anne Compton is the author of Opening the Island (2002), winner of the Atlantic Poetry Prize, and Processional (2005), winner of the Governor General's Award for Poetry. Her critical work includes A. J. M. Smith: Canadian Metaphysical (1994), Meetings with Maritime Poets: Interviews (2006), and an article on Jane Urquhart. She is the editor of The Edge of Home: Milton Acorn from the Island (2002) and coeditor of Coastlines: The Poetry of Atlantic Canada (2002). In 2008, she was awarded the Alden Nowlan Award for Excellence in the Literary Arts.

Ralph Crane is professor of English and Head of the School of English, Journalism and European Languages at the University of Tasmania. He has published widely in the areas of Indian and Anglo-Indian literatures. His recent books include scholarly editions of four Raj novels with Oxford University Press India: Charles Pearce's Love Besieged, Maud Diver's Lilamani, Margaret Wilson's Daughters of India, and A. E. W. Mason's The Broken Road.

David Creelman is a professor at the University of New Brunswick in Saint John, where he teaches Canadian literature and modern British literature. He has published articles on twentieth-century Canadian fiction and produced a book on Maritime realist fiction entitled Setting in the East.

Isagani R. Cruz is the author of six books of plays, four books of literary criticism, two books on education, three biographies, several encyclopedia articles, and thousands of newspaper columns for Philippine media (including the Philippine Star). More than 120 of his scholarly articles have appeared in English Today, Media Development, Portal, World Englishes, and other journals and books. He is a professor emeritus of De La Salle University, a visiting professor at Ateneo de Manila University, and an academic administrator at Far Eastern University.

Beverley Curran teaches linguistic, cultural, and media translation at Aichi Shukutoku University in Nagoya, Japan. Her publications include Theatre Translation Theory and Performance in Contemporary Japan: Native Voices, Foreign Bodies (2008), a collaborative Japanese translation of Nicole Brossard's Journal intime (2000) and articles in a range of collections and journals, including Canadian Literature and Theatre Journal.

Frank Davey retired in 2005 from the Carl F. Klinck Chair in Canadian Literature at the University of Western Ontario. He is the editor of the journal Open Letter and author of more than 30 books of poetry and literary and cultural criticism, including The Abbotsford Guide to India (1986), Post-National Arguments: The Politics of the Anglophone-Canadian Novel Since 1967 (1993), Canadian Literary Power (1994), Cultural Mischief (1996), Mr. & Mrs. G.G. (2003), and Risky Propositions (2005).

Rocío G. Davis is associate professor of literature and Director of the Institute of Liberal Arts at the University of Navarra, Spain. She has published Begin Here: Reading Asian North American Autobiographies of Childhood (2007) and Transcultural Reinventions: Asian American and Asian Canadian Short Story Cycles (2001).

Fran de Groen is adjunct associate professor in the research group Writing and Society at the University of Western Sydney. She has published a biography of Xavier Herbert and articles about his life and work; she has also coedited his letters with Professor Emeritus Laurie Hergenhan. Her most recent publication is Serious Frolic: Essays on Australian Humour (2009), coedited with Peter Kirkpatrick.

R. K. Dhawan, a senior academic from University of Delhi, is widely traveled and has lectured on Indian literature at several Indian and foreign universities. He has published a number of articles and books, especially on Indian women novelists. Currently he is on the advisory board of the International Journal of Transnational Literature (Australia) and chief editor of the Commonwealth Review (New Delhi), a biannual journal of new literatures in English.

Brian Dibble, emeritus professor of comparative literature, founded the Western Australian Institute of Technology's (later Curtin University's) School of English and Language Studies, in 1973, where he started Australia's first BA in Australian studies and its first in creative writing. In 1975 he hired Elizabeth Jolley to teach on the latter course. He has published his own poems and stories and edited two volumes of William Hart-Smith's poetry, a bicentennial anthology of Western Australian literature, and a collection of Australian folk humor/wisdom. His biography of Jolley, Doing Life, was published in 2008.

Kieran Dolin is a senior lecturer in English at the University of Western Australia, where he teaches Australian literature, literature and the law, and nineteenth-century studies. He is the author of two books, Fiction and the Law (1999) and A Critical Introduction to Law and Literature (2007). He has published articles on Australian fiction in Southerly, Westerly, and the Journal of Commonwealth Literature.

Gillian Dooley is an honorary research fellow at Flinders University in Adelaide, South Australia. Her publications include From a Tiny Corner in the House of Fiction: Conversations with Iris Murdoch (2003), as editor, and V. S. Naipaul, Man and Writer (2006), and she coedited Matthew Flinders' Private Journal 1803–1814 (2005). She has published essays on Doris Lessing, Iris Murdoch, V. S. Naipaul, and J. M. Coetzee, and is editor of Transnational Literature. She is currently writing a book on the novels and memoirs of J. M. Coetzee.

Marta Dvorak is professor of postcolonial literatures at the University of the New Sorbonne. She has published books on Nancy Huston, Carol Shields, and Ernest Buckler. Her most recent books are The Faces of Carnival in Anita Desai's

"In Custody" (2008), and Tropes and Territories: Short Fiction, Postcolonial Readings, Canadian Writings in Context, coedited with W. H. New (2007).

Juniper Ellis is professor of English at Loyola College in Maryland, where she teaches Maori, Pacific Islands, and US literature. Her book Tattooing the World: Pacific Designs in Print and Skin (2008) was made possible by Fulbright, NEH, and Andrew W. Mellon fellowships. She has published articles in journals including PMLA, Ariel, and Arizona Quarterly.

John Eustace is an associate professor in English at Acadia University in Wolfville, Nova Scotia, where he teaches postcolonial literature and theory. He has published articles on Joyce Cary, Peter Carey, Margaret Laurence, Rohinton Mistry, and Australian culture.

Patrick Evans is professor of English at the University of Canterbury, where he has taught New Zealand literature since 1978. His publications include two books and several articles on Janet Frame, The Penguin History of New Zealand Literature (1990), and The Long Forgetting: Post-Colonial Literary Culture in New Zealand (2007).

Maira Ferguson was born in Glasgow and taught in the Department of English at the University of Nebraska–Lincoln for many years where she was also the founding chair of women's studies. Her publications include Subject to Others: British Women Writers and Colonial Slavery 1670–1834 (1992) and Gender and Colonial Relations from Mary Wollstonecraft to Jamaica Kincaid (1994). Among her forthcoming books are "A Human Necklace": Paule Marshall's Fiction, 1959–2000 and Locked Up and Free: Female Political Prisoners from Mary Prince to Amina Lawal. She is currently professor of English at New York University in London.

Janice Fiamengo is associate professor of English at the University of Ottawa, where she teaches Canadian literature. She has recently published The Woman's Page: Journalism and Rhetoric in Early Canada (2008).

Roger Field is a senior lecturer in the Department of English at the University of the Western Cape. He has published a biography of Alex La Guma and coedited books on La Guma's early writing, and on landscape and memory (Trauma and Topography, 2000). His current research interests include the reception and appropriation of Constantine Cavafy in South African poetry and prose fiction.

Susan Alice Fischer is professor of English at Medgar Evers College of the City University of New York. She is coeditor of Changing English: An International Journal of English Teaching and book reviews editor of the online journal Literary London: Interdisciplinary Studies in the Representation of London. Her essays and reviews have appeared in The Swarming Streets: Twentieth Century Representations of London, and in Tulsa Studies in Women's Literature, the Women's Review of Books, Critical Engagements, and elsewhere. She is completing a book about contemporary women's London narratives.

Annie Gagliano, emeritus professor in the English Department of the University of Stellenbosch, specializes in African English-language fiction studies and, more broadly, postcolonial writing. She has published a detailed account of Dambudzo Marechera's full oeuvre in Achebe, Head, Marechera: On Power and Change in Africa (2000), as well as three journal articles and two book chapters on his work in essay collections. Since retiring from teaching in early 2008, she remains active as a researcher and in supervising dissertations.

Fernando Galván is professor of English literature at the University of Alcalá, Spain, and currently President of the European Society for the Study of English (ESSE). His most recent publications include essays on Caryl Phillips, J. M. Coetzee, and Anita Desai. His interview with Amit Chaudhuri was published in Wasafiri (1999).

Carole Gerson, a professor in the Department of English at Simon Fraser University, has published extensively on early Canadian women writers and Canadian literary history. She is one of the editors of the three-volume History of the Book in Canada (2004–7) and, with historian Veronica Strong-Boag, has co-authored two books on E. Pauline Johnson. Her new book, Canadian Women in Print, 1750–1918, was published in 2010.

D. C. R. A. Goonetilleke, emeritus professor of English, University of Kelaniya–Sri Lanka, has been international chair of the Association for Commonwealth Literature and Language Studies;

Henry Charles Chapman Visiting Fellow at the Institute of Commonwealth Studies in London; and guest professor at the University of Tübingen. His books include Developing Countries in British Fiction (1977), Images of the Raj (1988), Joseph Conrad: Beyond Culture and Background (1990), Joseph Conrad's "Heart of Darkness" (2007), Salman Rushdie (1998), and Sri Lankan English Literature and the Sri Lankan People 1917–2003 (2005).

Yogita Goyal is an assistant professor of English at the University of California, Los Angeles, where she specializes in African American, black Atlantic, and postcolonial studies. She has recently published essays and reviews on black diaspora fiction in Diaspora, Modern Fiction Studies, New Formations, and Wasafiri, and is currently completing a book that explores nationalism and literary form in black Atlantic literature.

Brenna Clarke Gray is a doctoral candidate and Canada Graduate Scholar in the Department of English at the University of New Brunswick. Her dissertation explores cultural responses to September 11 through the writing and visual art of Douglas Coupland.

Anna Guttman is assistant professor of postcolonial literature at Lakehead University. She is the author of The Nation of India in Contemporary Indian Literature (2007) and coeditor of The Global Literary Field (2007). Her current research examines the representations of Jews and Jewishness in South Asian literature.

Ambreen Hai teaches anglophone postcolonial and British literature at Smith College. She has published essays on Bapsi Sidhwa, Rudyard Kipling, E. M. Forster, Salman Rushdie, and Sara Suleri in a number of scholarly journals. Her book, Making Words Matter: The Agency of Colonial and Postcolonial Literature, is forthcoming from Ohio University Press.

Aparna Halpé is a doctoral candidate affiliated with the English Department and the Centre for South Asian Studies, University of Toronto. Her research is on the function of myth in contemporary postcolonial fiction from Africa, the Caribbean, South Asia and Southeast Asia. Her essays have appeared in the Canadian Review of Comparative Literature and in Across Cultures: Issues of Identity in Contemporary British and Sri Lankan Writing. Halpé is also a poet and her work can be found in Postcolonial Text and Channels.

Faye Hammill is senior lecturer in English at the University of Strathclyde in Scotland. Her research areas are Canadian literature and interwar middlebrow culture, and publications include Literary Culture and Female Authorship in Canada 1760–2000 (2003; winner of the Pierre Savard prize), Canadian Literature (2007), and Women, Celebrity and Literary Culture between the Wars (2007). She is editor of the British Journal of Canadian Studies and is currently leading the Middlebrow Network, funded by the Arts and Humanities Research Council.

Brecken Rose Hancock is a doctoral candidate at the University of New Brunswick. Her research areas include contemporary non-mimetic Canadian fiction and cultural theory. Her articles have appeared in Studies in Canadian Literature, the Canadian Journal of Irish Studies, and Early Modern Literary Studies.

Heike Härting is associate professor of English at the University of Montreal and is editor-in-chief of Postcolonial Text. She has coedited special issues of Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa, and the Middle East (2008) and University of Toronto Quarterly (2009). She has published recent articles in Studies in Canadian Literature and Comparative Studies of South Asia, Africa and the Middle East. Her book manuscript Unruly Metaphor: Nation, Body, and Diaspora in Contemporary Fiction in English Canada is currently under review.

Anthony J. Hassall is emeritus professor of English literature at James Cook University and honorary research consultant at the University of Queensland. He has written extensively on Australian fiction and eighteenth-century English fiction, including books on Henry Fielding's Tom Jones, Randolph Stow, and Peter Carey. He is the founding general editor of the University of Queensland Press's Studies in Australian Literature series.

Jonathan Heawood is Director of English PEN, which campaigned successfully for the amendment of the Racial and Religious Hatred Act (2006) and the repeal of the laws of blasphemous libel, seditious libel, criminal defamation, and obscene libel in the UK. He was previously editorial director of the Fabian Society and deputy literary editor of The Observer and wrote the introduction to a collection of George Orwell's Observer journalism.

Colin Hill teaches in the Department of English at the University of Toronto and is the director of the Canadian studies program at the university's Mississauga campus. He is author of several articles on Canadian literature and a forthcoming book on the interplay of modernism and realism in Canadian fiction. He is editor of a critical edition of Irene Baird's Waste Heritage and is currently editing editions of previously unpublished novels by Hugh MacLennan and Raymond Knister.

Gugu Hlongwane is an assistant professor of English at Saint Mary's University. Her essays on South African and Canadian literature appear in Ariel: A Review of International English Literature, Postcolonial Text, Studies in Canadian Literature, and the Journal of Literary Studies.

David Huddart is an associate professor in the Department of English at the Chinese University of Hong Kong. He is the author of two books: Homi K. Bhabha (2006) and Postcolonial Theory and Autobiography (2008).

Huma Ibrahim is associate professor at Zayed University and has published Bessie Head: Subversive Identities in Exile (1996). She has also edited and contributed to a collection, Emerging Perspectives on Bessie Head (2004). Her book Epistemology of Colonial/Postcolonial Violence is currently in press and she is working on The Other Woman: Sexuality Silence Spectacle and Punjabi Weave, a collection of twentieth-century Punjabi women's poetry in translation.

C. Lyn Innes worked as an assistant editor on Okike Magazine and coedited two collections of African short stories with Chinua Achebe. She published a study of his work, Chinua Achebe, in 1990. Her other books are The Devil's Own Mirror: The Irish and the African in Modern Literature (1990); Woman and Nation in Irish Literature and Society, 1880–1935 (1993); A History of Black and Asian Writing in Britain (2008); The Cambridge Introduction to Postcolonial Literatures in English (2007); and Ned Kelly (2008). She is emeritus professor of postcolonial literatures at the University of Kent, Canterbury, UK.

Douglas Ivison is an associate professor in the Department of English at Lakehead University in Thunder Bay, Ontario. He is the editor of Canadian Fantasy and Science-Fiction Writers (2002) and coeditor, with Justin D. Edwards, of Downtown Canada: Writing Canadian Cities (2005); he has published articles on Canadian literature and popular culture, among other topics, in books and journals, including Studies in Canadian Literature and English Studies in Canada.

Lyn Jacobs is an associate professor in humanities (Australian literature and Australian studies) and research fellow at Flinders University. She is a contributor to the Australian Literature Resource (Australian literary responses to Asia), the author of Against the Grain: Beverley Farmer's writing (2001), and of multiple analyses of Australian fiction, most recently an article on Tim Winton in A Companion to Australian Literature Since 1900 (2007).

Louis James is emeritus professor of English literature at the University of Kent. His publications on British and Commonwealth literature include Fiction for the Working Man, 1830–50 (1963), Caribbean Writing in English (1999), and The Victorian Novel (2006).

Sharanya Jayawickrama is a graduate of University College London and Cambridge University, where she wrote her PhD dissertation on Sri Lankan literature in English. Her main research interests are in postcolonial literatures and theory with a focus on South Asian literatures in English. Her articles appear in the Journal of Commonwealth Literature and in edited collections on black British fiction, postcolonial women's writing, and international children's literature. She is currently a lecturer in literatures in English at the University of the West Indies, St. Augustine.

Lawrence Jones is emeritus professor of English at the University of Otago. He was editor of the Journal of New Zealand Literature from 1990 to 2000 and has edited or coedited several books. His critical and historical writings on New Zealand literature include Barbed Wire and Mirrors: Essays on New Zealand Prose (1987, 1990), "The Novel" in The Oxford History of New Zealand Literature in English (1991, 1998), and Picking Up the Traces: The Making of a New Zealand Literary Culture 1932–1945 (2003). He is a trustee of the Janet Frame Literary Trust and a fellow of the New Zealand Academy of the Humanities.

Chelva Kanaganayakam is professor of English and Director of the Centre for South Asian Studies, University of Toronto. His publications include Counterrealism and Indo-Anglian Fiction (2002), Dark Antonyms and Paradise: The Poetry of Rienzi Crusz (1997), Configurations of Exile: South Asian Writers and Their Worlds (1995), and Structures of Negation: The Writings of Zulfikar Ghose (1993).

Jennifer Kelly teaches in the international Indigenous studies program at the University of Calgary. Her interests include Indigenous literatures and interpretive/pedagogical practices, Indigenous film, and research ethics. She is a coordinator (with Delia Cross Child, Ramona Big Head, and Georgette Fox) of "'You May Laugh': Surviving, Remembering, and Transforming Residential School Experience," with members of the Kainai Nation, southern Alberta.

Michelle Kelly is a graduate of the National University of Ireland, Galway and the University of York, where she is currently a teaching fellow in the Department of English and Related Literature. Her research interests are in the field of postcolonial fiction and autobiography, particularly South African literature, the relationship between literature and the law, especially human rights law, and literary and historical connections between Ireland and South Africa. She is currently at work on a book on confession in J. M. Coetzee's work.

Michelle Keown is lecturer in English literature at the University of Edinburgh. She has published widely on Maori, New Zealand, and Pacific writing and is the author of Postcolonial Pacific Writing: Representations of the Body (2005) and Pacific Islands Writing: The Postcolonial Literatures of Aotearoa/New Zealand and Oceania (2007). She has also published on diaspora theory and culture and is coeditor (with David Murphy and James Procter) of Comparing Postcolonial Diasporas (2009).

Khurram N. Khurshid is a doctoral candidate at the University of New Brunswick, Canada. His research areas include postcolonial literature and theory, colonial discourse, and Indian and Pakistani fiction. He grew up in Pakistan, where he taught English literature at various colleges of the Punjab University for a number of years. His dissertation explores Muslim consciousness in the fiction of Ahmed Ali, Attia Hosain, and Mumtaz Shahnawaz.

Neil Ten Kortenaar is an associate professor of English at the University of Toronto at Scarborough. He is the author of Self, Nation, Text in Salman Rushdie's "Midnight's Children" (2004) and has published numerous articles on African and Caribbean literature in PMLA, Ariel, English Studies in Canada, and other journals.

Sue Kossew is associate professor of English at the University of New South Wales in Sydney. Her work is in contemporary postcolonial literature, with a focus on South Africa and Australia, on gender issues and women writers. Her publications include Pen and Power: A Post-Colonial Reading of J. M. Coetzee and André Brink (1996), Critical Essays on J. M. Coetzee (1998), Re-Imagining Africa: New Critical Perspectives (2001), edited with Dianne Schwerdt, and Writing Woman, Writing Place: Australian and South African Fiction (2004). She is editing a collection of essays and interviews on Kate Grenville to be published by Rodopi Press.

Bénédicte Ledent teaches Caribbean literature at the University of Liège, Belgium. She is the author of Caryl Phillips (2002) and has edited several volumes of essays. The latest, in collaboration with Kathleen Gyssels, is entitled The Caribbean Writer as Warrior of the Imaginary (2008).

Judith Leggatt is an associate professor and chair of the English Department at Lakehead University. She has published articles on postcolonial pedagogy, Lee Maracle, Salman Rushdie, Jane Eyre, and the challenges of reading First Nations literature through a postcolonial lens. Her present research explores the representation of First Nations peoples in science fiction, and she is currently working on a book-length study of Indigenous science fiction.

Peter Leman is a PhD candidate and Jacob K. Javits Fellow in the Department of English at the University of California, Irvine. His dissertation examines literary appropriations of traditional orature in East Africa in relationship to colonial and postcolonial law, particularly in its authoritarian forms. He has presented papers on postcolonial literature and law in the UK, Canada, and the US, and his work on the poet Okot p'Bitek is forthcoming in Research in African Literatures.

Liew-Geok Leong taught at the Department of English Language and Literature, National University of Singapore, from 1981 to 2002. The author of two collections of poetry, Love Is Not Enough (1991) and Women without Men (2000), she edited More than Half the Sky: Creative Writings by Thirty Singaporean Women (1998). She contributed 24 entries on Singaporean literature in English to Singapore: The Encyclopedia (2006), and wrote the Literature in English section for Literature in Singapore (2007).

Andrew Lesk is an assistant professor at the University of Toronto, where he teaches Canadian literature. He has published widely on Canadian fiction (including two articles on Sinclair Ross), theory, film, and cultural studies.

Ping-Hui Liao is distinguished professor of literary and critical studies at National Tsinghua University, Taiwan.

Maria Helena Lima is a Brazilian who is a professor of English and comparative literature at the State University of New York at Geneseo, teaching Caribbean and women's studies. She translated and coedited with Miriam Alves a bilingual anthology of short fiction by Afro-Brazilian Women, Women Righting/Mulheres Escrevendo (2005). Forthcoming are her entries on Andrea Levy, Dorothea Smartt, and Meera Syal for the Dictionary of Literary Biography special issue on black British literature.

Shao-Pin Luo teaches at Dalhousie University in Halifax, Canada. She has published articles in book collections and in such journals as Critique, Commonwealth Literature, and Dalhousie Review as well as an English translation of a contemporary Chinese novel. Her research interests are in diaspora and translation studies.

Gerald Lynch is the author of Stephen Leacock: Humour and Humanity (1988), The One and the Many: English-Canadian Short Story Cycles (2001), and four books of fiction. He has also edited a number of essay collections, critical editions, and anthologies. He teaches English at the University of Ottawa.

Lynne Macedo teaches Caribbean and contemporary literature and film at the University of Warwick. Her recent publications include No Land, No Mother, coedited with K. Karran (2007), contributions to The Oxford Companion to Black British History (2007) and Fiction and Film: The Influence of Cinema on Writers from Jamaica and Trinidad (2003).

Obi Maduakor, formerly professor of English at the University of Nigeria, Nsukka, is currently teaching English as adjunct professor at Tyndale University College, Toronto. He is the author of Wole Soyinka: An Introduction to His Writing, and over 50 articles in learned journals.

Sylvia Martin is an honorary associate of the School of English, Journalism and European Languages, University of Tasmania. Her biographies of Australian women include Passionate Friends: Mary Fullerton, Mabel Singleton and Miles Franklin and Ida Leeson: A Life, which was the recipient of the Magarey Prize for Biography in 2008.

Andrew Mccann is associate professor in the Department of English at Dartmouth College. He is author of Cultural Politics in the 1790s: Literature, Radicalism and the Public Sphere (1999), Marcus Clarke's Bohemia: Literature and Modernity in Colonial Melbourne (2004), and two novels, The White Body of Evening (2002) and Subtopia (2005).

John Mcleod is professor of Postcolonial and Diaspora Literatures at the School of English, University of Leeds, England. He is the author of Beginning Postcolonialism (2000), Postcolonial London: Rewriting the Metropolis (2004), and J. G. Farrell (2007), and has edited The Revision of Englishness (2004) and The Routledge Companion to Postcolonial Studies (2007).

Barbara Milech, associate professor at Curtin University, teaches narrative, cultural, and feminist studies. She has published widely on Elizabeth Jolley, including essays in the Journal of the Association of Australian Literature, Antipodes (USA), Australian Studies (UK), and the Hungarian Journal of English and American Studies, along with an extensive bibliography, Elizabeth Jolley: A Bibliography 1965–2007; her most recent article appeared in Australian Literary Studies (2008).

Katherine Miller is an English instructor at Concordia University College and Grant MacEwan University in Edmonton, Alberta. She has published book reviews in Canadian Literature and an article on Bharati Mukherjee's Desirable Daughters in Studies in Canadian Literature.

Rajeswari Mohan is associate professor of English at Haverford College. Her articles on fictions of empire, postcolonial literature, and Indian film have appeared in Textual Practice, Journal of Commonwealth Literature, Genders, and College Literature. She is currently working on a book about narratives of women's militancy.

Linda Morra is an associate professor at Bishop's University. Her publications include articles about Jack Hodgins, Mordecai Richler (Studies in Canadian Literature), and Emily Carr (Canadian Literature), and an interview with George Elliott Clarke (Open Letter). Corresponding Influence: Selected Letters of Emily Carr and Ira Dilworth, was published in 2006, and Troubling Tricksters: Revisioning Critical Conversations, coedited with Deanna Reder, appeared in 2009.

Laura Moss is an associate professor of Canadian and postcolonial literatures at the University of British Columbia and the Director of the UBC Canadian Studies Centre. She is the coeditor, with Cynthia Sugars, of Canadian Literature in English: Texts and Contexts, vols. 1 and 2 (2008–9), and editor of Is Canada Postcolonial? Unsettling Canadian Literature (2003).

Miguel Mota is associate professor of English at the University of British Columbia. His research interests are in post-1950 British literature and in the relationships between film and print cultures. His book Invisible Texts: The Screenplay in Print Culture is forthcoming from Manchester University Press.

Evan Mwangi teaches anglophone African literature at Northwestern University. He is the co-author of The Columbia Guide to East African Literature in English since 1945 (2007) and author of Africa Writes Back to Self: Metafiction, Gender, Sexuality (2009).

Supriya M. Nair is an associate professor in the Department of English at Tulane University. She is the author of Caliban's Curse: George Lamming and the Revisioning of History (1996) and is currently completing a book on anglophone Caribbean literature. She has published essays and articles on African and Caribbean literature.

William New is University Killam Professor Emeritus at the University of British Columbia. His more than 40 books include Dreams of Speech and Violence (1987), Land Sliding (1997), Borderlands (1998), Reading Mansfield and Metaphors of Form (1999), The Encyclopedia of Literature in Canada (2002), Grandchild of Empire (2003), and A History of Canadian Literature (2nd edn. 2003). He is also the author of nine books of poetry and four books for children, and for 17 years he edited the critical quarterly Canadian Literature. He was awarded the Lorne Pierce Medal of the Royal Society of Canada and the Governor General's Prize in International Canadian Literature. In 2006 he was named an Officer of the Order of Canada.

Stephanie Newell teaches African and postcolonial literatures at the University of Sussex, England. She has published extensively on West African literature and colonial newspaper history.

Andrew Hock Soon Ng teaches Theories of Authorship, Contemporary Fiction, and Postcolonial Literature at Monash University, Malaysia. He is the author of Dimensions of Monstrosity in Contemporary Narratives (2004) and Interrogating Interstices (2007), and the editor of Asian Gothic (2008) and The Poetics of Shadows (2008).

Ode Ogede is professor of English at North Carolina Central University. His books include Art, Society, and Performance: Igede Praise Poetry (1997), Ayi Kwei Armah, Radical Iconoclast: Pitting Imaginary Worlds against the Actual (2000), Achebe and the Politics of Representation: Form against Itself from Colonial Conquest to Post-Independence Disillusionment (2001), Teacher Commentary on Student Papers (2002), and Achebe's "Things Fall Apart": Reader's Guide (2007).

James Ogude is a professor of African literature at the University of the Witwatersrand, South Africa. He is the author of Ngugi's Novels and African History: Narrating the Nation (1999). He has also edited several books, including a compilation of essays of Es'kia Mphahlele. His recent book (edited with Joyce Nyairo) is Urban Legends, Colonial Myths: Popular Culture and Literature in East Africa (2007). He has published widely on Ngugi and popular culture in leading journals, including the Canadian Journal of African Studies and African Affairs.

Sanya Osha holds a PhD in philosophy and is a senior researcher at the School for Graduate Studies, University of South Africa. He has also published extensively in the fields of anthropology, politics, and critical theory. He is the author of Kwasi Wiredu and Beyond: The Text, Writing and Thought in Africa (2005) and Ken Saro-Wiwa's Shadow: Politics, Nationalism and the Ogoni Protest Movement (2007).

Ruth Panofsky, professor in the Department of English at Ryerson University in Toronto, specializes in Canadian literature and culture, publishing history, and textual studies. She has published widely on Adele Wiseman, most recently The Force of Vocation: The Literary Career of Adele Wiseman (2006). She is also a poet whose 2007 volume, Laike and Nahum: A Poem in Two Voices, received the Helen and Stan Vine Canadian Jewish Book Award for Poetry.

Uma Parameswaran was born and educated in India. She has written extensively on Indo-English and diasporic literature, and on postcolonial topics. Her most recent collections of critical essays are Writing the Diaspora and Early Fiction of Salman Rushdie. She has lived in Canada for many years, and recently retired from the University of Winnipeg. She has published 10 books of creative writing, including the award-winning What Was Always Hers (1999).

Makarand Paranjape is a critic, poet, fiction writer, and literary columnist with over 30 books, 100 published academic papers, and more than 200 reviews, notes, and popular articles to his credit. He is currently professor of English at Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. His latest book is Another Canon: Indian Texts and Traditions in English (2009).

Laura Pearson studies and writes about various aspects of South and East Asia, migration, and postcolonial literature. She recently completed her MA in English and creative writing at the University of New Brunswick.

Donald E. Pease, professor of English and Avalon Foundation Chair of the Humanities at Dartmouth College, is an authority on nineteenth- and twentieth-century American literature and literary theory. He is the author of Visionary Compacts: American Renaissance Writings in Cultural Context (1987) and The New American Exceptionalism (2009), and coeditor (with Amy Kaplan) of The Cultures of United States Imperialism (1993).

Joshua Prescott is a PhD candidate at the University of New Brunswick. His research explores the relationship between sexuality, citizenship, and nation in contemporary Canadian Caribbean fiction, with a particular interest in the writing of Dionne Brand, Shani Mootoo, and M. NourbeSe Philip.

Clive Probyn is professor of English at Monash University, Victoria, Australia. He has coedited all of Henry Handel Richardson's novels, translations, and letters, as well as the letters of Henry and Sarah Fielding, and is the author of several books on Jonathan Swift, a study of the English eighteenth-century novel, and a biography of the linguist and philosopher James Harris. He is a fellow of the Australian Academy of the Humanities.

Harshana Rambukwella completed a doctoral study on nationalist discourse in Sri Lankan anglophone and Sinhala-language writing at the University of Hong Kong in 2008. He continues to work as a researcher at the same university and teaches part-time in Hong Kong.

Archana Rampure is a postdoctoral research fellow at Dalhousie University, where she is affiliated with the Department of English and the School of Information Management. She locates her work at the intersection of cultural studies, postcolonialism, and contemporary popular culture.

Ruby Ramraj teaches in the Department of English, University of Calgary. Her areas of interest are Victorian fiction, science fiction, and postcolonial studies. She has published articles on Neil Bissoondath, Amitav Ghosh, Sara Suleri, Olive Senior, Isaac Asimov, Robert Sawyer, and Nalo Hopkinson.

Victor J. Ramraj is professor of English at the University of Calgary. From 1990 to 2001, he was editor of Ariel: A Review of International English Literature, and he has numerous publications on international English Literature, including an early book on Mordecai Richler (1983). He is editor of Concert of Voices: An Anthology of World Writing in English (1995), and coeditor of Post-independence Voices in South Asian Writing (2001), with Alamgir Hashmi and Malashri Lal. He is currently studying the politics of differences and affinities in international English literature and working on theories of mimicry in postcolonial literatures.

Ruvani Ranasinha is senior lecturer in postcolonial literatures at the Department of English, King's College London. She specializes in postcolonial literature and theory, especially relating to South Asia and the South Asian diaspora. Her publications include Hanif Kureishi (2002) and South Asian Writers in Twentieth Century Britain: Culture in Translation (2007).

Don Randall is associate professor in the Faculty of Humanities and Letters at Bilkent University in Ankara, Turkey. Having received his PhD from the University of Alberta in 1995, he subsequently held two postdoctoral fellowships in Canada before beginning his Bilkent career in 1999. His main research areas are postcolonial literature and British imperial literature, and he has published numerous articles in international journals. He is the author of two books: Kipling's Imperial Boy: Adolescence and Cultural Hybridity (2000) and David Malouf (2007).

Antje M. Rauwerda is an assistant professor of postcolonial literature and theory at Goucher College in Baltimore, USA. She has published in Antipodes, Canadian Literature, Continuum, In-Between, the Journal of Commonwealth Literature, the Journal of Postcolonial Writing, Victorian Literature and Culture, and the South Asian Review. Her current work is on expatriate fiction.

Norman Ravvin is chair of Concordia University's Institute for Canadian Jewish Studies. His books include the novel Lola by Night and the story collection Sex, Skyscrapers and Standard

Yiddish. His essays on Canadian and American Jewish writing appear in A House of Words: Jewish Writing, Identity and Memory. He is also the author of Hidden Canada: An Intimate Travelogue and coeditor, with Richard Menkis, of The Canadian Jewish Studies Reader.

Deanna Reder, of Cree-Métis heritage, holds a joint appointment as assistant professor in Simon Fraser University's First Nations studies program and the Department of English. Her main fields of study are Indigenous literary theories and autobiography theory, with a particular focus on Cree and Métis life writing. She is series editor for the Aboriginal Studies series at Wilfrid Laurier University Press.

Josna Rege is associate professor of literature at Worcester State College in Massachusetts, where she teaches postcolonial, world, and contemporary British literatures, and is affiliated with the women's studies and global studies programs. Her book, Colonial Karma: Self, Action and Nation in the Indian English Novel, was published in 2004, and she is currently studying new forms of transnational cultural production.

Constance S. Richards is the author of On the Winds and Waves of Imagination: Transnational Feminism and Literature, which examines, from a postcolonial critical perspective, issues of identity in the works of Virginia Woolf, Zoë Wicomb, and Alice Walker. She is also the author of several essays, including one on Wicomb and Michelle Cliff published in Research in African Literatures. She teaches English, women's and gender studies, and African American and African Studies at Ohio Wesleyan University and Ohio State University.

Ian Richards is an associate professor at Osaka City University, Japan. He is the author of To Bed at Noon: The Life and Art of Maurice Duggan (1997) and Dark Sneaks In: Essays on the Short Fiction of Janet Frame (2004). He maintains a website on New Zealand literature at <http://no-frillsnzlit.angelfire.com/index.html>.

Christian Riegel is associate professor of English and head of Department at Campion College at the University of Regina. He has published Twenty-First Century Canadian Writers (2007); Response to Death: The Literary Work of Mourning

(2005); Writing Grief: Margaret Laurence and the Work of Mourning (2003); A Sense of Place: Re-Evaluating Regionalism in Canadian and American Writing (1997); and Challenging Territory: The Writing of Margaret Laurence (1997). He has published essays on a number of Canadian and American writers, and also writes poetry and fiction.

Leah Rosenberg is an associate professor in the English Department at the University of Florida where she teaches Caribbean and Atlantic studies. She is the author of Nationalism and the Formation of Caribbean Literature (2007).

Anjali Gera Roy is professor in the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences at the Indian Institute of Technology Kharagpur. She has published Bhangra Moves: From Ludhiana to London and Beyond (2009); Partitioned Lives: Narratives of Home, Displacement and Resettlement (2008); Rohinton Mistry: An Anthology of Recent Criticism (2007); Wole Soyinka: An Anthology of Recent Criticism (2006); New Directions in African Writing (2005); and Three Great African Writers: Achebe, Soyinka, Tutuola (2001), as well as several essays on postcolonial literature, culture, and theory.

Meg Samuelson is an associate professor in the English Department, Stellenbosch University. She has published articles on Yvonne Vera's fiction in collections and journals such as Sign and Taboo: Perspectives on the Poetic Fiction of Yvonne Vera, Research in African Literatures, English Studies in Africa, and African Identities. Her other research focuses on the politics of gender in South African literature, with publications including her study Remembering the Nation, Dismembering Women? Stories of the South African Transition (2007), and on African urban cultures and the Indian Ocean world.

Elaine Savory is associate professor of literature at the New School in New York City. She coedited Out of the Kumbula: Caribbean Women and Literature (1990), and has written flame tree time (1993), Jean Rhys (1998), and The Cambridge Introduction to Jean Rhys (2009), as well as many essays on Caribbean and African literatures. She is presently writing a study of anglophone elegiac poetry from the Atlantic rim.

Kamila Shamsie is the author of five novels, including Kartography and Burnt Shadows, which have publishers in 18 countries. She reviews for a number of publications, including The Guardian, The Telegraph, and the TLS. Between 2000 and 2006 she had a recurring position as visiting assistant professor of English at Hamilton College, New York.

Muneeza Shamsie is a Pakistani writer and critic and editor of three pioneering anthologies of Pakistani English literature. She contributes to the online Literary Encyclopedia, is the Pakistan bibliographical representative for the Journal of Commonwealth Literature, is managing editor of the forthcoming Oxford Companion to the Literatures of Pakistan, and is writing Hybrid Tapestries: The Development of Pakistani English Literature.

Paul Sharrad is associate professor in English literatures at the University of Wollongong in Australia. He has written widely on postcolonial fiction and has a special interest in writing from the Pacific and India.

Susan Sheridan is adjunct professor of English and women's studies at Flinders University. Her books include Christina Stead (1988), Along the Faultlines: Sex, Race and Nation in Australian Women's Writing 1880s to 1930s (1995), and Who Was That Woman? The "Australian Women's Weekly" in the Postwar Years (2002); and, as editor, Grafts: Feminist Cultural Criticism (1988), Debutante Nation: Feminism Contests the 1890s (1993, with Sue Rowley and Susan Magarey), and Thea Astley's Fictional Worlds (2006, with Paul Genoni).

Rezzan Kocaöner Silkü is an associate professor of English literature at Ege University, Izmir, Turkey, where she received her PhD in 1996 for her dissertation on Doris Lessing's novels. Her teaching and research areas range from Victorian fiction to postcolonial studies. She has published on George Eliot, Doris Lessing, Virginia Woolf, Joseph Conrad, Chinua Achebe, Arundhati Roy, Flora Nwapa, and she is the author of Industrialization, Modernity and the Woman Question.

Tony Simoes da Silva teaches in the School of English Literatures, Philosophy and Languages at the University of Wollongong, Australia. He is the author of The Luxury of Despair: George

Lamming's Fiction as Decolonizing Project (2000), coeditor of Interactions: Essays on Literature and Culture in the Asia-Pacific (2000), and of numerous journal articles and book chapters on African writing in English and Portuguese.

Hyacinth Simpson is an associate professor in the Department of English and the MA program in immigration and settlement studies at Ryerson University in Toronto, where she specializes in Caribbean literature and diaspora studies. She is the editor of MaComère, the international journal of the Association of Caribbean Women Writers and Scholars. She has published in numerous journals, and has completed an edited book of essays on Caribbean migration, transnationalism and diaspora.

Amardeep Singh is associate professor of English at Lehigh University, where he teaches anglophone postcolonial and modern British literature. He has published a book, Literary Secularism: Religion and Modernity in Twentieth-Century Fiction (2006), and essays on E. M. Forster, James Joyce, colonial modernist prefaces, and the politics of naming in the South Asian diaspora. In 2008, he coedited a special issue of South Asian Review entitled "Imagining South Asia." He is currently working on a book-length analysis of the films of Mira Nair.

Eric D. Smith is assistant professor at the University of Alabama in Huntsville, where he teaches courses on anglophone postcolonial and modern/postmodern British literatures. His work appears in journals such as Genre, Modern Fiction Studies, Critique, James Joyce Quarterly, Journal of Narrative Theory, Ariel, and Journal of Commonwealth Literature.

Rowland Smith was born and raised in South Africa. A former Rhodes Scholar, he had a distinguished career as a professor of English and senior administrator at three Canadian universities: Dalhousie University, Wilfrid Laurier University, and the University of Calgary, where he was Dean of Humanities at the time of his death in 2008, shortly after submitting his entry for this volume. His many scholarly publications include a monograph on Roy Campbell and two edited collections, including Critical Essays on Nadine Gordimer (1990).