PREFACE

Amongst the decisions which appear in this volume are two rendered in arbitrations between the United States of America and France, and Argentina and Chile. The manner in which they have been reprinted reflects the policy, mentioned in the Preface to volume 36, of, wherever possible, making available the full original content of judgments and awards. They are preceded by summaries which, I hope, readers will find even more helpful than the division (hitherto customary in these volumes) of cases into "Facts" and "Held". It will take some time before all cases can be treated in this manner, which explains why some appear in the old and some in the new form.

In fairness both to those who are named as "Contributors" and to those who, though not so named, have made a material editorial contribution, some explanation should be given of the list of "Contributors" which appears at p. vii of this volume and of others in this series. The list acknowledges contributions of various kinds. In some instances, the contributor has found and given full editorial preparation to the material attributed to him; in others, he has simply provided the original text which has subsequently been translated and prepared for publication by someone else; and in yet others, particularly where long international decisions are involved, the person identified is the one who has prepared the summary of, and edited, the text. Some of these tasks are more exacting than others. But every aspect is essential. To all those who appear in the list of "Contributors", in this volume as in others, and whatever the extent of their contribution, I express my warmest thanks.

In addition I remain as always deeply grateful to those upon whom I regularly rely for essential help in the preparation of these volumes: Dr. Gillian White; Mrs. A. B. Lyons; Mrs. E. E. Jansen; Mrs. S. Rainbow; Messrs. Butterworth & Co. Ltd.; and Messrs. R. J. Acford, Ltd.
