

SANDSTONE HOLLOW

—Transformation of a Mountain Village

TANG FENG-CHANG

SANDSTONE HOLLOW

— Transformation of a Mountain Village

Tang Feng-chang

FOREIGN LANGUAGES PRESS
PEKING 1975

沙 石 峪

唐凤章 著

志援、兰辉插图

*

外文出版社出版（北京）

1975年（32开）第一版

编号：（英）17050—92

00080

17—E—1363P

Photographs by
CHIH YUAN and LAN-HUI

Printed in the People's Republic of China

The village of Sandstone Hollow.

Sandstone Hollow leading members at political study.

Wang Kuo-fan (third from left, front row), secretary of the Tsunhua County Party committee and member of the Chinese Communist Party Central Committee, studying the long-range plan for remaking Sandstone Hollow's hills together with the Party branch secretary Chang Kuei-shun (second from left, front row) and other brigade cadres and members.

Young people learn Sandstone Hollow's revolutionary tradition from the old folks.

Chang Kuei-shun does not leave work to others.

Rocky slopes being carved to give way to garden-like farmland.

Chang Kuei-shun teaches the educated youths farming skills.

Crops grow luxuriantly in the "pace-setting field."

Laying a pipeline to conduct the water.

Cistern hewn out
of the rocky hill
face.

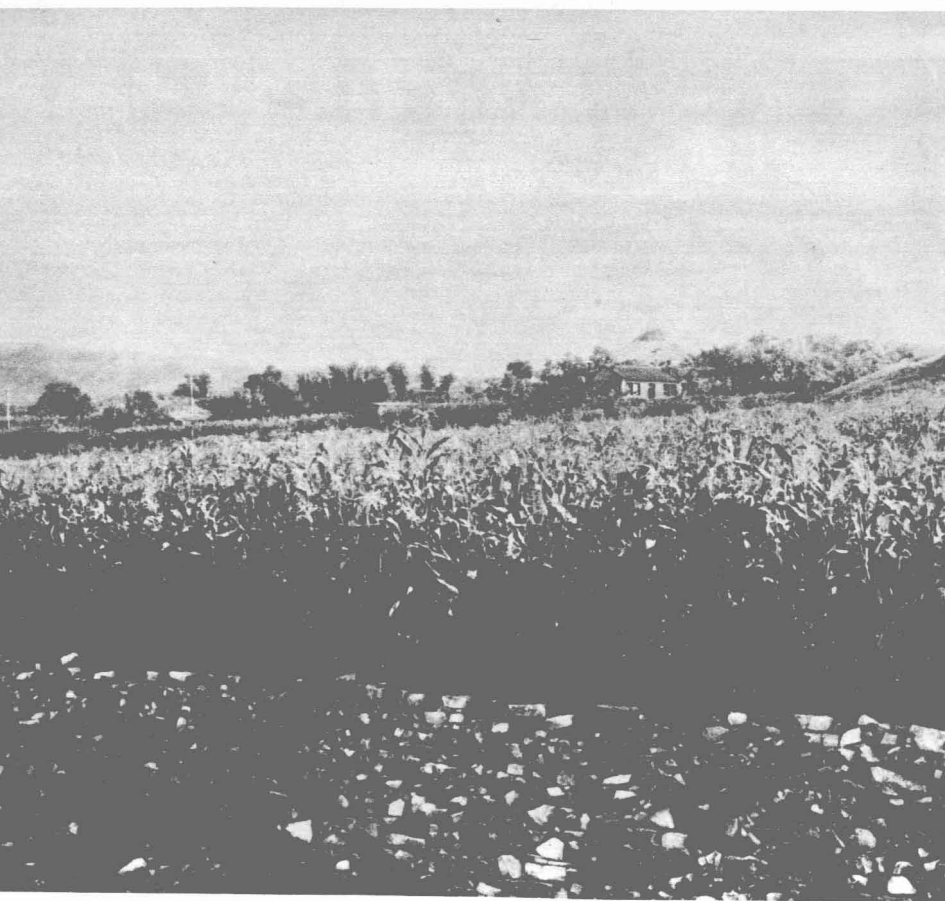

Plenty of clear water
is led up the hillsides.

Pumps now benefit
this village where water was once "as precious as oil."

The former rock-bound East Gully has become a granary.