- (a) Why doesn't the writer usually help his wife do the housework?
- (b) Why did he have to do the housework two weeks ago?
- (c) What did he cook for himself?
- (d) How long did he have to do the housework for?
- (e) What is he thinking of giving his wife?

2. Read the following passage and then answer the questions below. You should answer each question in not more than one sentence.

When friends come to visit us in the evening, they spend their time telling us that they are in a hurry and looking at their watches. It isn't that our friends are all very busy, it is just that we haven't got a television. People think that we are very strange. "But what do you do in the evenings?" they are always asking. The answer is simple. Both my wife and I have hobbies. We certainly don't spend our evenings staring at the walls. My wife enjoys cooking and painting and often attends evening classes in foreign languages. This is particularly useful as we always go abroad for our holidays. I collect stamps and am always busy with my collection. Both of us enjoy listening to music and playing chess together.

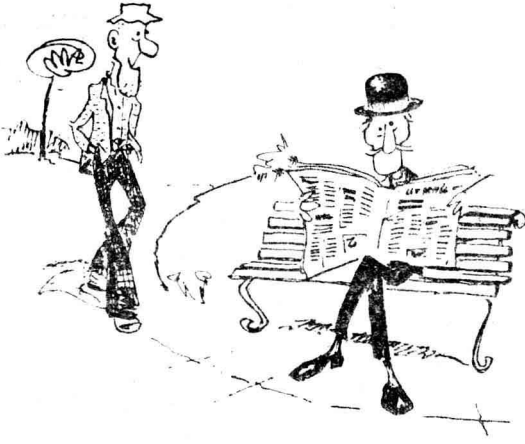

Sometimes there are power cuts and we have no electricity in the house. This does not worry us as we just light candles and carry on with what we were doing before. Our friends are lost – no television! – so they don't know what to do. On such evenings our house is very full as they all come to us. They all have a good time. Instead of sitting in silence in front of the television, everybody talks and plays games. Yes, life is possible without television!

- (a) Why do the writer's friends seem busy when they visit them in the evening?
- (b) How are the writer's wife's hobbies useful?
- (c) Why is the writer not worried when there are power cuts?
- (d) How do the writer's friends feel when there is no electricity?
- (e) What lessons do the writer's friends learn from an evening at his house without television?

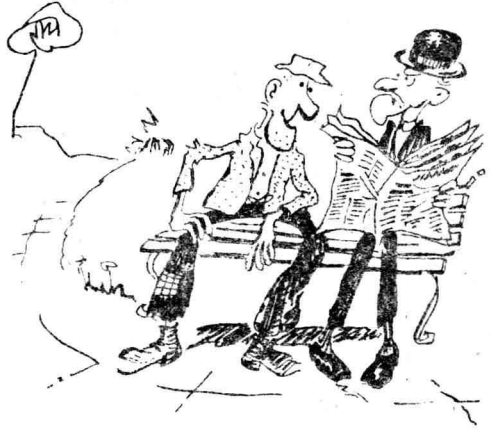

3. A friend of yours is arriving by air to spend a holiday with you. Unfortunately, you will not be able to meet him/her at the airport. Write a letter to him/her to apologize for this and explain why you cannot come to the airport. Give him/her clear instructions about how to get to your house. Your letter should be correctly set out with the address. Use between 100 and 120 words.
