The year of 1999 is Ji-Mao year according to China lunar calendar, which is also traditionally called the year of rabbit. The first design follows the clay rabbit kneaded by Mr. Zhang Chang, who is the forth descendants of the famous clay sculptor Mr. Zhang. The rabbit in the first design looks so mild and cute that people would like to hold it in arms, being ready to jump out. The second design is from a Chinese characters meaning rabbit written in the cursive hand from Dictionary of Five Written Styles with a paper cut of the Moon as the background. The whole design makes a good use of a pattern contrast of tranquility and vigor, implying a vivid animal rabbit being gentle when staying motionless but very adorable when jumping around.
