124. 三 兄 弟

The Three Brothers

从前有个父亲，他惟一的财产就是祖上传下来的房子。他的三个儿子都想得到它，父亲不知道如何才好。终于，他让儿子们出去各学一门手艺，谁的本事最高，房子就归谁。

儿子们都很赞同这个主意。老大想当马掌匠，老二想成为理发师，老三打算学击剑。他们约好了一同归来的时间，离开了家。

他们分别遇上了名师，学到了过硬的本领。马掌匠能为国王的马钉掌，理发师给达官贵人修面，小弟努力地学习击剑。

约定的时间到了，三兄弟按时回到了父亲的身边。他们正在商量如何展示他们的手艺。这时，一只兔子突然跑过来。理发师端起脸盆和肥皂，边跑边给兔子修剪了胡子，而且没有伤到兔子。父亲很满意。

不久，一位先生驾着马车疾驰而来。马掌匠拽着飞奔的马，取下它的四块马掌，换上新的。父亲赞赏了他。

这时，第三个儿子让父亲看看他的表演。天正好下起了倾盆大雨，老三抽出他的剑在头顶挥舞，身上竟是滴水不沾。父亲决定把房子给他。

两位哥哥对此满意。他们三人相亲相爱，一起留在这所房子里，依靠他们的手艺过着幸福的生活。最后他们一起去世，合葬在一起。

There was once a man who had three sons, and nothing else in the world but the house in which he lived. Now each of the sons wished to have the house after his father's death; but the father loved them all alike, and did not know what to do; he did not wish to sell the house, because it had belonged to his forefathers, else he might have divided the money amongst them. At last he conceived a plan, and he said to his sons: "Go into the world, and try each of you to learn a trade, and, when you all come back, he who makes the best masterpiece shall have the house."

The sons were well content with this, and the eldest determined to be a blacksmith, the second a barber, and the third a fencing-master. They fixed a time when they should all come home again, and then each went his way.

It chanced that they all found skillful masters, who taught them their trades well. The blacksmith had to shoe the King's horses, and he thought to himself: "The house is mine, without doubt." The barber shaved only distinguished people, and he too already looked upon the house as his own. The fencing-master suffered many a blow, but he grit his teeth, and let nothing vex him; "for," said he to himself, "if you are afraid of a blow, you'll never win the house."

When the appointed time had gone by, the three brothers came back home to their father; but they did not know how to find the best opportunity for showing their skill, so they sat down and consulted together. As they were sitting thus, all at once a hare came running across the field. "Ah, ha, just in time!" said the barber. So he took his basin and soap, and lathered away until the hare drew near; then he soaped and shaved off the hare's whiskers whilst he was running at the top of his speed, and did not even cut his skin or injure a hair on his body. "Well done!" said the old man, "If the others do not make a great effort, the house is yours."

Soon after, up came a nobleman in his coach, dashing along at full speed. "Now you shall see what I can do, father," said the blacksmith; so away he ran after the coach, took all four shoes off the feet of one of the horses whilst he was galloping, and put on four new shoes without stopping him. "You are a fine fellow and as clever as your brother," said his father; "I do not know to which I ought to give the house."

Then the third son said: "Father, let me have my turn, if you please;" and, as it was beginning to rain, he drew his sword, and flourished it backwards and forwards above his head so fast that not a drop fell upon him. It rained still harder and harder, till at last it came down in torrents; but he only flourished his sword faster and faster, and remained as dry as if he were sitting in a house. When his father saw this he was amazed, and said: "This is the masterpiece, the house is yours!"

His brothers were satisfied with this, as was agreed beforehand; and, as they loved one another very much, they all three stayed together in the house, followed their trades, and, as they had learnt them so well and were so clever, they earned a great deal of money. Thus they lived together happily until they grew old; and at last, when one of them fell sick and died, the two others grieved so sorely about it that they also fell ill, and soon after died. And because they had been so clever, and had loved one another so much, they were all laid in the same grave.
