Subject: Chinese food

Dear Rosemary,

Nice to get your e-mail. You want to know something about Chinese food. It's an interesting subject. Let me tell you something about it.

In the northern China, people there like to eat noodles and dumplings. But in the southern China, people like to eat rice. In the morning, people usually have porridge (粥) for their breakfast. But things are different for the young people. They like to have bread and milk, and sometimes eggs and fruit, for their breakfast. As for lunch, the working people usually have it in their work places. And children usually have it at school. People usually have meat, fish, eggs and vegetables for their lunch. There are all kinds of vegetables in China. Chinese people usually have supper at home with their family. And mothers usually cook supper. The Chinese don't often eat out. Usually people have the same food for supper as their lunch.

Most Chinese people like to drink tea. There are two kinds of tea in China. They are black tea and green tea. I like green tea very much. We have tea with nothing in it. It's quite different from you. I know you usually have tea with sugar, and sometimes with milk. Right? But many children like to drink Coke and all kinds of fruit juice. They also like hamburgers.

I like Chinese foods and drinks very much. But I also want to know something about your country and your way of life. Hope to hear from you soon.

Best wishes!

Love from

Zhang Jie
