PREFACE

Jinan is the capital and political, economical, scientific and cultural center of Shandong Province. It has an area of 8,227 square kilometers and a population of 5.32 million. Under its jurisdiction there are five urban districts, a city and four counties. The Yellow River flows through the province and Mount Tai rises in the southern part of it. In 1990 the State Council designated it as a part of the Coastal Economic Development Zone. Jinan is named by the central government a model for its cleanness and listed among the top 50 cities with the highest economic indexes and among the 40 best cities for environmental protection in China.

Jinan has a history of more than 2,600 years and is the birthplace of Longshan Culture. There are many historic and scenic sites such as Daming Lake, Baotu Spring, Five-Dragon Pool, 1,000-Buddha Mountain, Lingyan Temple, Wufeng Mountain and Simen Pagoda. The area has a great number of springs. In ancient times Jinan was described as "every house has a spring and sweeping willow trees."

Transport and communications are convenient. Two main railway lines from Beijing to Shanghai and from Qingdao to Jinan join in Jinan. Two dozen domestic and international air routes radiate from the well-equipped airport; a new expressway has shortened the travel time by four hours between Jinan and Qingdao. Telephone, telex and telegraph can reach 210 cities in 158 countries and regions. A network of international postal service covers more than 70 countries and regions.

Jinan's industries of machinery, textiles, metallurgy, chemistry, light industry, foodstuffs, building materials and automobiles are the best in Shandong Province. They also take an important place in the whole country. The 2,000 industrial enterprises produce more than 80 major products such as heavy duty trucks, machine tools, large-size presses, boilers, knitwear, beer and tonic medicine. Among famous local farm products are Zhangqiu green Chinese onion, white lotus roots, crystal rice, haw, walnuts and jade apricots. The commerce and trade districts on Quancheng Road, from Daguan Yuan to the People's Market, on Jinger Road and at Qinghe have everything one needs. Qilu Hotel, Shungeng Mountain Villa and Minghu Hotel provide excellent service.

The environment for investment is very good and export-oriented enterprises are flourishing. Jinan enjoys a number of preferential policies given by the central government to coastal economic development zones. It has a high-tech industry zone approved by the central government and a processing zone for exported goods approved by the provincial government. The 2,
