In Memory of Pat

The Granny with a dry sense of humor!

谨以此书纪念 Pat ——

我那堪称是冷面笑匠的外婆!

It's tough being thirteen years old. David knew all about that. His big problem was MONEY. He needed money and he needed lots of it. A thirteen-year-old can't survive without money. His parents always said he WANTED money, but that wasn't true. He NEEDED money.

He needed money to buy clothes. His parents bought him clothes, but they bought boring clothes that he was embarrassed to wear. His mom still bought him Pikachu underwear! He also needed money to go to the movies. Right now though, he needed money for something else.

Valentine's Day was next week, and he needed to get a Valentine's gift for Amy Smith. Amy Smith was his friend, and he really liked her. He wanted to buy her a Valentine's Day card, a box of expensive chocolates, and a cute teddy bear. Girls liked that sort of thing. They loved gifts. Amy was sure to love his gifts. Maybe she would even love him a little.

He didn't have any money because he had spent his allowance on a pair of jeans. He had to ask his parents for more money. His father was like Mr. Scrooge. He would have to beg for the money.

"Dad, I need some money," said David.

"You mean that you WANT some money," said his father.

"No, I NEED it for something important," said David.

"What do you need the money for, David?" asked his dad.
