To my partner in business and in life, Dan Orsborn, for giving me the gift of Nashville

The power of spiritual forces in the Universe—how active it is everywhere!
Invisible to the eyes, and impalpable to the senses,
it is inherent in all things, and nothing can escape its operation.

I. Managing Your Career	81
--------------------------------	-----------

1. How would Confucius ask for a raise? 82
2. I've just been handed a great opportunity! I love my job—and now I've been offered a promotion into a bigger position. Why am I upset? 85
3. I like my job for now, but I can't imagine doing this the rest of my life. How long do I wait before I start working on the long-term career I will want to stick with? 87
4. I've had a terrific relationship with my boss, but now it's time to move on. I've got a job offer I'd like to accept, but I don't know how to handle this without hurting his feelings. 89

Contents

5. I was the best qualified for the promotion—but the offer went to somebody else. Should I fight it? 92
6. The job interview went swimmingly, but it's been several weeks and they haven't called me back. They've asked not to be called. How do I stay on top of this without turning them off by bugging them too much? 96
7. I just graduated from college Phi Beta Kappa, and all I can find in the industry of my choice are secretarial jobs. Should I live at home and continue to hold out for something better, or should I grab what's available? 98
8. I've just landed my first job, and I've already made a mess of things. I'm trying hard to please my boss by doing what I think he wants—and then the whole thing blows up in my face. What's wrong with me? 99
9. I've got proposals out to a number of places that may or may not come through. If one does, I'll have it made. If not, it's back to square one. It may be months before everyone responds. Is there anything I can do to reduce my anxiety in the interim? 102
10. I love my job, but I hate my boss. What can I do to transform this situation? 104
11. I could do a better job at what my boss is supposed to do than she does. How can I get her job? 108

II. Vision and Purpose

12. I've got a dream that will require my life savings—and probably not support me financially for quite some time. I believe in myself, but something's holding me back from taking the first step. How can I push through my fear? 112
13. With all my so-called potential, why am I not farther along in my career than I am right now? 114
14. I've been circulating the manuscript for my book to publishers. At this point I've been rejected a dozen times. How long do I keep believing in my book and in myself before throwing in the towel? 116
15. For years I had a stable job that bored the heck out of me. Now

- I've landed a job that is an incredibly exciting opportunity—but the company's financially shaky. Why can't I have it all? 118
16. I went for stock over higher salary, thinking that my act of faith would pay off. Now the stock is worthless. Where did I go wrong? 119
17. I'm thinking of following my passion back to school to train for a new career. But at my age, with my responsibilities and obligations, am I being realistic? 121
18. I've developed a foolproof plan guaranteed to make me millions, and I am going to do whatever it takes to succeed. Nothing is going to get in my way. The trouble is that so far the venture capitalists keep passing up this great opportunity. What's wrong with them? 125
19. I followed my heart, and now everything is falling apart around me. I still feel that I did and am doing the right thing. How can I endure all this apparent failure without letting it take me under? 127
20. After years of struggle I am receiving the adulation and support for my work I always thought I deserved. But now that the demand is there, I've never felt less inspired. How can I regain my enthusiasm? 129
21. I've finally completed my project, achieving a lifelong goal, but instead of feeling elated, I'm depressed. What should I do? 131
22. Faced with obstacles too great for me to surmount, I'm filing for bankruptcy. The financial burden is bad enough, but what's worse is the knowledge that my dream failed. How can I ever hope to recover from this? 132

III. Managing Others

23. I gave my assistant a tedious assignment that, frankly, I was happy I wouldn't have to do. When I did, I thought I saw resentment flash across her face. Is it honesty or intrusion to share what I saw? 136
24. The word at the water cooler is that my subordinates generally dislike me. They think I don't care enough about them, when the truth is I'm simply serious about doing a good job. Without

- lowering my standards, how can I turn public opinion around?
138
25. My secretary does his job well enough—and he’s pleasant and well-meaning. But he has bad dandruff. I’ve suggested he seek medical treatment, and it’s somewhat improved, but I still notice it. Nobody else seems to be bothered by it. What should I do? 141
26. I have worked hard to make my workplace reflective of the things I value, qualities such as honesty and integrity. When interviewing prospective employees, I try to make it clear that I “walk my talk.” So why can’t I find or keep a good secretary?
27. How do I handle the fact that one of my key subordinates ignores our professional, corporate environment and insists on wearing saddle shoes to meetings with clients? 144
28. I used to enjoy my work, but the company just hired someone whose very tone of voice is driving me crazy—and her desk is right next to mine. Every day she comments on whether she likes what I’m wearing, eavesdrops on my conversations, and does a zillion other irritating things. I talked to my supervisor, but he said I have to make the best of this situation. Help!
29. I get the feeling that my business associate doesn’t respect me, but I have no idea why. If I address this head-on, won’t I be opening up a can of worms? 148
30. My secretary is hopeless—and he’s the boss’s nephew. I am trying to be charitable, but I can’t trust myself to hold my tongue any longer. What should I do? 152
31. My employee acts as if I’m bugging him when I’m simply following up on projects I’ve delegated. What’s going on here?
32. My subordinate failed. If I act with compassion and let her know I understand, what will motivate her to try harder next time? 156
33. I don’t get the best thinking from my staff because they are trying too hard to please me by telling me what they think I want to hear. I’ve asked them to be more honest, but I’m frustrated by the fact that they are still holding back. What's wrong with them? 158

IV. Life-Driven Leadership

34. In order to remain competitive, our company needs to pare its workforce dramatically. Upper management is talking about evaluating and ranking us against one another within each job category. The poorer performers will be let go. Isn't there a better way? 162
35. I believe the company I work for will pull through, but right now we are having financial difficulties. How can I keep my staff motivated when there's no hope of raises or bonuses? 165
36. I'm sure there's a lesson in here somewhere. Our company has some counterproductive policies that are undermining the morale of my team. By challenging these policies I'm getting a lot of flack from other groups in the company who liked things the way they were. What could I have done to avoid this? 167
37. I was just about to fire a relatively new employee who has proven to be incompetent, when her mother unexpectedly died. She's taking a week off for the funeral and to handle family affairs. The business can't afford to keep her on—but how and when do I let her go? Can I do it while she's gone so she can spend more time at home and to save us the money? Or should I wait until she returns? 169
38. I spent years putting together a loyal and committed team of employees. Now the economic downturn has decimated our earnings with no break in sight. I've made every other cut I can. Should I borrow to tide us over until business improves or resort to cutting staff, knowing that it will destroy the morale of those who remain? 171
39. One candidate for the critical position we need to fill has average ability—but an extraordinary commitment to putting all that he has to use on behalf of this company. The other candidate is superior at what the job calls for—with an extraordinary commitment to advancing his own career. Which would be the better hire? 173

40. I can think of a number of people in my company who could be a lot better off if only they'd go into therapy. How should I broach this subject? 175
41. Who should pick up the lunch tab? 178

V. Risk Taking

42. I took a risk. Things aren't going as well as I would have hoped by now, but I still believe in my idea. My family and friends are begging me to give up. Should I? 180
43. I keep going back and forth on this one. The company I own and run is doing fine right now, but long-term I've got a problem I can't seem to get a grip on. If I don't invest in new equipment for my company, the industry may leave us behind. If I do, it could take that much more than we've got short-term to break even. What should I do? 182
44. I hate my job—but I know I'm lucky to have it. In this economy do I risk trying to make a change to something I could feel passionate about, or should I hang in there until the economy improves? 184
45. I've got six years to go until retirement with full benefits, but I hate every day I spend on the job. Should I quit and risk going for a job that I will enjoy more—or keep hanging on? 186
46. The whole family has sacrificed a lot over the years to keep the family business going. Part of me sees how I could take over the business and grow it into something much bigger, and part of me feels that's the last thing in the world I'd want to do. How can I handle my fear? 187
47. I've been meaning to ask you this question for quite a while, but I couldn't find the right words. The bottom line is that I procrastinate. What can I do about this affliction? 189
48. I need help right now! I've been called to come to my boss's office immediately and I have no idea why. How can I make it all the way there without flipping out? 190
49. I have a critical decision I need to make now. No matter how much information I gather, how keenly I tune in to my heart, how much help I seek out, I'm still unclear about the right thing to do. What can I do to ensure that I don't make the wrong choice? 192

50. I dream of starting a company coaching people to take risks—but I'm afraid I'll fail. What am I missing? 194

VI. Failure and Crisis

195

51. What do I do when I'm informed I'm being audited by the IRS? 196
52. What words of wisdom do you have for the person who thinks you can have it all? 199
53. What do I do when for some reason beyond my control the bottom falls out of the market or my product line becomes obsolete? What if disaster strikes? An earthquake? A war? 200
54. My whole life seems to be one of those occasions to which I must rise. When I don't have the option of taking time away to recuperate, how can I keep myself vital and energetic? 204
55. I brought my best to the situation at hand, but failed anyway. What's to be done now? 206
56. I gave my trusted associate tremendous responsibility, helping him build his reputation in our field. Then suddenly, without warning, he left our firm to set up a competitive company that is doing great and hurting ours. Where did I go wrong? 207
57. Our company has undergone a much-needed reorganization. My friend got laid off, while I got promoted. I'm sad for him but pleased for myself. Now he's pressing me to quit. Is he right? 209
58. Nothing I'm trying is working right now, even though I'm not doing anything differently from what's worked for me in the past. Why am I being punished? 210
59. I've yet to find a meaningful job that fulfills me. Where is it? 212
60. I've had it with abusive bosses, clients, suppliers, family, friends, and subordinates. Now what? 214
61. I tried my best, but I let my team down. They understand, but I feel so terrible that I can't face them again. How can I get back on track? 216

62. When I started out, I loved what I was doing. Lately I've burned out and as a result, I'm struggling. Can this endeavor still succeed? 217

VII. Integrity

63. It doesn't seem right that people with flawed integrity should be getting farther ahead than people who are trying to make something of themselves righteously. Why are they succeeding? 220
64. In a one-time emergency I pinched ten dollars from petty cash for my own personal use. Now I feel guilty about it, but I'm too embarrassed to confess, and I'm afraid I'll get caught putting it back. What should I do? 223
65. I don't think the product I'm selling is the best choice for my customers but I need the commission. What should I do? 226
66. If I only had clients in whom I believed one hundred percent, I'd have no clients. How do I come to terms with the conflict between integrity and paying the bills? 228
67. Small amounts of money keep disappearing from the petty-cash box—a quarter here, fifty cents there. It's really bothering me because it means somebody in my department is dishonest. What should I do? 230
68. I know that our company is putting out a product that does not live up to its advertising claims. Do I blow the whistle? 231
69. I've been asked by my boss to do something that I consider to be unethical. If I refuse, I'm afraid I'll be fired. If I go along with it, how will I sleep nights? 233
70. Now that they've trained me, I see how I could do better by running a competitive company—keeping all the profits for myself. Don't I have the right to watch out for my own interests in this? 236

VIII. In Search of Greatness

71. In order to be socially responsible, what percentage of my work life and salary should go toward good works? 240

- 72. I want my employees to like me, so I'll do anything to avoid giving them negative feedback. How can I still be a nice guy but get them to perform to my standards? 242
- 73. No matter how hard I try to conduct inspiring staff meetings, they fall flat. What can I do to inspire my staff? 243
- 74. Would my company benefit from a more democratic approach to management? 245
- 75. Help me do the right thing. I decided to work part-time, but I've been here longer and I have more responsibility. My colleague works full-time, so the answer to this question will have more impact on her life than on mine. The question: Who gets the better office? 247
- 76. I did something that I am right to feel guilty about. I've done what I can to make amends, but the bad feelings won't go away. 249
- 77. A client says he's withholding payment because my results disappointed him. As a professional I get paid for providing services—I don't guarantee results. How do I fight him? 251
- 78. A valuable employee made a stupid mistake that will cost the company thousands of dollars. Who pays? 253

IX. Balance and Productivity 255

- 79. I've got too many conflicting demands in each workday. How can I set priorities without dropping any balls? 256
- 80. I've got a full-time job that saps so much of my energy that there's nothing left in me to pursue my life's passion: sculpture. What can I do about this? 259
- 81. Our company has supplied each of us with a private arsenal of computer notebooks and cellular car phones in order to wage hand-to-hand combat with the competition. At first we were thrilled, but now we realize that we are expected either to be at work or to be available for communication twenty-four hours a day. Help! 260
- 82. My boss gives me more to do than anyone could possibly accomplish in the number of hours he's paying me for. Now he's set up a meeting to give me even more assignments! How should I handle this? 263
