

and I regret

G. ALEXANDER

新概念英语

NEW CONCEPT ENGLISH

FIRST THINGS FIRST Students' Book

An Integrated Course for Beginners

G. ALEXANDER

新概念英语

〔英汉对照本〕

第2册

张德富 郭兴家 王福林
韦振雄 张关俊 译注

安徽科学技术出版社

志 谢

美国语言学博士 Marie Taylor 教授和 Troneella Word 教授参加了本书第1、2册的最后定稿讨论，谨向她们表示由衷的谢意。

译注者启

新 概 念 英 语

〔英汉对照本〕

第 2 册

〔英〕 L.G. Alexander 原著

张德富 郭兴家 王福林

韦振雄 张关俊 译注

*

安徽科学技术出版社出版

(合肥市跃进路1号)

安徽省新华书店发行 安徽新华印刷厂印刷

*

开本：850×1168 1/32 印张：14.25 字数：400,000

1985年2月第1版 1985年2月第1次印刷

统一书号：9200·15 定价：2.80元

CONTENTS

TO THE TEACHER

LANGUAGE LEARNING AT THE PRE-INTERMEDIATE LEVEL

General Principles	1
What has to be Learnt?	2
Learning to Speak	2
Learning to Write	3
The Teaching of Grammar	4
The Multi-Purpose Text	5
Speed and Intensity	5
Levels	6

ABOUT THIS COURSE

From Theory to Practice: Basic Aims	7
For Whom the Course is Intended	8
How Much Knowledge has been Assumed?	8
Assumed Knowledge	8
The Components of the Course	9
A Description of the Course	9

HOW TO USE THIS COURSE

Allocation of Time	14
Lesson 1: Guided Conversation	14
Lesson 2: Composition and Language Study	17
Homework	19
Pre-Unit Tests	19
Additional Reading Material	19
Additional Oral Practice	19
Additional Written Practice	19
Future Work	20

Pre-Unit Test

UNIT ONE: Instructions to the Student

1 A Private Conversation— Word Order in Simple Statements	29
2 Breakfast or Lunch?— The Present: Continuous and Simple	32
3 Please Send Me a Card— The Simple Past	35
4 An Exciting Trip— The Present Perfect Simple	38
5 No Wrong Numbers— The Simple Past and the Present

	Perfect Simple	41
6	Percy Buttons— The Indefinite and Definite Articles	44
7	Too Late— The Past Continuous	47
8	The Best and the Worst— The Comparison of Adjectives	50
9	A Cold Welcome— Prepositions of Time	53
10	Not For Jazz— The Passive	56
11	One Good Turn Deserves Another— Review of Tenses	59
12	Goodbye and Good Luck— The Simple Future	62
13	The Greenwood Boys— The Future Continuous	65
14	Do You Speak English?— The Past Perfect Simple	68
15	Good News— Indirect Statements	71
16	A Polite Request— Type 1 Conditional Statements	74
17	Always Young— Must and Have to	77
18	He Often Does This!— Have (Possession Ordinary Verb)	80
19	Sold Out— Can and May	83
20	One Man in a Boat— The Gerund after Prepositions	86
21	Mad or Not?— The Passive (Auxiliary Verbs)	89
22	A Glass Envelope— Verbs followed by Prepositions: Of, From, In and On	92
23	A New House— Review of Tenses and Auxiliary Verbs	95
24	It Could be Worse— Special Difficulties: Review	98
	Pre-Unit Test	101
	UNIT TWO: Instructions to the Student	106
25	Do the English Speak English?— Word Order in Compound Statements	109
26	The Best Art Critics— The Present: Continuous and Simple: Non-conclusive Verbs	112
27	A Wet Night— The Simple Past	115
28	No Parking!— The Present Perfect Simple (Since and For)	118
29	Taxi!— The Simple Past and the Present Perfect Simple	121
30	Football or Polo?— The Indefinite and Definite Articles	124
31	Success Story— The Past Continuous and Used to	127
32	Shopping Made Easy— The Comparison of Adjectives	130
33	Out of the Darkness— Prepositions indicating Direction	133
34	Quick Work— The Passive	136
35	Stop Thief!— Review of Tenses	139
36	Across the Channel— The Simple Future and Going to	142
37	The Olympic Games— The Future Perfect Simple	145
38	Everything Except the Weather— The Past Perfect Simple	148
39	Am I All Right?— Indirect Questions	151
40	Food and Talk— Type 2 Conditional Statements	154
41	Do You Call That a Hat?— Must, Have to and Need	157

42	Not Very Musical— Have (Ordinary Verb)	160
43	Over the South Pole— Can and Able to	163
44	Through the Forest— The Gerund and the Infinitive	166
45	A Clear Conscience— The Passive	169
46	Expensive and Uncomfortable— Verbs followed by Prepositions: To, At, For and With	172
47	A Thirsty Ghost— Review of Tenses and Auxiliary Verbs	175
48	Did You Want to Tell Me Something?— Special Difficulties: Review	178

Pre-Unit Test 181

UNIT THREE: Instructions to the Student 186

49	The End of a Dream— Word Order in Complex Statements	189
50	Taken for a Ride— The Present: Continuous and Simple: Non-conclusive Verbs	192
51	Reward for Virtue— The Simple Past	195
52	A Pretty Carpet— The Present Perfect Simple and Continuous	198
53	Hot Snake— The Simple Past and the Present Perfect Simple and Continuous	201
54	Sticky Fingers— The Indefinite and Definite Articles	204
55	Not a Gold Mine— The Past Continuous, Used to and Would	207
56	Faster than Sound!— The Comparison of Adjectives, Much, Many, A Lot Of	210
57	Can I Help You Madam?— Prepositions describing people and their possessions	213
58	A Blessing in Disguise?— The Passive	216
59	In or Out?— Review of Tenses	219
60	The Future— The Simple Present used in place of the Future after Temporal Conjunctions	222
61	Dangerous Descent— The Simple Present Perfect used in place of the Future Perfect after Temporal Conjunctions	225
62	After the Fire— The Past Perfect: Simple and Continuous	228
63	She was not Amused— Indirect Speech and Imperative Statements	231
64	The Channel Tunnel— Type 3 Conditional Statements	234
65	Jumbo versus the Police— Must, Have to, Should and Ought to	237
66	Cycling through the Air— Have (Causative Form)	240
67	Volcanoes— Can, Able to and Manage to	243
68	Persistent— The Gerund after certain verbs and expressions	246
69	But Not Murder!— The Passive	249

70	Red for Danger— Adjectives followed by Prepositions: For, With, Of, To, At, From, In, On, and About	252
71	A Famous Clock— Review of Tenses and Auxiliary Verbs	255
72	A Car called 'Bluebird'— Special Difficulties: Review	258
Pre-Unit Test		261
UNIT FOUR: Instructions to the Student		266
73	The Record-Holder— Word Order: Review	269
74	Out of the Lime-Light— The Present: Continuous and Simple: Review	272
75	SOS— The Simple Past: Review	275
76	April Fools' Day— The Present Perfect: Simple and Continuous: Review	278
77	A Successful Operation— The Simple Past and the Present Perfect Simple and Continuous: Review	281
78	The Last One?— The Indefinite and Definite Articles: Review	284
79	By Air— The Past Continuous and Used to: Review	287
80	The Crystal Palace— The Comparison of Adjectives: Review	290
81	Escape— Prepositions: Review	293
82	Monster or Fish?— The Passive: Review	296
83	After the Elections— Review of Tenses	299
84	On Strike— The Future: Review	302
85	Never too Old to Learn— The Future and Future Perfect: Review	305
86	Out of Control— The Past Perfect: Simple and Continuous: Review	308
87	A Perfect Alibi— Indirect Speech: Review	311
88	Trapped in a Mine— Conditional Statements: Review	314
89	A Slip of the Tongue— Must, Have to, Need, Should: Review	317
90	Brasilia— Have: Review	320
91	Three Men in a Basket— Can, Able to, Manage to: Review	323
92	Asking for Trouble— The Gerund: Review	326
93	A Noble Gift— The Passive: Review	329
94	Future Champions— Verbs and Adjectives followed by Prepositions: Review	332
95	A Fantasy— Review of Tenses	335
96	The Dead Return— Special Difficulties: Review	338
Supplementary Written Exercises		341
Key to Exercises		343

To the Teacher

Language Learning at the Pre-Intermediate Level

General Principles

Traditional methods of learning a foreign language die hard. As long ago as 1921, Dr Harold Palmer pointed out the important difference between understanding how a language works and learning how to use it. Since that time, a great many effective techniques have been developed to enable students to learn a foreign language. In the light of intensive modern research, no one would seriously question the basic principles that have evolved since Palmer's day, though there is considerable disagreement about how these principles can best be implemented. Despite the great progress that has been made, teachers in many parts of the world still cling to old-fashioned methods and to some extent perpetuate the systems by which they themselves learnt a foreign language. It may, therefore, not be out of place to restate some basic principles and to discuss briefly how they can best be put into effect in the classroom.

Learning a language is not a matter of acquiring a set of rules and building up a large vocabulary. The teacher's efforts should not be directed at informing his students about a language, but at enabling them to use it. A student's mastery of a language is ultimately measured by how well he can use it, not by how much he knows about it. In this respect, learning a language has much in common with learning a musical instrument. The drills and exercises a student does have one end in sight: to enable him to become a skilled performer. A student who has learnt a lot of grammar but who cannot use a language is in the position of a pianist who has learnt a lot about harmony but cannot play the piano. The student's command of a language will therefore be judged not by how much he knows, but how well he can perform in public.

In order to become a skilled performer, the student must become proficient at using the units of a language. And the unit of a language is not, as was once commonly supposed, the word, but the sentence. Learning words irrespective of their function can be a waste of time, for not all words are equal. We must draw a distinction between structural words and lexical items. Words like I, you, he etc. are structural. Their use can be closely defined; they are part of a grammatical system. Words like tree, plant, flower etc. are purely lexical items and in no way part of a grammatical system. From the learner's point of view, skill in handling structural words is the key to mastering a language, for the meaning that is conveyed in sentence-patterns depends largely on the function of the structural words that hold them together.

It is possible, though this has yet to be proved scientifically, that every student of a foreign language has what might be called a 'language ceiling', a point beyond which he cannot improve very much. If we accept this supposition, our aim must be to enable every student to learn as much as he is capable of learning in the most efficient way. The old-fashioned translation and grammar-rule methods are extremely wasteful and inefficient, for the student is actually encouraged to make mistakes: he is asked to perform skills before he is adequately prepared. Teachers who use such methods unwittingly create the very problems they seek to avoid. At some point in the course their students inevitably become incapable of going on: they have to go back. They have become remedial students and the teacher is faced with the problem of remedying what has been incorrectly learnt. No approach could be more ineffective, wasteful and inefficient.

The student should be trained to learn by making as few mistakes as possible. He should never be required to do anything which is beyond his capacity. A well-designed course is one which takes into account what might be called the student's 'state of readiness': the point where he can proceed from easy to difficult. If the student is to make the most of his abilities, he must be trained to adopt correct learning habits.

What has to be Learnt?

The student must be trained adequately in all four basic language skills: understanding, speaking, reading and writing. In many classroom courses the emphasis is wholly on the written language. The student is trained to use his eyes instead of his ears and his inability to achieve anything like correct pronunciation, stress and intonation must be attributed largely to the tyranny of the printed word. If the teacher is to train his students in all four skills, he must make efficient use of the time at his disposal. Efficiency presupposes the adoption of classroom procedures which will yield the best results in the quickest possible time. The following order of presentation must be taken as axiomatic:

Nothing should be spoken before it has been heard.

Nothing should be read before it has been spoken.

Nothing should be written before it has been read.

Speaking and writing are the most important of these skills, since to some extent they presuppose the other two.

Learning to Speak

The traditional 'conversation lesson' is of no value at all if the student is not ready for it. It is impossible for any student at the post-elementary level to take part in discussions on topics like 'The Cinema Today', for his ideas quite outstrip his capacity for expressing them. The student must first be trained to use patterns in carefully graded aural/oral drills. Only in this way will he finally learn to speak.

Before considering how this can be done, it should be noted that the patterns in a language fall into two distinct categories: progressive and static. For instance, learning how to answer and to ask questions involves the use of progressive patterns. They are progressive because the student's skill in handling these complex forms must be developed over a long period, beginning with a simple response like 'Yes, it is' and culminating in complex responses like 'Yes, I should, shouldn't I'. A static pattern, on the other hand, like the comparison of adjectives can be taught in a limited number of lessons, not over a long period.

Progressive patterns should be practised through comprehension exercises which require the student to answer and to ask questions which become increasingly complex as the course proceeds. The student should be trained to give tag answers; make negative and affirmative statements to answer double questions joined by or; answer general questions which begin with question-words like When, Where, How etc.; and at each stage, the student should be trained to ask questions himself. It is obvious that these skills cannot be dealt with in one or two lessons: the student requires practice of this kind in every lesson.

At the same time, static patterns should be practised by means of drills which make use of language-laboratory techniques. In each of these drills, the teacher seeks to elicit a particular kind of response. He provides the student with a stimulus to elicit the new pattern in a series of oral drills until the student is able to respond accurately and automatically.

Students may also be trained to speak through oral composition exercises where they are required to reproduce orally a passage of English they are familiar with. At the outset, the student should practise reproducing narrative and descriptive pieces. At a much later stage, he will practise reproducing the substance of an argument. When he can do this well, he will be in a position to converse on set topics which deal with abstract ideas. By this time he will be able to express himself with confidence and will make relatively few mistakes.

The techniques used in speech training at the pre-intermediate level may be summarized as follows:

Drilling in progressive patterns.

Drilling in static patterns.

Practice in oral composition.

Learning to Write

The same sort of careful grading is required when we attempt to teach students to write. We must again begin with the simplest form of statement. Students are all too often plunged into composition work long before they are ready for it. At some point in a course, the teacher may decide that it is time his students attempted to write a composition, so he sets a short narrative or descriptive piece and hopes for the best. This is a random, hit-or-miss method which creates enormous remedial problems and produces disastrous results. If a student's sole experience of written English has been to fill in blank spaces in tailor-made sentences, it is wildly unreasonable to spring a composition subject on him and then expect him to produce correct and readable prose. As with premature discussions on set topics, all we are doing is to encourage him to make mistakes. And it is no good hoping that after a few years of this (involving massive correction on the part of the teacher) the student will somehow improve on his own. Very few students are sufficiently conscientious or highly motivated to examine in detail their own corrected written work. Even if they did, there is absolutely no guarantee that they will not go on making the same mistakes. Writing skill can best be developed through carefully controlled and graded comprehension/précis exercises. Précis writing is not a sterile academic exercise useful only for examination purposes. It can be used effectively to develop a student's writing ability. At the pre-intermediate stage, the student must learn how to write simple, compound, and complex sentences and to connect ideas from notes. Controlled précis writing will enable the student to master each of these difficulties and bring him to a point where he will be capable of writing a composition with a minimum of error.

The main stages in training the student in the written language at the pre-intermediate level may be summarized as follows:

Practice in writing simple sentences through controlled comprehension/précis exercises.

Practice in writing compound sentences through controlled comprehension/précis exercises.

Practice in writing complex sentences through controlled comprehension/précis exercises.

Practice in connecting ideas from notes that have been provided.

The Teaching of Grammar

In traditional textbooks, all information about sentence patterns is presented in the form of 'rules' which the student applies in a series of disconnected sentences by filling in blank spaces, or by giving the correct form of words in brackets. It has become abundantly clear that this approach to language-learning is highly ineffective. It encourages the teacher to talk about the language, instead of training his students to use it. The emphasis is on written exercises. The greatest weakness in this approach is that the student cannot transfer what he has learnt from abstract exercises of this kind to other language skills like understanding, speaking and creative writing.

A new pattern should not be presented as the exemplification of some abstract grammar-rule, but as a way of saying something. No further explanation or elucidation is necessary. The student is trained to use correct forms automatically, rather than by applying 'grammar logic'. Where explanation is necessary, it can be done by relating a new pattern to one that has already been learnt. If, for instance, the student has learnt the use of 'must', he can be taught the use of 'have to' by being made to see a meaningful relationship between the two.

Students working at the pre-intermediate level may be given exercises in recall, that is, relating language difficulties to a particular context they know well. In this way they will be trained to use correct forms instinctively. The teacher is, incidentally, saved the trouble of correcting exercises, since, for the most part, the passages do this for him.

Traditional filling-in-the-blank exercises still have a place in a modern course, but with one important difference: they should not be used as a means of teaching new patterns, but as a means of consolidating what has been learnt. They are an end, not a means to an end. In this respect, they are extremely useful in tests and can be employed for diagnostic purposes or to enable the teacher to assess terminal behaviour.

The Multi-Purpose Text

In order to do all the exercises outlined above, the student must work from specially-written texts. Each text must be used to train the student in the following skills:

Aural comprehension.

Oral practice (progressive and static patterns).

Reading aloud.

Oral composition.

Dictation.

Controlled comprehension, précis and composition practice (simple, compound and complex sentences).

Written grammar exercises in recall.

We might call these specially-written passages multi-purpose texts, since they are used as the basis for a variety of exercises which aim at developing a number of skills simultaneously.

If these texts are to be suitable for so many purposes, they must be specially devised. The new patterns that are to be taught must be contextualized, that is, they must be built into each text. These reiterated patterns should be unobtrusive: their use should strike the listener as being inevitable rather than artificially superimposed. There is also another very important requirement: the texts must be interesting or amusing so that they will entertain the student, hold his attention, and minimize the inevitable drudgery involved in drill work. If the texts are accompanied by illustrations, they will be even more appealing. At the beginner's level, illustrations are more functional than decorative. At this level, the reverse is true: the pre-intermediate stage marks a transition from audio-visual techniques to audio-lingual ones.

Speed and Intensity

Traditional courses are often divided into 'lessons', but these 'lessons' do not take into account what can be done in an average teaching period of forty-five minutes or an hour. They simply consist of 'an amount of information' and may run on for a great many pages. In the classroom, one of these 'lessons' might drag on for weeks because so much has to be done.

A lesson must be precisely what the word implies: an amount of material that can reasonably be covered in a teaching period, possibly with additional material which can be done as homework. In other words, a lesson must be considered as a unit of instruction and no more. Now it is extremely difficult for the course designer to decide what can be done in an average period. Obviously a class of bright students will cover more ground than a class of less able ones. This problem can be overcome if the lesson contains material which can be omitted at the discretion of the teacher, providing that these omissions do not hamper the students' progress.

Levels

For purely practical purposes, students attending language schools have to be classified in terms of knowledge and achievement. It might be worth noting that a full-scale course would resolve itself into three parts, each of which would consist of two stages:

Stage 1 : Pre-elementary level.
Elementary level.

Stage 2 : Pre-intermediate level
Intermediate level.

Stage 3 : Pre-advanced level.
Advanced level.

We might call these specially-written passages multi-purpose texts since they are used as the basis for a variety of exercises which aim at developing a number of skills simultaneously.

If these texts are to be suitable for so many purposes, they must be specially devised. The new patterns that are to be taught must be contextualised, that is, they must be built into each text. These contextual patterns should be understood: their use should strike the listener as being inevitable rather than artificially superimposed. There is also another very important requirement: the text must be interesting or amusing so that they will exert in the student hold his attention, and minimise the inevitable drudgery involved in drill work. If the text is accompanied by illustrations, they will be even more appealing.

At the beginner's level, illustrations are more functional than decorative. At this level, the reverse is true: the pre-intermediate stage marks a transition from audio-visual techniques to audio-lingual ones.

Traditional courses are often divided into 'lessons', but these 'lessons' do not take into account what can be done in an average teaching period of forty-five minutes or an hour. They simply consist of an amount of information, and

About this Course

From Theory to Practice: Basic Aims

This course attempts to put into practice all the theories about language learning outlined above. Briefly, the aims may be stated as follows:

1. To provide a comprehensive course for post-elementary adult or secondary students. The course contains sufficient material for about one and a half academic years' work. It is assumed that the student will receive about four hours' instruction each week i.e. four one-hour lessons on four separate occasions, or two 'double periods' each consisting of two hours or ninety minutes. If we take the academic year to consist of thirty-six weeks, there will be sufficient material in this course for fifty-four weeks' work. The student will receive most of his training in the classroom and will be required to do a little extra work in his own time.
2. To train the student in all four skills: understanding, speaking, reading, and writing—in that order. In this respect, the course sets out to do two things: to provide material which will be suitable for aural/oral practice and which can at the same time be used to train the student systematically to write English.
3. To provide the student with a book which will enable him to use the language.
4. To provide the teacher with well-co-ordinated and graded material which will enable him to conduct each lesson with a minimum of preparation. As many of the exercises are 'self-correcting', the teacher will, incidentally, be relieved of the arduous task of correcting a great many written exercises.
5. To enable the teacher and the student to work entirely from a single volume without the need for additional 'practice books'.
6. To prepare the ground for students who might, at some future date, wish to sit for academic examinations like the Cambridge Lower Certificate. This aim must be regarded as coincidental to the main purpose of training students in the four language skills.
7. To provide the teacher with recorded material which can be used in the classroom and language-laboratory. It must be emphasized, however, that this is in no way a full-scale language-laboratory course. It is essentially a classroom course, designed primarily for teachers who have no access to a language laboratory. The recorded drills are only intended for teachers who make use of a language-laboratory at regular or irregular intervals to supplement work done in the classroom.

For Whom the Course is Intended

This course should be found suitable for:

1. Adult or secondary students who have completed First Things First: An Integrated Course for Beginners, or who have completed any other elementary course.
2. Students in need of remedial work: e.g. students who did English at school and now wish to take it up again; students who have begun English several times and never got beyond the point of no return.
3. Schools and Language Institutes where 'wastage' caused by irregular attendance and late starters is a problem. The course is so designed that it will enable hard-pressed or erratic students to catch up on work they have missed.
4. Post-elementary students who wish to study on their own.

How Much Knowledge has been Assumed?

The material in First Things First, the beginners' course which precedes this one, has been designed to 'overlap' this course. Students who have completed it will have no difficulty whatever in continuing where they left off.

Students who have learnt English from other elementary courses and now wish to continue their studies with this course should have a fair working knowledge of the structures listed below. The list may look formidable, but close inspection will reveal that there is nothing in it that would not be found in the average elementary course. In any case, most of the knowledge that has been assumed is revised in the course itself.

It should be noted that a distinction has been drawn in the list between active and passive knowledge. A student has active command of a pattern if he can use it in speech or writing. He has passive command of a pattern if he can understand it when he hears or reads it, but is, as yet, incapable of using it. In the list below, this distinction is drawn by the following designations: ability to recognize and to form (active knowledge); ability to recognize (passive knowledge).

Assumed Knowledge

1. Elementary uses of the verbs be and have in the present and past.
2. The Present Continuous: ability to recognize and to form.
3. The Simple Present: ability to recognize; to form with -s, -es, or -ies in the third person.
4. The Simple Past: ability to recognize and to form with common regular and irregular verbs.
5. The Past Continuous: ability to recognize.
6. The Present Perfect (Simple): ability to recognize.
7. The Past Perfect: ability to recognize.
8. The Future: ability to recognize and to form with going to, shall and will.
9. Auxiliary Verbs: elementary uses of can, may and must. The ability to recognize the forms could, might and would.

10. The ability to form questions and negatives with auxiliary verbs including do/does and did. The use of interrogative pronouns and adverbs.
11. The ability to answer questions beginning with auxiliary verbs and question words.
12. Adverbs: ability to form with -ly and -ily. The ability to recognize exceptions like well, hard and fast.
13. Articles: definite and indefinite. Elementary uses of a/an and the. The use of some, any, no, much, many, a lot of with countable and uncountable nouns.
14. Nouns: the ability to form the plural with -s, -es, -ves; common irregular plurals: men, women, children, teeth etc.
15. Pronouns: personal, possessive, reflexive. Apostrophe 's'.
16. Adjectives: elementary uses. Regular comparison; irregular comparison: good, bad, much/many and little.
17. Prepositions: the use of common prepositions of place, time and direction.
18. Relative Pronouns: the ability to recognize and to use who/whom, which and that.

Miscellaneous Features

19. This/that; these/those.
20. Elided forms: it's, I'm, isn't, didn't, etc.
21. There is/it is; there are/they are.
22. The imperative.
23. The days of the week, dates, seasons, numbers, points of time (today, yesterday, tomorrow, etc.).
24. Telling the time.

The Components of the Course

The course consists of the following:

One text-book (to be used by teachers and students).

Four 4½ in. (11 cm.) long-playing tapes (length: 600 feet), recorded at 3¼ i.p.s. (9.5 cm. p.s.), on which the multi-purpose texts have been recorded.

Eight 5 in. (13 cm.) long-playing tapes (length: 900 feet), recorded at 3¼ i.p.s. (9.5 cm. p.s.), on which drills have been recorded.

A tapescript of the recorded drills for the use of teachers.

A Description of the Course

General Arrangement of Material

This course is divided into four Units each of which is preceded by a searching test. Each Unit consists of twenty-four passages which become longer and more complex as the course progresses. Detailed instructions to the student, together with worked examples, precede each Unit.

The passages are multi-purpose texts. Each passage will be used to train the student in the following: aural comprehension; oral practice (progressive and static patterns); reading aloud; oral composition; dictation; controlled comprehension, précis, and composition practice (simple, compound and complex sentences); written grammar exercises in recall.

Instructions and Worked Examples

These precede each Unit and should be read very carefully. The successful completion of this course depends entirely on the student's ability to carry out the instructions given.

Pre-Unit Tests

A searching test, based on material already studied, precedes each Unit. This will make it possible for students to find their own level and enable them to begin at any point in the book. At the same time, the student who works through the course systematically from beginning to end is not expected to make too sudden a jump between Units. The tests should enable the teacher to assess how much the students have learnt. If they are found to be too long, they should be divided into manageable compartments.

The Passages

An attempt has been made to provide the student with passages which are as interesting and as varied in subject-matter as possible. Each passage contains examples of the language patterns the student is expected to master. It will also be used as the basis for all aural/oral and written work. The approximate length of the passages in each Unit is as follows:

Unit 1: 100 words.	} Part 1
Unit 2: 140 words.
Unit 3: 160 words.	} Part 2
Unit 4: 180 words.

Oral Exercises

Oral exercises are not included in the book itself and must be supplied by the teacher. They may be along the lines suggested in the section on How to Use this Course.

Comprehension and Précis

The aim has been to train the student to make statements which are based directly on the passages he has read. The student is required to derive specific information from each passage (comprehension) which he will put together to form a paragraph (précis). The amount of help he is given to do this gradually diminishes. In these exercises, the student will incidentally gain a great deal of experience in coping with one of the biggest difficulties in English: word order. Here is a brief outline of what is required in each Unit: