

ESSENTIAL LITERARY TERMS

A BRIEF NORTON GUIDE WITH EXERCISES

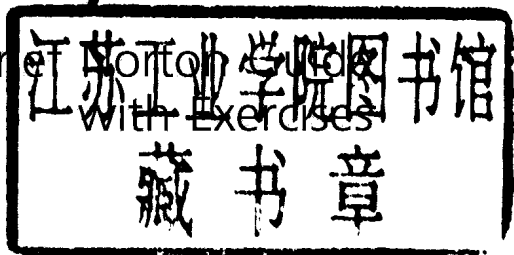

SHARON HAMILTON

Essential Literary Terms

A Brief Norton Guide

With Exercises

Sharon Hamilton, Ph.D.

W • W • NORTON & COMPANY

New York • London

Peoples Education

W. W. Norton & Company has been independent since its founding in 1923, when William Warder Norton and Mary D. Herter Norton first published lectures delivered at the People's Institute, the adult education division of New York City's Cooper Union. The Nortons soon expanded their program beyond the Institute, publishing books by celebrated academics from America and abroad. By mid-century, the two major pillars of Norton's publishing program—trade books and college texts—were firmly established. In the 1950s, the Norton family transferred control of the company to its employees, and today—with a staff of four hundred and a comparable number of trade, college, and professional titles published each year—W. W. Norton & Company stands as the largest and oldest publishing house owned wholly by its employees.

Copyright © 2007 by W. W. Norton & Company, Inc., and Peoples
Education

Preface copyright © 2007 by W. W. Norton & Company, Inc.
Simultaneously published by Peoples Education

All rights reserved

Printed in the United States of America

First Edition

Composition by Matrix Publishing Services

Manufacturing by the Maple-Vail Book Manufacturing Group

Book design by Anna Palchik

Production manager: Diane O'Connor

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Hamilton, Sharon, 1943-

Essential literary terms : a brief Norton guide with exercises / Sharon Hamilton.
p. cm.

Includes index.

ISBN-13: 978-0-393-92837-2 (pbk.)

ISBN-10: 0-393-92837-3 (pbk.)

1. Literature—Terminology. 2. Criticism—Terminology. I. Title.

PN44.5.H28 2006

803—dc22

2005058540

W. W. Norton & Company, Inc., 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, N.Y. 10110
www.wwnorton.com

W. W. Norton & Company Ltd., Castle House, 75/76 Wells Street, London W1T 3QT

2 3 4 5 6 7 8 9 0

Preface

Many students in introductory literature courses are instinctively able to sense the effect of a poem or story: to say if it is uplifting or depressing, satirical or serious, dull or riotous. They can tell whether a character is good or evil, conflicted or self-righteous, unpredictable or conforming. What is not instinctive—what must be taught—is how a writer creates these effects, the techniques that he or she uses to convey ideas and to elicit responses from the reader. Essential Literary Terms: A Brief Norton Guide with Exercises defines and explains the most essential of those techniques in clear, straightforward prose, providing along the way numerous examples and exercises to help students develop and test their understanding. With its emphasis on application—how writers use these techniques and how students can identify and analyze them—Essential Literary Terms guides introductory students to a more sophisticated understanding of literature.

On the most basic level, students need to learn the major ways that the style of fiction and poetry differs from that of ordinary prose. The most workaday prose—for example, a manual for operating an appliance or a description of the early signs of a heart attack—is generally composed of literal statements intended to inform or explain. Other kinds of writing fall on the continuum between workaday prose and literature, borrowing devices common to literary style to persuade as well as inform. Examples include political speeches, ads, and editorials.

Another way of describing the distinctions is that literature is comprised not simply of literal statements but also of implied perspectives on such statements, and of nuances in their meaning. In literature, how something is said is crucial to what it means. The old dictum defines poetry as the genre in which style is inseparable from content; the same might be said of fiction and drama. Good readers recognize that meaning resides in form as well as content, but they must be encouraged to identify and explain their perceptions, to go back to a piece that they have responded to instinctively and look for the elements that influence the overall effect. It is in the nuances, the subtext created by word choice, structure, rhythm, and sound, that full meaning resides.

Literary terms have emerged over the ages in order to describe such elements; an understanding of those terms, therefore, is crucial to a deep, critical response to literature. They not only provide a common vocabulary for discussing poetry and fiction, but also help students to see patterns, to get past a superficial “I like it” or “It’s funny” response and begin to divine the art behind the work. A good understanding of literary terms can encourage students to categorize and to compare, which is the essence of critical thinking. Once introduced to the concept of metaphor, for example, students have a basis for understanding how one poet’s use of it differs from another’s; or, once they learn to identify a sonnet, they are prepared to see how that poetic form can serve multiple subjects and express totally disparate tones. Finally, another purpose of this guidebook is to provide a sense of heritage by presenting the major techniques and approaches with which authors and informed readers have written and read books in the past.

Most books that define literary terms are erudite and encyclopedic. Essential Literary Terms instead aims for brevity, clarity, and selectivity. It covers the literary terms that are most likely to benefit introductory students and provides a clear and substantial explanation of each one. Students and teachers can turn to the guidebook for an understanding of key terms needed to read and analyze the classics and their modern heirs. At the same time, with carefully chosen examples accompanying each entry, Essential Literary Terms offers more than dictionary-style definitions. Students are encouraged to identify and discuss, for instance, how a poetic line offers an example of alliteration and why the use of that device matters to the line’s meaning. In other words, the purpose of each entry is to go beyond simply assigning a label—the what—to speculate on the how and the why.

The study of the terms is reinforced by exercises that both test and augment the student’s understanding of and ability to apply the terms in context. The exercises are in three tiers. The first tier focuses on brief passages and asks students to explain how each passage uses a particular device, as well as how that device affects the line’s meaning and literary effect. The second, more complex tier asks students to identify and analyze several different literary devices in a longer passage. The third, culminating tier is a set of poems and prose passages for which students are asked to analyze the literary elements, and are given suggestions about matters to address in their responses. In order to help students reference lines in their answers to the exercises, the editors have numbered the long passages of poetry according to the lines quoted. That is, the numbers begin with 1 for the first line of the excerpt rather than with the line number that would apply to the entire poem. A pamphlet of answers to the exercises is available to instructors on request.

Like any complex skill, critical analysis comes to seem graceful and fluid only after long practice. In the learning, it must be broken down into its component parts and practiced in stages, then reassembled into a fluent whole. The exercises in Essential Literary Terms give students practice in identifying the techniques that are key to understanding the tone and meaning of any literary passage. In addition, the analyses of passages that accompany the explanations serve as models, offering students examples of how the terms may be used in writing focused, precise, and detailed literary analysis. For instructors, the book presents such material in organized, easily accessible form, and so can serve as a systematic reminder of information and skills that they will want their students to master.

Essential Literary Terms is designed for quick and easy reference. Terms are grouped topically, beginning with those that are broadly applicable to imaginative writing in all genres (Literary Forms, Figurative Language, Rhetorical Strategies), then moving to topics that are more specific to prose (Narration, Structure, Syntax), and then to those that are more specific to poetry (Meter, Rhyme, Sound and Sound Patterns, and Poetic Forms). Within these groupings, terms are arranged to help students see patterns and connections. A reader may look up either an individual term, like simile, or an entire group of terms—for example, all the entries under the category figurative language. If one term is more prominent or accessible than the others, it is listed first. For example, the most easily understood category of figures of thought, simile, is given first, followed by the related, more complex class, metaphor. Those major tropes are followed by such subsets as personification and synecdoche. If two terms are related—for example, couplet and tercet—the table of contents lists them in consecutive order. If no order of importance applies, as in the terms associated with structure, the listing within the category is alphabetical. The one exception to this arrangement is Prosody, the section on meter, which is clearest if read as a whole, although each term can still be studied on its own. The discussions of individual terms also cross-reference related terms, which are indicated by SMALL CAPITALS. An index in the back of the book allows students to locate a particular term quickly.

An essential part of academic writing is understanding the conventions for documenting sources. The documentation style set by the Modern Language Association has long been the standard for literature and humanities students, and Essential Literary Terms includes a brief but comprehensive guide to MLA style. Both in-text documentation and works-cited entries are treated with clear explanations and examples. A sample student paper showcases how documentation is used within an essay; it also gives students a full-length example of the type of literary analysis that they will do in their courses.

Essential Literary Terms benefits from a long and rich heritage. Authors have employed these literary concepts and techniques for thousands of years, before literature had even assumed a written form, to convey the worlds of their imaginations. For nearly as long, scholars, feeling the need to order and describe their responses to that art, have labeled, classified, and analyzed these concepts and techniques. For those who wish to study a larger set of terms than this book provides, inclusive literary dictionaries abound. Meanwhile, this book will offer students the chance not simply to memorize literary terms but to apply them in context, and to explore ways in which knowledge of how they work can clarify tradition and enrich meaning. Ultimately, Essential Literary Terms is meant as a means to ends that go beyond the classroom: to enhance literary sensibility and to foster skills that can lead to a lifetime of critical and pleasurable reading.

Acknowledgments

I would like to thank Jim Peoples for his proposal that I write this book; my editors at Peoples Education, Tom Maksym and Steven J. Griffel, for their encouragement of my initial efforts; W. W. Norton's Julia Reidhead for her astute oversight and Erin Granville for her thoughtful direction of the editing process during its many stages; and Francine Weinberg, who composed the MLA documentation guidelines in the appendix. I also want to recognize the countless teachers, colleagues, and students who have provided not only the experience but also the inspiration behind this book. Finally, I want to express special gratitude to M. H. Abrams, whose vast learning, humane sensibility, and wise guidance were crucial to shaping and informing the contents of these pages.

Contents

PREFACE XIII

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS XVII

Literary Forms 1

DRAMA 1

Comedy 3

High and low comedy 3

Farce 3

Romantic comedy 4

Comedy of manners 4

Stock characters 4

Tragedy 4

Classical tragedy 4

Senecan tragedy 4

Revenge tragedy 4

Domestic tragedy 5

Tragicomedy 5

Theater of the Absurd 6

Periods of Drama 7

Ancient Greek 7

Roman 7

English medieval 7

Morality plays 7

Mystery plays 7

Elizabethan and Jacobean 7

Restoration and Eighteenth Century 7

Modern 7

FICTION 8

Novel 8

Novel of incident 9

Novel of character 9

Realistic novel 9

Romance 9

Bildungsroman 10

Historical novel 10

Epistolary novel 10

Antinovel 10

Metafiction 10

Short Story 11

Novella 12

POETRY 13

Verse 13

Epic Poetry 13

Dramatic Poetry 14

Lyric Poetry 14

SPECIALIZED FORMS 15

Dramatic Monologue 15

EXERCISE: DRAMATIC MONOLOGUE 16

Epigram 19

Aphorism 20

EXERCISE: EPIGRAM 20

Satire 21

Direct (formal) satire 21

Indirect satire 22

Horatian satire 22

Juvenalian satire 22

EXERCISE: SATIRE 24

Figurative Language 32

FIGURES OF THOUGHT (TROPES) 32

Simile 32

Metaphor 33

Tenor 33

Vehicle 33

Mixed metaphor 34

Extended metaphor 35

Subtext 36

EXERCISES: SIMILES AND METAPHORS 36

Personification 39

Allegory 39

Pathetic fallacy 40

Synecdoche 41

Metonymy 41

EXERCISE: PERSONIFICATION, PATHETIC FALLACY, SYNECDOCHE, AND METONYMY 42

Irony 44Verbal irony* 44*Sarcasm* 44*Structural irony* 45*Unreliable narrator* 45*Dramatic irony* 46*Tragic irony* 46*Cosmic irony* 46

EXERCISES: IRONY 47

TROPES DEPENDENT ON CONTRASTING LEVELS OF MEANING 54

Hyperbole 54

Understatement 55

Paradox 56

Oxymoron 57

Litotes 57

Periphrasis 58

Pun 59

Equivoque 60

EXERCISE: TROPES DEPENDENT ON CONTRASTING LEVELS OF MEANING 60

FIGURES OF SPEECH (SCHEMES) 62

Apostrophe 62

Invocation 63

Rhetorical Question 63

Anaphora 64

Antithesis 64

Chiasmus 65

EXERCISE: FIGURES OF SPEECH (SCHEMES) 66

Rhetorical Strategies 68

Diction 68

Formal vs. colloquial language 68*Abstract vs. concrete language* 70*Poetic diction* 72

Allusion 74

Analogy 76

EXERCISES: ALLUSION, ANALOGY, AND DICTION 78

Imagery 83

Symbolism 86

Atmosphere 89

EXERCISES: IMAGERY, SYMBOLISM, AND ATMOSPHERE 92

Repetition 98Selection and Order of Details 99*Epiphany 102EXERCISES: REPETITION, SELECTION AND ORDER OF DETAILS,
AND EPIPHANY 104Narration 112*VOICE 112Narrator 112POINT OF VIEW 113*First-Person 113*Third-Person 114Third-person omniscient 114Intrusive narrator 115Objective narrator 116Narrator in drama 117Third-person limited 118Stream of consciousness 118Second-person 120

EXERCISE: POINT OF VIEW 122

CHARACTERIZATION 125Flat Characters vs. Round Characters 126*Showing vs. Telling 127

EXERCISES: CHARACTERIZATION 127

ROLES IN THE PLOT 129Protagonist 129Hero, heroine 129Antagonist 130Villain 130Foil 131

EXERCISES: ROLES 132

DIALOGUE 132*Verisimilitude 137Speech headings 137Stage directions 137*

Direct and indirect discourse	139
Repartee	140
Soliloquy	141
Aside	143
EXERCISE: DIALOGUE	144
SETTING	150
EXERCISES: SETTING	152
THEME	154
TOPE	156
Pathos	161
EXERCISES: THEME AND TONE	162

Structure 167

In Medias Res	167
Exposition	168
Flashback	168
Narrative Pace	170
Parenthetical Observation	172
Subplot	174
Shift in Style	176
EXERCISES: STRUCTURE	178

Syntax 184

Independent clause	184
Dependent clause	184
Subject	184
Simple subject	184
Complete subject	184
Predicate	184
Simple predicate	184
Complete predicate	184
Direct object	184
Indirect object	185
Appositive	185
Sentence Fragments	185
Kinds of Sentences	186
Simple sentence	186

Compound sentence	186
Coordinating conjunction	186
Complex sentence	186
Subordinate clause	186
Means of Linkage	186
Coordination	186
Subordination	187
Parallelism	188
Syntactical Order	189
Loose sentence (cumulative sentence)	189
Periodic sentence	190
Inversion	190
Sentence Variety	191
EXERCISES: SYNTAX	194

Prosody 198

METER 198

Quantitative meter	198
Syllabic meter	198
Stress	198
Accentual meter	198
Accentual-syllabic meter	198
Foot	199
Metrical Feet	199
Iamb	199
Anapest	200
Trochee	200
Dactyl	200
Number of Feet in a Line	200
Monometer	200
Dimeter	200
Trimeter	201
Tetrameter	201
Pentameter	201
Hexameter	201
Heptameter	201
Naming the Meter	201
Iambic pentameter	201
Trochaic trimeter	202
Dactylic tetrameter	202

Common Substitutions 202Spondee* 202*Catalexis* 203*Masculine and feminine endings* 203Pauses within and between Lines of Verse 204End-stopped lines* 204*Enjambed lines* 204*Caesura* 205Scansion 205*EXERCISES: METER 207*RHYME 210*End Rhyme 211Double rhyme* 211*Triple rhyme* 211*Masculine rhyme* 211*Feminine rhyme* 211Internal Rhyme 211*Rhyme Scheme 212*Perfect and Imperfect Rhyme 213Eye rhyme* 213*Half-rhyme (off-rhyme, slant rhyme, imperfect rhyme)* 213EXERCISE: RHYME 215*SOUND AND SOUND PATTERNS 217*Alliteration 217Internal alliteration* 218Consonance 219*Assonance 220*Onomatopoeia 221*EXERCISES: SOUND AND SOUND PATTERNS 223*Poetic Forms 226*STANZAS 226*Couplet 226Heroic couplet* 226*Closed couplet* 226*Open couplet* 227Tercet (Triplet) 228Terza rima* 228

Quatrain	229
In Memoriam stanza	229
Ballad meter (common meter)	229
Refrain	230
Sonnet	231
Italian (Petrarchan)	231
English (Shakespearean)	231
Volta (turn)	231
Sonnet sequence	233
Curtal sonnet	234
Blank Verse	234
In poetry	234
In drama	236
Free Verse (Open Form Verse)	239
EXERCISES: POETIC FORMS	242

Appendix: MLA Style 247

MLA In-Text Documentation	249
Notes	254
MLA List of Works Cited	254
Sample Research Paper, MLA Style	268

PERMISSIONS ACKNOWLEDGMENTS 275

INDEX OF TERMS 277

Literary Forms

Imaginative literature may be divided into three major literary forms: POETRY, FICTION, and DRAMA. POETRY is usually categorized into three main types: EPIC, DRAMATIC, and LYRIC. All three subcategories share such common traits as specific patterns of RHYTHM and SYNTAX, frequent use of FIGURATIVE language, and emphasis on the effects of the arrangement of the words on the page. Although some works of FICTION and DRAMA also display many of these traits, they are particularly characteristic of POETRY.

FICTION is, broadly speaking, any NARRATIVE about invented characters and events, whether in VERSE or prose. The narrower meaning of the term, however, refers to works written in prose. The major genres of fiction are the novel, the short story, and the novella.

DRAMA differs from POETRY and FICTION in that it does not typically contain a NARRATOR and is usually intended for performance. The form may be divided into the broad categories of COMEDY and TRAGEDY, each of which contains several subcategories, such as ROMANTIC COMEDY or CLASSICAL TRAGEDY. A third and smaller category, TRAGICOMEDY, combines features of each of the major genres.

DRAMA

Drama (from the Greek verb for “to do” or “to act”) is the major LITERARY FORM that presents characters directly to the audience, usually without the intermediary of a NARRATOR. Most drama is written to be performed in the theater by live actors, who speak the DIALOGUE and move in accordance with the STAGE DIRECTIONS written by the playwright—literally, the maker of the play, the term for an individual dramatic work. The exception to that mode of presentation is closet drama, which is intended to be read rather than performed. (“Closet” is an antiquated term for “study” or “private chamber.”) Some examples of closet drama are John Milton’s Samson Agonistes (1671) and Lord Byron’s Manfred (1817).

Drama is classified according to the effect intended on the audience, as well as the choice and rendering of the materials in order to achieve that effect: The broadest division is that between COMEDY and TRAGEDY, but these broad categories also contain specialized subgroups.