

培文书系 · 人文科学系列

Introducing Cultural Studies

文化研究导论

[英] Elaine Baldwin Brian Longhurst Greg Smith
Scott McCracken Miles Ogborn 著

北京大学出版社
PEKING UNIVERSITY PRESS

培文书系·人文科学系列

Introducing Cultural Studies

文化研究导论

[英] Elaine Baldwin Brian Longhurst Greg Smith
Scott McCracken Miles Ogborn 著

北京大学出版社
PEKING UNIVERSITY PRESS

北京市版权局著作权合同登记图字:01-2005-0282号

图书在版编目(CIP)数据

文化研究导论/(英)伊莱恩·鲍德温(Elaine Baldwin)等著. —影印本. —北京:北京大学出版社,2005.1
(培文书系·人文科学系列)

ISBN 7-301-08038-7

I. 文… II. 伊… III. 文化-研究-英文 IV. G0

中国版本图书馆CIP数据核字(2004)第100517号

English reprint edition copyright © 2004 by PEARSON EDUCATION ASIA LIMITED and PEKING UNIVERSITY PRESS.

Original English language title from Proprietor's edition of the Work.

Original English language title: Cultural Studies., Elaine Baldwin, Brian Longhurst, Greg Smith, Scott McCracken, Miles Ogborn

Copyright © 2004

ISBN: 0-13-123283-5

All Rights Reserved.

Published by arrangement with the original publisher, Pearson Education, Inc., publishing as Prentice Hall, Inc.

This edition is authorized for sale and distribution only in the People's Republic of China exclusively (except Hong Kong SAR, Macao SAR and Taiwan).

仅限于中华人民共和国境内(不包括中国香港、澳门特别行政区和中国台湾地区)销售发行。

书 名: 文化研究导论

著作责任者: [英] Elaine Baldwin, Brian Longhurst, Greg Smith, Scott McCracken, Miles Ogborn 著

责任编辑: 曹媛媛

标准书号: ISBN 7-301-08038-7/G·1308

出版者: 北京大学出版社

地 址: 北京市海淀区中关村北京大学校内 100871

网 址: <http://cbs.pku.edu.cn> 电子信箱: pw@pup.pku.edu.cn

电 话: 邮购部 62752015 发行部 62750672 编辑部 58874097 58874098

印刷者: 山东新华印刷厂临沂厂

发 行 者: 北京大学出版社

经 销 者: 新华书店

850毫米×1168毫米 16开 31.25印张 450千字

2005年1月第1版 2005年1月第1次印刷

定 价: 45.00元

版权所有,翻印必究

出版说明

培文书系人文科学系列旨在面向国内人文领域的师生和广大人文爱好者,推介国外经典的和新近的英文原版和中文翻译版优秀著作和教材,使我国读者得以从中了解、学习和借鉴国外先进研究成果。

需要重申的是,作者本人的有些观点和结论尚需商榷,有些甚至是不可取的,为此我们对个别段落或语句有所删节,同时也提请读者加以甄别。书中的观点均不代表出版社观点。

北京大学出版社
2005年1月

Preface: A User's Guide

We think that cultural studies is one of the most stimulating areas of activity in intellectual life. It is also something that is studied at different levels, forming an important part of the profile of many university courses. There are many books on cultural studies. However, as we have found in our own teaching, there is no introduction to the field that seeks to offer an overview and exploration of some of the most important avenues of research in the field – hence this book, which deliberately and very consciously sets out to be a textbook for students who are studying cultural studies as part of a university course.

In seeking to write an introduction we have not attempted to be completely comprehensive. We think that we cover the most important aspects of cultural studies, but ultimately this can only be our interpretation of the field, written from particular standpoints. We have organised the book into nine chapters divided into two parts. Part I, on cultural theory, contains three chapters. In the first we introduce some different meanings of the concept of culture and the issues arising from these meanings. This leads us to point to the importance of cultural studies as an activity that produces knowledge that separate disciplines cannot. Our own disciplinary training and affiliations vary, taking in anthropology, sociology, geography and English, and we continue to work in university departments that reflect disciplines. However, we would all attest to the ways in which our contacts with cultural studies have changed the ways in which we think, teach and research.

In Chapter 2 we examine some important aspects of communication and representation, introducing critical issues of language and meaning. This is followed by a chapter concerned with multiple dimensions and theories of power and inequality. Together the three chapters in Part I address important general issues and debates in cultural studies and provide a map around them. In these chapters, and in the rest of the book, we are particularly concerned with the division of culture along the lines of class, race and gender.

Part II of the book contains six chapters which examine in some detail different dimensions of culture. One of the most significant areas of debate across the humanities and social sciences is over how to understand the nature and importance of space and time. Indeed, we would argue that cultural studies has been an important impetus behind these debates. We reflect these concerns in Chapters 4 and 5, which point to the ways in which culture cannot be understood without significant attention to space, place, conceptions of time and social change. Of course these academic developments are contextualised by the increased pace of contemporary life and the ease of communication and travel which are producing new experiences of time and space.

Another important dimension of culture and its study has been a redefinition of politics. Often arising from the new social movements of the 1960s and after, there is now an understanding of the way in which politics, as activity concerned with power, is all around us. In Chapter 6 we address a number of issues raised by this expansion and change in the meaning of politics.

Another significant area of concern in contemporary life is the body. We are all aware of the state of our bodies and the forms of treatment for them when they are not functioning adequately. Moreover there is increased debate around new technologies of healing and body alteration. Again, cultural studies has been in the vanguard of consideration of some of these issues – a concern reflected in the subject matter of Chapter 7.

Culture can often be seen as all-encompassing in that many things and activities are seen to be part of a culture. However, cultures are also divided along the lines of class, race, gender and age and, as we have suggested, by space and time. One important way of discussing and characterising such divisions is through the concept of subculture. Chapter 8 is devoted to this area. In particular it examines work on youth subcultures.

The final chapter of the book returns to some of the issues of representation outlined in Part I. Using ideas about technological change and broad shifts in culture, we address important developments in visual culture. Part of our concern here is to locate forms of visual representation and the visual aspects of everyday interaction historically and spatially.

That is the outline of the structure and content of our book. We expect that you will read those chapters that most interest you or will be of most use at any one time for a particular purpose. To facilitate the use of the book, we have further divided all the chapters into sections. You will find extensive cross-referencing between chapters and sections, but it is also important that you use the table of contents and the index for these purposes as well. The sections of chapters can be read on their own, but you will also find that they fit into an argument that is developed through a chapter.

We have included other types of devices to convey our ideas: figures, diagrams, cartoons, photographs of buildings, monuments or paintings discussed in the text and tables. We have also included three types of box: Key Influences, Defining Concepts and Extracts. You will find concepts and people who are boxed highlighted in bold in the text, for example Donna Haraway. Defining Concept boxes provide an overview to help generate a basic understanding. Extract boxes include material that is often then discussed in the text, but which we think also repays more detailed study on your part. Key Influence boxes address the most salient aspects of the life and work of some of the major thinkers in cultural studies. We have tried in these to include three different types of writer: first, those who have been particularly important in the development of cultural studies (examples include Richard Hoggart, E.P. Thompson and Raymond Williams); second, those authors who historically initiated important general approaches that have subsequently been developed or influential in cultural studies (examples here are Karl Marx, Michel Foucault, Max Weber and C.L.R. James); finally, there are those who were and are part of the redevelopment of cultural studies as it has become more attentive to issues of gender, 'race', postcolonialism, cultural hybridity and so on, such as Judith Butler, Angela McRobbie, Paul Gilroy and Edward Said.

This approach means that the majority of our Key Influence boxes represent white men, some of whom are long dead. This in itself reflects the development of the field and the power struggles that shape it. We wish that the situation were otherwise. However, it is perhaps of some significance that even many of the white men were marginal to mainstream academic life. We are also conscious of some of the names that are missing (for example Derrida, Lyotard, Jameson), which may mean little to you at the moment, but which you will come across in this book and others you read. However, we have tried to box those people whose ideas are most used in the book, reflecting the sense that this is our version of cultural studies.

All the Key Influence and Defining Concept boxes contain further reading that can be used to deepen the understanding of the concepts, approaches and people they contain. We have also included a guide to further reading and a guide to internet resources at the end of each chapter.

Acknowledgements

All books are the products of a number of influences. Textbooks are even more so. Many people over more years than we would care to remember have affected this book. We would like to begin by acknowledging this general debt. We are also particularly grateful to the anonymous referees for their helpful comments.

Elaine Baldwin would like to thank her colleagues for their contribution to the writing of the book.

Brian Longhurst would like to thank the students who have worked with him on the material in this book. Particular thanks are due to Julie Weir for permission to use her excellent photographs. As always his biggest debts are to Bernadette Oxley, James Oxley-Longhurst and Tim Oxley-Longhurst for sharing it all.

Scott McCracken would like to thank for their contributions and enthusiasm, the students on English and Cultural Studies, on Sociology and Cultural Studies and on the MA in Cultural Studies at the University of Salford. Particular thanks go to Georgina Waylen for her support.

Miles Ogborn would like to thank Phil Crang, John Gould, Catherine Nash, and the second and third year Cultural Geography students at Queen Mary, University of London for their comments on earlier versions of chapter 4.

Greg Smith would like to thank Julie Jones for comments on an early draft of Chapter 7 and Jason Rutter for assistance with Chapter 3.

Grateful acknowledgement is made to the following sources for permission to reproduce material in this book. Every effort has been made to trace copyright holders, but if any have been inadvertently overlooked the publisher will be pleased to make the necessary arrangement at the first opportunity.

Box 2.4: reproduced by permission of Secker & Warburg, and Curtis Brown on behalf of David Lodge. Box 2.5: reproduced by permission of Marion Boyars Publishers. Box 2.7: reproduced by permission of British Sociological Association. Figure 2.3: figure from 'Myth Today' from Mythologies by Roland Barthes, translated by Annette Lavers; translation copyright © 1972 by Jonathan Cape Ltd; reprinted by permission of Hill and Wang, a division of Farrar, Straus & Giroux, Inc., and Random House. Figure 2.4:

reproduced by permission of Jackie Fleming. Figure 2.5: reproduced by permission of Routledge & Kegan Paul. Figure 2.6: reproduced by courtesy of the Trustees, The National Gallery, London. Figure 2.8: © 1998, The Art Institute of Chicago; reproduced by permission.

Box 3.2: reproduced by permission of Cambridge University Press. Box 3.3: extract from 'Illiteracy spells misery for 2 million' by Donald MacLeod, 1 July 1997; © The Guardian, 1997.

Figures 4.1 & 4.2: © John Leighly, 1991. Figure 4.4: reproduced by courtesy of the Trustees, The National Gallery, London. Figure 4.5: © Good Housekeeping; reproduced by permission of The Hearst Corporation. Figures 4.6 & 4.7: reproduced by permission of The National Gallery of Ireland. Figure 4.8: reproduced by permission of the Musée du Louvre.

Table 4.1: reproduced by permission of Arnold.

Figure 5.1: reproduced by permission of The Museum of Modern Art, New York; Abby Aldrich Rockefeller Fund; © 1998 The Museum of Modern Art, New York. Figures 6.1, 6.2 & 6.3: reproduced by permission of PA News. Figure 6.7: reproduced by permission of the Musée Carnavalet, Paris.

Box 8.1: reproduced by permission of Routledge & Kegan Paul. Box 8.2: (text) reproduced by permission of Routledge & Kegan Paul; (photographs) reproduced by permission of Getty Images. Box 8.3: reproduced by permission of Routledge & Kegan Paul. Box 8.4: reproduced by permission of Blackwell Publishers. Figure 8.1: reproduced by permission of Verso. Figure 8.2: reproduced by permission of Blackwell Publishers. Figure 8.3: reproduced by permission of Blackwell Publishers. Figure 8.4: reproduced by permission of Routledge & Kegan Paul. Numbered list on p. 324: reproduced by permission of Blackwell Publishers.

Box 9.3: reproduced by permission of Duke University Press.

Box 9.4: reproduced by permission of MIT Press. Figure 9.1: reproduced by permission of Penguin Books; © Alan Sheridan, 1977. Table 9.3: reproduced by permission of Sage Publications and J. Urry. Table 9.4: reproduced by permission of Blackwell Publishers. Numbered list, p. 401: © British Sociological Association; reproduced by permission of Cambridge University Press.

简明目录

第一部分 文化原理	1
1. 文化与文化研究	3
2. 交流与表达	43
3. 文化、权力和不平等	92
第二部分 文化研究	131
4. 文化的地理分布：地理、权力与表达	133
5. 文化、时间与历史	181
6. 政治与文化	221
7. 形体文化	267
8. 亚文化：阅读、抵抗和社会划分	316
9. 视觉文化	364

Contents

List of Key Influence boxes	page xiii
List of Defining Concept boxes	xv
Preface: A User's Guide	xvii
Acknowledgements	xxi
part i Cultural theory	1
I Culture and cultural studies	3
1.0 Introduction	3
1.1 What is culture?	4
1.1.1 Culture with a big 'C'	4
1.1.2 Culture as a 'way of life'	4
1.1.3 Process and development	6
1.2 Issues and problems in the study of culture	7
1.2.1 How do people become part of a culture?	7
1.2.2 How does cultural studies interpret what things mean?	9
1.2.3 How does cultural studies understand the past?	10
1.2.4 Can other cultures be understood?	12
1.2.5 How can we understand the relationships between cultures?	14
1.2.6 Why are some cultures and cultural forms valued more highly than others?	15
1.2.7 What is the relationship between culture and power?	17
1.2.8 How is 'culture as power' negotiated and resisted?	17
1.2.9 How does culture shape who we are?	18
1.2.10 Summary examples	20
1.3 Theorising culture	23
1.3.1 Culture and social structure	25

1.3.2	The organisation of meaning	31
1.4	Cultural studies	41
2	Communication and representation	43
2.0	Introduction	43
2.1	Language, communication and representation	44
2.1.1	The attributes of language	44
2.1.2	Language, culture and thought	45
2.1.3	The Sapir–Whorf hypothesis	47
2.1.4	Sociolinguistics	49
2.2	Signs and semiotics	50
2.2.1	A semiotic analysis of a photograph	51
2.2.2	Roland Barthes: semiotics and myth	52
2.3	Advertising and representation	54
2.3.1	Different types of advertising	54
2.3.2	A semiotic analysis of a sophisticated advertisement	55
2.3.3	Advertising and gender	58
2.3.4	Promotional culture	60
2.4	Language, representation, power and inequality	60
2.4.1	Language and power	62
2.4.2	Language and class	63
2.4.3	Language, race and ethnicity	66
2.4.4	Language and gender	71
2.4.5	Language as culture: language as power	72
2.4.6	The ethnography of speaking	73
2.4.7	Language as communication and representation: a summary	76
2.5	Art and representation	77
2.5.1	John Berger: oil painting, realism and capitalism	77
2.5.2	Impressionism and modernism	79
2.5.3	Art and gender	80
2.6	Television and representation	81
2.6.1	The language of industrial disputes	82
2.6.2	Stuart Hall: encoding, decoding and ideology	86
2.6.3	Television: ideology, discourse and power	89
2.7	Summary: reflecting and constructing	90
3	Culture, power and inequality	92
3.0	Introduction	92
3.1	Theorising about culture, power and inequality	95
3.1.1	Marx and Marxism	95
3.1.2	Weber, status and inequality	101
3.1.3	Caste societies	103

3.2	Legitimizing inequality	104
3.2.1	Ideology as common sense: hegemony	105
3.2.2	Ideology as incorporation: the Frankfurt School	108
3.2.3	Habitus	110
3.3	Culture and the production and reproduction of inequality	112
3.3.1	Class	112
3.3.2	'Race' and ethnicity	117
3.3.3	Gender	120
3.3.4	Age	124
3.3.5	Structural and local conceptions of power	126
3.4	Conclusion	128

part ii Cultural studies 131

4	Topographies of culture: geography, power and representation	133
4.0	Introduction	133
4.1	Cultural geography	134
4.1.1	Cultural geography 'old' and 'new'	134
4.2	The power of place: locality, language and culture	140
4.2.1	Philosophies of place	140
4.2.2	Critical understandings of place	143
4.2.3	Culture, power and place: Stockholm 1880–1900	144
4.3	The country and the city	148
4.3.1	Representing the country and the city	149
4.3.2	Cultural images of the rural	149
4.3.3	The country and the city	153
4.3.4	Cultural images of the urban: imagining Los Angeles	154
4.3.5	Conclusions	157
4.4	Culture and national identity	157
4.4.1	Nations, national identity and territoriality	157
4.4.2	Nations as 'imagined communities'	158
4.4.3	Making the nation	161
4.4.4	Imaging the nation	162
4.4.5	Nationalism, landscape and women	163
4.4.6	Nationalism: inclusions/exclusions	165
4.4.7	Conclusions	167
4.5	Orientalism: discourses of the East	168
4.5.1	Orientalism	169
4.5.2	Power and geographical representation	172
4.5.3	Critiques of Said's Orientalism	173
4.5.4	Conclusions	174
4.6	Travelling cultures, diasporic cultures and global cultures	175
4.6.1	James Clifford's 'Travelling cultures'	175

4.6.2	Paul Gilroy's Black Atlantic	176
4.6.3	Doreen Massey's 'Global sense of place'	178
4.6.4	Conclusions	179
4.7	Conclusion: separation and connection	179
5	Culture, time and history	181
5.0	Introduction	181
5.1	Now: modernity and the present	182
5.1.1	Modernity	183
5.1.2	Task-based time and industrial time	183
5.1.3	Industrial time	184
5.1.4	Time and difference	185
5.1.5	The paradox of modern time	185
5.1.6	Women and time	188
5.1.7	Modern time versus traditional time	190
5.1.8	Conclusion	193
5.2	Then: history and the past	194
5.2.1	History as facts	195
5.2.2	Marxism and history	197
5.2.3	History as narrative	199
5.2.4	Mikhail Mikhailovich Bakhtin	200
5.2.5	Michel Foucault	203
5.2.6	History and difference	204
5.2.7	Example: 'A maiden tribute to modern Babylon'	208
5.2.8	Past and present	211
5.2.9	Conclusion	212
5.3	If/when: the future	213
5.3.1	Utopia and dystopia	214
5.3.2	Narratives of the future	214
5.3.3	History and the future	218
5.4	Conclusion	219
6	Politics and culture	221
6.0	Introduction	221
6.1	Cultural politics and political culture	222
6.1.1	From politics to cultural politics	222
6.1.2	Legitimation, representation and performance	227
6.2	Cultures of political power	233
6.2.1	The cultural politics of democracy in nineteenth-century Britain	233
6.2.2	Performing identities in conventional politics	235
6.2.3	Bureaucracy as culture	241
6.2.4	Performing state power	250
6.3	Cultures of resistance	257

6.3.1	Performing identities in unconventional politics	257
6.3.2	The limits of transgression: The Satanic Verses	262
6.4	Conclusion	265
7	Cultured bodies	267
7.0	Introduction	267
7.1	The social construction of corporeality	268
7.2	Techniques of the body: embodied instrumentalities	271
7.2.1	Mauss on body techniques	271
7.2.2	Feminine motility: 'Throwing like a girl'	273
7.2.3	Body idiom and body gloss	275
7.3	Culture as control: the regulation and restraint of human bodies	276
7.3.1	Power, discourse and the body: Foucault	278
7.3.2	Civilising the body: Elias	284
7.3.3	Eating: a disciplined or a civilised cultural practice?	286
7.4	Representations of embodiment: culture's depictions	290
7.4.1	Fashion	290
7.4.2	Gender difference and representations of femininity	293
7.4.3	Representations of masculinity	295
7.4.4	Effects of bodily representations and the limits of representation	297
7.5	The body as a medium of expression and transgression: culture's idioms	300
7.5.1	The emotional body	300
7.5.2	The sporting body	301
7.5.3	Body arts	302
7.5.4	Discoursing the fit body	303
7.5.5	Bodybuilding: comic-book masculinity and transgressive femininity?	307
7.6	Cyborgism, fragmentation and the end of the body?	311
7.7	Conclusion	314
8	Subcultures: reading, resistance and social divisions	316
8.0	Introduction	316
8.1	Subcultures: power, divisions and interpretation	316
8.2	Deviants and gangs	318
8.2.1	Deviance and subculture	318
8.2.2	Mike Davis: gangs in Los Angeles	319
8.3	Folk devils, moral panics and subcultures	323
8.3.1	Stanley Cohen: Folk Devils and Moral Panics	323
8.3.2	Moral panic today	325
8.4	Youth subcultures in British cultural studies	327
8.4.1	Resistance through Rituals : the general approach	328

8.4.2	Phil Cohen: working-class youth subcultures in East London	335
8.4.3	Ideology and hegemony	337
8.4.4	Structures, cultures and biographies	338
8.5	Three studies from the Birmingham Centre for Contemporary Cultural Studies	339
8.5.1	Paul Willis: Learning to Labour	339
8.5.2	Paul Willis: Profane Culture	340
8.5.3	Dick Hebdige: Subculture: The Meaning of Style	341
8.6	Youth subcultures and gender	342
8.6.1	The teenybop culture of romance	344
8.6.2	Pop music, rave culture and gender	345
8.7	Youth subcultures and race	346
8.7.1	Simon Jones's Black Culture, White Youth : new identities in multiracial cities	347
8.8	The Birmingham Centre for Contemporary Cultural Studies and youth subcultures: a general critique	348
8.9	Aspects of contemporary youth culture	352
8.9.1	Symbolic creativity	352
8.9.2	Postmodernism and youth culture	352
8.9.3	Rave and dance culture	354
8.9.4	Going out and extending youth	356
8.10	Rethinking subcultures: interactions and networks	357
8.11	Fans: stereotypes, Star Trek and opposition	358
8.11.1	Fans of Star Trek	359
8.11.2	Fans of daytime soap opera	361
8.12	Conclusion: from resistance to identity and performance	362
9	Visual culture	364
9.0	Introduction	364
9.1	Visual culture and visual representation	365
9.2	Modernity and visual culture: classic writers and key themes	367
9.2.1	Georg Simmel: metropolitan culture and visual interaction	367
9.2.2	Walter Benjamin: mechanical reproduction, aura and the Paris arcades	372
9.2.3	The figure of the flâneur	375
9.3	Technologies of realism: photography and film	377
9.3.1	The development of photography and film	377
9.3.2	The documentary tradition	378
9.3.3	Colin MacCabe: the classic realist text	381
9.3.4	Laura Mulvey: the male gaze	383
9.4	Foucault: the gaze and surveillance	385
9.5	Tourism: gazing and postmodernism	387

9.5.1	The tourist gaze	387
9.5.2	Postmodernism and post-tourism	389
9.6	The glimpse, the gaze, the scan and the glance	391
9.7	Visual interaction in public places	392
9.7.1	Categoric knowing: appearance and spatial orders	393
9.7.2	Unfocused interaction, civil inattention and normal appearances	395
9.8	Interpreting the built environment	398
9.8.1	Marshall Berman: modernity, modernisation and modernism	398
9.8.2	Reading architecture	401
9.8.3	Reading the landscape of taste	408
9.8.4	Reading cities: legibility and imageability	409
9.8.5	Reading landscape and power	411
9.9	Visual culture and postmodernity	412
9.9.1	Postmodernism and capitalism: Fredric Jameson and David Harvey	412
9.9.2	Jean Baudrillard: simulacra and hyperreality	413
9.9.3	Digitalisation and the future of representation	416
9.10	Summary	417
	Afterword	419
	Bibliography	422
	Index	450