But now he was growing old and weak. He could not hear clearly and remember things well. When people noticed this, they did not go to him for medical advice any more, for they were afraid that the doctor might give them the wrong medicine.

He was very surprised to find that his patients were getting fewer and fewer. He went every where to ask the people the reason. People didn't want to hurt this good man, so they all told him that he had cured all the patients. No one was sick. The poor doctor believed their words and went home
