Love is a telephone which always keeps silent when you are longing for a call, but rings when you are not ready for it.

As a result, we often miss the sweetness from the other end.

Love is a telephone which, when you use it for the first time, makes you so nervous and excited that you either hold the receiver upside down or dial the wrong number.

By the time you've calmed down, you will beat a loss to whom you should make the call.

Love is a telephone which often has crossed lines. And this usually happens to you unexpectedly. Your time will either cross or be crossed. Both cases are referred to as "triangle".

Fortunately, all such occurrences are transient.

说起来
爱不可笑 爱只是莫名其妙

— 117 —

Love, like great winds,
has blown me hither and thither,
in a wayward course;
over a deep ocean of anguish,
reaching to the verge of despair.

Our hours in love have wings; in absence crutches.

—Colley Cibber

A most mediocre person can be the object of a love which is wild, extravagant, and beautiful as the poison lilies of the swamp.

There is no surprise more magical than the surprise of being loved.
It is God's finger on man's shoulder.

——Charles Morgan
