

INTERNATIONAL LAW

HERSCH LAUTERPACHT

EDITED BY
E. LAUTERPACHT, Q.C.

VOLUME 2

THE LAW OF PEACE

PARTS I

INTERNATIONAL LAW

BEING THE COLLECTED PAPERS OF
HERSCH LAUTERPACHT

Q.C., LL.D., F.B.A.

SYSTEMATICALLY ARRANGED AND
EDITED BY
E. LAUTERPACHT, Q.C.

VOLUME 2

THE LAW OF PEACE

PART I

INTERNATIONAL LAW IN GENERAL

Published by the Syndics of the Cambridge University Press
 The Pitt Building, Trumpington Street, Cambridge CB2 1RP
 Bentley House, 200 Euston Road, London NW1 2DB
 32 East 57th Street, New York, NY 10022 USA
 296 Beaconsfield Parade, Middle Park, Melbourne 3206, Australia

© Elihu Lauterpacht 1975

Library of Congress catalogue card number: 70-92250

ISBN: 0 521 20480 1

First published 1975

Printed in Great Britain
 at the University Printing House, Cambridge
 (Euan Phillips, University Printer)

CONTENTS

Preface	vii
Table of Cases	ix
Abbreviations	xv

PART I INTERNATIONAL LAW IN GENERAL

I INTERNATIONAL LAW AS LAW
1 The nature of international law and general jurisprudence	3
2 The reality of the Law of Nations	22
3 On realism, especially in international relations	52
4 Professor Carr on international morality	67
II HISTORY OF INTERNATIONAL LAW
5 International law and colonial questions, 1870-1914	95
6 International law after the Covenant	145
7 International law after the Second World War	159
III SOURCES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW
8 Private law sources and analogies of international law	173
9 Some observations on the prohibition of ' non liquet ' and the completeness of the law	213
10 Decisions of municipal courts as a source of international law	238
11 Codification and development of international law	269
IV THE WRITERS AND DOCTRINE OF INTERNATIONAL LAW
12 The Grotian tradition in international law	307
13 Spinoza and international law	366
14 Westlake and present day international law	385
15 Kelsen's pure science of law	404

16 Brierly's contribution to international law	43 <sup>1</sup>
17 The so-called Anglo-American and Continental schools of thought in international law	45 <sup>2</sup>
V THE SUBJECTS OF INTERNATIONAL LAW
18 The subjects of the Law of Nations	48 <sup>7</sup>
VI THE RELATION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW TO MUNICIPAL LAW
19 Is international law part of the law of England?	53 <sup>7</sup>
Index	57 <sup>1</sup>

PREFACE

As Hersch Lauterpacht never wrote a comprehensive treatise reflecting the full range of his wide knowledge of international law, I have thought it appropriate in these Collected Papers to attempt to weave his many writings into some systematic form. However, it has been necessary to devote volume I of these papers to three general works which could not conveniently fit into such a scheme. Thus it is only in this volume that the systematic presentation of the separate writings can begin, in rough accord with a series of headings which Lauterpacht at one time prepared when contemplating the possibility of his own textbook.

The whole volume is devoted to a single Part which, as it contains the miscellaneous chapters normally forming the introductory portion of a textbook, has been called 'International Law in General'. But the titles of three of the sections refer to areas within which Lauterpacht wrote major monographic studies. Thus much of the subject matter of The Function of Law in the International Community falls within section I on 'International Law as Law'; the content of Private Law Sources and Analogies of Public International Law enters the area of section III on 'Sources'; while the material which appeared in International Law and Human Rights touches upon both section V, 'Subjects of International Law', and the section which will be included in a later volume on 'The Individual in International Law'.

In deciding on the proper relationship between Lauterpacht's monographs and the contents of the present volume, I have been faced first by the question of what to do with articles which were subsequently incorporated into these monographs. I have on the whole felt it better to omit these – though with occasional exceptions. 'The nature of international law and general jurisprudence' and 'The subjects of the Law of Nations' have been included in this volume, notwithstanding their later appearance in The Function of Law and in International Law and Human Rights respectively, because they were of special importance in their time.

Another question has been occasioned by the existence of fragments of partial revisions of Private Law Sources and of The Function of Law. While the former represents only a very small part of Private Law Sources, its relatively advanced state of preparation has led me to include it. But the changes in The Function of Law are too scattered and too minor to justify any attempt to incorporate them here.

Chapters 3, 4 and 7 have not previously been published. Chapter 2 was only circulated in mimeographed form. Chapter 8, as stated, contains the revision of part of chapter 1 of Private Law Sources. As to the latter and other published works, I am glad to be able to acknowledge with gratitude the permission to reprint them given on behalf of the copyright owners of the chapters identified below: George Allen and Unwin Limited – chapter 6; the American Society of International Law – chapter 11; the British Institute of International and Comparative Law – chapter 19; Cambridge University Press – chapter 5; Professor A. L. Goodhart, K.B.E., Editor-in-Chief of the Law Quarterly Review – chapter 18; Longman Group Limited – chapter 8; N. V. Martinus Nijhoff's Boekhandel en Uitgeversmaatschappij – chapter 9; Oxford University Press – chapters 15 and 16; and the Royal Institute of International Affairs, London – chapters 2, 10, 12, 13 and 17.

The copy for this volume was the object of much painstaking attention by Mr D. J. Driscoll, of Edinburgh University, and by the staff of Cambridge University Press. Dr Gillian White and Mrs Charity Hopkins gave great help with the proofs and prepared, respectively, the Index and the Table of Cases. I tender my warmest thanks to them – as I do also to my secretary, Mrs S. Rainbow, and to the production staff of Cambridge University Press.

E. LAUTERPACHT

Trinity College
Cambridge
October 1974

TABLE OF CASES

- |  |  |
|--|--|
| Abu Dhabi Arbitration: see under  | Austro-German Customs Union,                         |
| Petroleum Development Ltd. v.     | 450  |
| Sheikh of Abu Dhabi                      | Baden-Prussia-Württemberg                            |
| Adams v. Akerlund, 461            | (rights and duties of riparian                       |
| Administrative Decision No. I (Tri-      | States) 248, 267                                     |
| partite Claims Commission,               | Bank of Ethiopia v. National Bank             |
| U.S.-Austria-Hungary), 501               | of Egypt and Ligouri, 568                            |
| Administrative Decision No. V            | Barbuit's Case: see under Buvot v.     |
| (Mixed Claims Commission,                | Barbuit  |
| U.S.-Germany), 501                       | Barthez de Montfort v. Treuhänder             |
| Administrator of German Property         | Hauptverwaltung, 467                                 |
| v. Knoop, 513, 558                | Behring Sea Arbitration, 119, 125,                   |
| Alabama Arbitration, 98, 99, 119,        | 126, 210, 229, 256, 464                              |
| 120, 121, 122, 123, 210, 256             | Berizzi Brothers v. Steamship Pesaro , |
| Alaskan Boundary Arbitration, 120,       | 455  |
| 124, 125, 211, 464, 465                  | Betsey, The , 239                             |
| American-Mexican Claims Bureau,          | Boeder Lust, The , 135                        |
| Inc. v. Morgenthau, 501           | Bremen-Prussia (termination of                       |
| Amalia, The , 543                 | treaties), 248                                       |
| Amazone, The , 540                | British Guiana Arbitration (Brazil-                  |
| Amedie, The , 544                 | Great Britain), 128, 211                             |
| Amiable Isabelle, The , 461       | British Guiana Arbitration (Great                    |
| Amiral Hamelin, The , 454         | Britain-United States), 119, 123,                    |
| Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. Case, 179          | 124  |
| Anglo-Norwegian Fisheries Case,          | British Guiana Boundary Arbitra-                     |
| 220, 221, 224, 276                       | tion (Great Britain-Venezuela),                      |
| Anna, The , 199                   | 210  |
| Annapolis, The , 543              | Brown (Robert E.) Case, 116                          |
| Antelope, The , 101               | Brunswick (Duke) v. King of Han-              |
| Arantzazu Mendi, The , 568        | over, 540, 541                                       |
| Aroa Mines Case, 465                     | Buron v. Denman, 559                          |
| Arrow River and Tributaries Slide        | Buvot v. Barbuit, 539, 562                    |
| and Boom Co., Ltd., Re , 557      | Cadenhead Case, 230                                  |
| Assurantie Compagnie Excelsior v. | Campbell Case, 219                                   |
| Smith, 552                               | Cape Law Society v. Van Aardt, 242            |
| Asylum Case, 224                         | Casablanca Case, 460                                 |
| Attorney-General for Canada v.    | Cayuga Indians Claim, 219, 230,                      |
| Attorney General for Ontario, 557        | 241  |
| Austria (Emperor) v. Day and      | Certain Claims by Portugal against                   |
| Kossuth, 541, 561                        | Germany, 219   |
| Austrian Pensions (State Succes-         | Certain German Interests in Polish                   |
| sion) Case, 242                          | Upper Silesia, 481                                   |

- Cession of Vessels and Tugs for Navigation on the Danube Arbitration, 235
- Chamizal Arbitration, 211
- Charkieh, The*, 242, 545
- Cherokee Nation v. State of Georgia 241
- Chorzów Factory Case (Jurisdiction), 481
- Chorzów Factory Case (Merits), 466, 481
- Chung Chi Cheung v. The King, 544, 560, 562
- Civilian War Claimants' Association Ltd. v. The King, 513, 558
- Commercial and Estates Co. of Egypt v. Ball, 564
- Commercial and Estates Co. of Egypt v. Board of Trade, 563, 564
- Competence of the International Labour Organisation (Regulation of Conditions of Work of Persons Employed in Agriculture), 465
- Cook v. Sprigg, 115, 559
- Cope v. Doherty, 543
- Costa Rica-Nicaragua-Salvador (Central American Court of Justice), 211
- Costa Rica Packet Arbitration, 478
- Crichton v. Samos Navigation Co. and Others, 258
- Cristina, The*, 540, 562
- Croft Case, 210
- Croft v. Dunphy, 543
- Czechoslovak Language of Minorities Case, 244
- Czechoslovak Spirit Duty (Plebiscite) Case, 242
- Daimler Co. Ltd. v. Continental Tyre & Rubber Co., 266
- David J. Adams, The*: see under Lewis (Jesse) (The David J. Adams) Case
- Dawes Plan Interpretation (Commissioner of Controlled Revenues) Case, 499
- de Bode (Baron) v. The Queen, 558
- de Born (Baron Frédéric) v. Yugoslavian State, 466
- De Haber v. Queen of Portugal, 541, 552
- de la Torre Case, 227
- De Wincz v. Hendricks, 540
- Delagoa Bay Railway Arbitration, 109, 128, 210
- Denunciation of the Treaty of November 2, 1865 between China and Belgium, 466
- Desgranges v. International Labour Organisation, 214
- Diaz v. Guatemala, 502
- District Governor, Jerusalem-Jaffa District and Another v. Suleiman Murra and Another, 242
- Diversion of the Waters of the Meuse, 219
- Drummond Wren, Re, 516
- Eastern Extension, Australasia and China Telegraph Co. v. United States, 218, 220, 230
- Elphinstone v. Bedreechund, 559
- Employment of Women during the Night, 219
- Engelke v. Musmann, 542
- Exchange of Greek and Turkish Populations, 465
- Extradition (Germany and Italy) Case, 513
- Faber Case, 464
- Fabiani Case, 210, 460
- Factor v. Laubenheimer, 514
- Federico, The*, 465
- Fisheries Case: see under Anglo-Norwegian Fisheries Case
- Fox, The*, 238
- Franconia, The* (Reg. v. Keyn), 97, 241, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 549, 554
- Free Zones of Upper Savoy and the District of Gex, 228, 229, 233, 465
- French Guiana Boundary Case (France-Switzerland), 465

- Genocide Convention Case: see under Reservations to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide
- German Railways (Most-Favoured Treatment) Case, 512
- Goldenberg & Sons v. Germany, 222
- Goodman v. Winterton, 500
- Grisbadarna Case, 211
- Guatemala-Honduras Boundary Arbitration, 220
- Guatemala and Salvador-Honduras (Central American Court of Justice), 211
- Guiana Boundary Arbitration (France-Netherlands), 220
- Hardman (William) Case, 232
- Heathfield v. Chilton, 539, 552, 554, 561
- High Treason (Treaty of Versailles in Germany) Case, 513, 526
- Home Frontier and Foreign Missionary Society of the United Brethren in Christ Case, 231
- Honduras-Guatemala Boundary Arbitration, 220
- Honduras-Guatemala and Salvador (Central American Court of Justice), 211
- Hopkins v. De Robeck, 540
- Ice King, The*, 455
- International Institute of Agriculture v. Profili, 499
- International Military Tribunal Judgment, 336, 488, 517, 518, 523
- International Status of South-West Africa, 227, 229
- Interpretation of the Greco-Turkish Agreement of 1 December 1926... 481
- Interpretation of the Tardieu-Jaspar Agreement of 12 January 1930... 222
- Interpretation of the Treaty of Ghent, 464
- Interpretation of the Treaty of Lausanne, Article 3, paragraph 2 ... 45, 465, 481
- Janes Case, 521
- Japanese House Tax Case, 211, 461, 465
- Jeanne, The*, 465
- Jeune Eugénie, The*, 332
- Johanna Stoll, The*, 543
- Johannes, The*, 543
- Johnstone v. Pedlar, 559
- Jolis, Re, 514
- Josef Inwald Actien Gesellschaft v. Pfeiffer and Another, 461
- Judgments of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation upon Complaints made against UNESCO, 219
- Jupiter, The*, no. 1, 267
- Jupiter, The*, no. 3, 267
- Jurisdiction of the Courts of Danzig, 511, 512
- Jurisdiction of the European Commission of the Danube, 465, 466, 481
- Kummerow Case, 465
- Labrador Boundary Case, 247
- Lasry Case, 464
- Le Louis, The*, 101, 544
- Lebanon Expropriation Case, 242
- Lebret (Elise) Case, 290
- Lederer v. German State, 513
- Lena Goldfields Arbitration, 179, 222, 499
- Leonora, The*, 137
- Lewis (Jesse) (The David J. Adams) Case, 231
- Lighthouses between France and Greece, 219
- Lindo v. Rodney, 135
- Liquidation of German Property (Treaty of Versailles) Case, 513

Liquidation de la Société des Transports Internationaux v. Séquestre de la Société des Transports Internationaux, 266
 Lockwood v. Coysgarne, 539
 Lopez, Ex p., 514
 Lopez v. Burslem, 544
 Lotus, Case of the S.S., 97, 224, 241, 243, 253, 439, 449, 455, 465, 542, 546
 Lübeck v. Mecklenburg-Schwerin, 248
 Lucia, The, 465
 Lurie v. Steinmann, 454
 McIlvaine v. Cox's Lessee, 241
 Magdalena Steam Navigation Co. v. Martin, 541, 552
 Marches, Case of, 553
 Maria, The, 199, 238, 239
 Martini Case, 513
 Mavrommatis Palestine Concessions Case, 218, 465, 481, 512
 Maziua and Naulilaa Cases, 222
 Mendizabel v. Machado, 558
 Michigan-Wisconsin Boundary Case, 247
 Minera Ygnacio Rodriguez Ramos, Cía v. Bartlesville, 242
 Minority Schools Case: see under Right of Minorities in Upper Silesia (Minority Schools)
 Missouri v. Holland, 557
 Montellano (Duke) v. Christin, 541
 Mortensen v. Peters, 543, 562
 Mosul Boundary Case: see under Interpretation of the Treaty of Lausanne, Article 3, paragraph 2
 Muscat Dhows Arbitration, 103
 Naulilaa Case: see under Maziua and Naulilaa Cases
 New York, The, 544
 Nicaragua-Costa Rica-Salvador (Central American Court of Justice), 211
 Nielsen v. Johnson, 465
 North America Dredging Co. of Texas Case, 502
 North Atlantic Fisheries Arbitration, 120, 126, 127, 211, 229, 464
 North Eastern Boundary Arbitration, 214, 215, 219, 222
 Noujaim Case, 512
 Novello v. Toogood, 540
 Nuremberg Tribunal Judgment: see under International Military Tribunal Judgment
 Orinoco Steamship Co. Arbitration, 211
 Palmas Island Arbitration, 109, 463
 Papadopoulos Case, 512
 Parker (William A.) Case, 463, 502
 Parlement Belge, The, 541, 556
 Payment of Various Serbian Loans Contracted in France, 228, 229, 459, 460, 462
 Pecuniary Claims of Danzig Railway Officials Transferred to the Polish Service: see under Jurisdiction of the Courts of Danzig
 Pelletier Case, 464
 Pesaro, The: see under Berizzi Brothers v. Steamship Pesaro
 Peter Pázmaňy University v. The State of Czechoslovakia, 510
 Petroleum Development Ltd. v. Sheikh of Abu Dhabi, 179
 Pinson (Georges) Case, 460, 464
 Pious Fund of the Californias Case, 210, 478
 Piracy jure gentium, In re, 544
 Poitier v. Croza, 553
 Porter v. Freudenberg, 465, 558
 Prussia-Baden-Württemberg (rights and duties of riparian States), 248, 267
 Prussia-Bremen (termination of treaties), 248
 Radio Corporation of America v. National Government of China, 499

Recovery, The, 238, 266
 Reg. v. Dudley, 543
 Reg. v. Keyn: see under Franconia, The
 Reg. v. Morris, 543
 Reparation Commission v. German Government, 499
 Reparation for Injuries Suffered in the Service of the United Nations, 164
 Reservations to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide, 221, 224, 275, 276, 285
 Respublica v. De Longchamps, 519, 520
 Rex v. Antonelli and Barberi, 101
 Rex v. Christian, 242
 Rex v. Crewe, 115
 Reznokov v. Ships Arcos, 454
 Rhineland Ordinances Case, 242
 Rights of Minorities in Upper Silesia (Minority Schools), 481
 Rights of Nationals of the United States of America in Morocco, 224
 Roselius and Co. v. Karsten, 242
 Russian Indemnity Case, 211, 397
 Rustomjee v. The Queen, 558
 Saar Territory (Prussian Officials) Case, 242
 Salvador-Costa Rica-Nicaragua (Central American Court of Justice), 211
 Salvador and Guatemala-Honduras (Central American Court of Justice), 211
 Savarkar Arbitration, 127, 128
 Schooner Exchange v. M'Faddon, 560
 Scotia, The, 544
 Secretary of State for India v. Kamachee Boye Sahaba, 559
 Serbian Loans Case: see under Payment of Various Serbian Loans Contracted in France
 Service v. Castaneda, 540
 Sobhuza II v. Miller, 559
 Social Insurance (Upper Silesia) Case, 499
 Société Commerciale de Belgique Case, 228, 229
 Société des Quais de Smyrna v. Greek Government, 499
 Somersett v. Steward, 102
 Sopron Kőszeg Local Railway Co. Case, 499
 South-West Africa Case: see under International Status of South-West Africa
 Spanish-German Extradition Treaty Case, 241
 Standard Oil Co. Tankers, Case, 499
 State Succession (Windhuk in South West Africa) Case, 266
 Steiner and Gross v. Polish State, 502
 Stigstad, The, 137
 Stoeck, v. Public Trustee, 559
 Studer (Adolf G.) Case, 231
 Suarez, Re, 542
 Thirty Hogsheads of Sugar v. Boyle, 241
 Triquet v. Bath, 241, 539, 561
 UNESCO Officials Appeal Case: see under Judgments of the Administrative Tribunal of the International Labour Organisation upon Complaints made against UNESCO
 United States v. Arjona, 520
 United States v. Insull, 513
 United States v. P. W. Smith, 242
 V. v. D., 243
 Valentine v. United States, 514
 Venezuelan Preferential Claim Case, 210, 465
 Viveash v. Becker, 539, 540
 Wadsworth v. Queen of Spain, 541
 Walfisch Bay Territory Arbitration, 128, 211

Walker v. Baird, 556
 West Rand Central Gold Mining
 Co. v. The King, 116, 241, 542,
 548, 550, 554, 564
 Weymberg v. Touch, 550
 Whaling and Sealing Claims Arbitration, 210
 Wilkens v. Lagarde et Procureur de la République près le Tribunal de
 Papeete, 266
 Williams Case, 210
 Wirbelauer Case, 512
 Wolff v. Oxholm, 541
 Württemberg-Baden-Prussia
 (rights and duties of riparian States), 248, 267
 Z. & F. Assets Realization Corporation at Al. v. Hull, 501
 Zamora, The, 564, 567
 Zollverein, The, 543
 Zoppot Street-Crossing Case, 512

ABBREVIATIONS

OF TITLES OF BOOKS, ETC., QUOTED IN THIS VOLUME

The books referred to in the bibliographies and notes are, as a rule, quoted with their full titles and the date of their publication. But certain books and periodicals which are often referred to in this volume are quoted in an abbreviated form, as follows:

Accioly	Accioly, Tratado de Direito internacional público , 3 vols. (1933-5).
A.J.	American Journal of International Law .
Annuaire	Annuaire de l'Institut de Droit International .
Annual Digest	Annual Digest and Reports of Public International Law Cases : 1919-22, edited by Sir John Fischer Williams and H. Lauterpacht (1932); 1923-4, edited by the same (1933); 1925-6, edited by A. D. McNair and H. Lauterpacht (1929); 1927-8, edited by the same (1931); 1929-30 (1935); 1931-2 (1938); 1933-4 (1940); 1935-7 (1941); 1938-40 (1942); 1941-2 (1945); 1919-42 (supplementary volume) (1947); 1943-5 (1949); 1946 (1951); 1947 (1951); 1948 (1953); 1949 (1955) - all edited by H. Lauterpacht.
Anzilotti	Anzilotti, Corso di diritto internazionale , vol. 1, 3rd ed. (1928), French translation by Gidel (1929); vol. III, part 1 (1915).
A.S. Proceedings	Proceedings of the American Society of International Law .
Balladore Pallieri	Balladore Pallieri, Diritto internazionale pubblico (1937).
Baty	Baty, The Canons of International Law (1930).
Bibliotheca Visseriana	Bibliotheca Visseriana Dissertationum Jus Internationale Illustrantium .
Bittner	Bittner, Die Lehre von völkerrechtlichen Urkunden (1924).
Bluntschli	Bluntschli, Das moderne Völkerrecht der zivilisierten Staaten als Rechtsbuch dargestellt , 3rd ed. (1878).
Borchard	Borchard, The Diplomatic Protection of Citizens Abroad (1915).
Br. and For. St. Papers	British and Foreign State Papers (Hertslet), vol. 1 (1841), continued up to date.
Brierly	Brierly, The Law of Nations , 5th ed. (1955).

Bustamante	Bustamante, Derecho internacional público , 3 vols. (1933-5).
B.Y.	British Year Book of International Law .
Calvo	Calvo, Le Droit international théorique et pratique , 5th ed., 6 vols. (1896).
Cavaglieri	Cavaglieri, Lezioni di diritto internazionale (general part, 1925).
Clunet	Journal du droit international .
Cruchaga	Cruchaga-Tocornal, Nociones de Derecho internacional , 3rd ed., 2 vols. (1923-5).
Dicey	Dicey, Conflict of Laws , 4th ed. (1927).
Dickinson, Cases	Dickinson, Cases and Other Materials on International Law (1950).
Documents	Documents on International Affairs .
Fauchille	Fauchille, Traité de droit international public , 8th ed. of Bonfils' Manuel de droit international public , vol. I, part 1 (1922), vol. I, part 2 (1925), vol. I, part 3 (1926), vol. II (1921).
Fenwick	Fenwick, International Law , 3rd ed. (1948).
Fiore	Fiore, Nouveau droit international public . French translation by Antoine from the 2nd Italian edition, 3 vols. (1885).
Fiore, Code	Fiore, International Law Codified . Translation by Borchard from the 5th Italian edition (1918).
Fischer Williams, Chapters	Fischer Williams, Chapters on Current International Law and the League of Nations (1929).
Fontes Juris Gentium	Fontes Juris Gentium , edited by V. Bruns.
Garner, Developments	Garner, Recent developments in International Law (1925).
Gemma	Gemma, Appunti di diritto internazionale (1923).
Genet	Genet, Traité de diplomatie et de droit diplomatique , 3 vols. (1931-2).
Gidel	Gidel, Le droit international public de la mer, le temps de paix : vol. I, Introduction - La haute mer (1932); vol. II, Les eaux intérieures (1932); vol. III, La mer territoriale et la zone contiguë (1934).
Grotius	Grotius, De Jure Belli ac Pacis (1625).
Grotius Annuaire	Grotius Annuaire International .
Grotius Society	Transactions of the Grotius Society .
Guggenheim	Guggenheim, Lehrbuch des Völkerrechts , Parts I and 2 (1947).
Guggenheim, Traité	Guggenheim, Traité de Droit International Publique , vol. I (1953); vol. II (1954).
Hackworth	Hackworth, Digest of International Law , 7 vols. (1940-3).

Hague Recueil	Recueil des Cours, Académie de Droit International de La Haye .
Hall	Hall, A Treatise on International Law , 8th ed. (1924); by A. Pearce Higgins.
Harvard Research	Research in International Law . Under the Auspices of the Harvard Law School. Draft Convention Prepared for the Codification of International Law. Directed by M. O. Hudson: (1929) I. Nationality (Reporter: Flournoy); II. Responsibility of States (Borchard); III. Territorial Waters (G. G. Wilson); (1932) I. Diplomatic Privileges and Immunities (Reeves); II. Legal Position and Functions of Consuls (Quincy Wright); III. Competence of Courts in regard to Foreign States (Jessup); IV. Piracy (Bingham); V. A Collection of Piracy Laws of Various Countries (Morrison); (1935) I. Extradition (Burdick); II. Jurisdiction with respect to Crime (Dickinson); III. Treaties (Garner).
Heffter	Heffter, Das europäische Völkerrecht der Gegenwart , 8th ed. by Geffcken (1888).
Heilborn, System	Heilborn, Das System des Völkerrechts entwickelt aus den völkerrrechtlichen Begriffen (1896).
Hertslet's Commercial Treaties	Hertslet, Collection of Treaties and Conventions between Great Britain and Other Powers, so far as they relate to Commerce and Navigation , vol. I (1820), continued to date.
Higgins and Colombos	Higgins and Colombos, The International Law of the Sea , 2nd ed. (1951).
H.L.R.	Harvard Law Review .
Holland, Lectures	Holland, Lectures on International Law , edited by T. A. and W. L. Walker (1933).
Holland, Studies	Holland, Studies in International Law (1898).
Holtzendorff	Holtzendorff, Handbuch des Völkerrechts , 4 vols. (1885-9).
Hudson, Cases	Hudson, Cases and Other Materials on International Law , 3rd ed. (1951).
Hudson, Legislation	Hudson, International Legislation : vols. I-XI (1931-50).
Hyde	Hyde, International Law, chiefly as interpreted and applied by the United States , 2nd ed., 3 vols. (1945).
I.C.J.	International Court of Justice .
I.C.L.Q.	International and Comparative Law Quarterly .
I.L.R.	International Law Reports , being the continuation of Annual Digest , edited by H. Lauterpacht until volume 24 and thereafter by E. Lauterpacht.

ABBREVIATIONS OF TITLES OF BOOKS

J.C.L.	Journal of Comparative Legislation and International Law.
Keith's Wheaton	Wheaton's Elements of International Law , 6th English edition by A. Berriedale Keith, vol. I (1929); vol. II (7th ed., 1944).
Klüber	Klüber, Europäisches Völkerrecht , 2nd ed. by Morstadt (1851).
Lapradelle-Politis	Lapradelle-Politis, Recueil des arbitrages internationaux , vol. I (1905), vol. II (1924), vol. III (1954).
Lauterpacht, Analogies	Lauterpacht, Private Law Sources and Analogies of International Law (1927).
Lauterpacht, The Function of Law	Lauterpacht, The Function of Law in the International Community (1933).
Lawrence	Lawrence, The Principles of International Law , 7th ed., revised by P. H. Winfield (1923).
Lindley	Lindley, The Acquisition and Government of Backward Territory in International Law (1926).
Liszt	Liszt, Das Völkerrecht , 12th ed. by Fleischmann (1925).
L.N.O.J.	League of Nations, Official Journal.
L.N.T.S.	League of Nations Treaty Series. Publication of Treaties and International Engagements registered with the Secretariat of the League of Nations.
Lorimer	Lorimer, The Institutes of International Law , 2 vols. (1883-4).
De Louter	De Louter, Le droit international public positif , French translation from the Dutch original, 2 vols. (1920).
L.Q.R.	Law Quarterly Review.
McNair	McNair, The Law of Treaties: British Practice and Opinions (1938).
McNair, Opinions	McNair, International Law Opinions (1956).
Maine	Maine, International Law , 2nd ed. (1894).
Martens	Martens, Völkerrecht , German translation from the Russian original, 2 vols. (1883-6).
Martens, G. F.	G. F. Martens, Précis du droit des gens moderne de l'Europe , new edition by Vergé, 2 vols. (1858).
Martens, R.	These are the abbreviated quotations of the different Martens works which are in common use.
Martens, N. R.
Martens, N. S.
Martens, N. R. G.
Martens, N. R. G., 2nd ser.
Martens, N. R. G., 3rd ser.
Martens, Causes célèbres	Martens, Causes célèbres du droit des gens , 2nd ed., 5 vols. (1858-61).

ABBREVIATIONS OF TITLES OF BOOKS

Mérignhac	Mérignhac, Traité de droit public international , vol. I (1905), vol. II (1907), vol. III (1912).
Möller	Möller, International Law in Peace and War , English translation from the Danish, vol. I (1931), vol. II (1935).
Moore	Moore, A Digest of International Law , 8 vols. (1906).
Moore, International Arbitrations	Moore, History and Digest of the International Arbitrations to which the United States has been a Party , 6 vols. (1898).
Nordisk T.A.	Nordisk Tidskrift for International Ret. Acta Scandinavica juris gentium.
Nys	Nys, Le droit international , 2nd ed., 3 vols. (1912).
Off. J.	Official Journal of the League of Nations.
Oppenheim, I. II	Oppenheim, International Law , vol. I, 8th ed. (1955), by H. Lauterpacht; vol. II, 7th ed. (1952), by H. Lauterpacht.
O.Z.ö.R.	Österreichische Zeitschrift für öffentliches Recht.
P.C.I.J.	Publications of the Permanent Court of International Justice: Series A: Judgments. B: Advisory Opinions. A/B: Cumulative Collection of Judgments and Advisory Opinions given since 1931. C: Acts and Documents relating to Judgments and Advisory Opinions. D: Collection of Texts governing the Jurisdiction of the Court. E: Annual Reports.
Perels	Perels, Das internationale öffentliche Seerecht der Gegenwart , 2nd ed. (1903).
Phillimore	Phillimore, Commentaries upon International Law , 3rd ed., 4 vols. (1879-88).
Praag	Praag, Jurisdiction et droit international public (1915).
Praag, Supplément	Supplement to the above (1935).
Pradier-Fodéré	Pradier-Fodéré, Traité de droit international public , 8 vols. (1885-1906).
Pufendorf	Pufendorf, De Jure Naturae et Gentium (1672).
Ralston	Ralston, The Law and Procedure of International Tribunals , revised ed. (1926). Supplement (1936).
Ray, Commentaire	Ray, Commentaire du Pacte (1930).
Recueil T.A.M.	Recueil des décisions des tribunaux arbitraux mixtes.
	Reddie, Researches, Historical and Critical, in Maritime International Law , 2 vols. (1844).
Répertoire	Lapradelle et Niboyet, Répertoire de droit international . Founded by Darras in 1929.

ABBREVIATIONS OF TITLES OF BOOKS

R.G.	Revue générale de droit international public.
R.I.	Revue de droit international et de législation comparée.
R.I. (Geneva)	Revue de droit international, de sciences diplomatiques, politiques et sociales.
R.I. (Paris)	Revue de droit international.
R.I.F.	Revue internationale français du droit des gens.
Rivier	Rivier, Principes du droit des gens , 2 vols. (1896).
Rivista	Rivista di diritto internazionale.
Rousseau	Rousseau, Principes généraux du droit international public , vol. I (1944).
Satow	Satow, A Guide to Diplomatic Practice , 3rd ed. by Ritchie (1932).
Scelle	Scelle, Précis de droit des gens , vol. I (1932), vol. II (1934).
Schücking und Wehberg	Schücking und Wehberg, Die Satzung des Völkerbundes , 2nd ed. (1924).
Schwarzenberger	Schwarzenberger, International Law as Applied by International Courts and Tribunals , vol. I (1945).
Scott, Hague Reports	Scott, Hague Court Reports (1916).
Scott, Hague Reports (2nd)	Scott, Hague Court Reports (Second Series) (1932).
Sibert	Sibert, Traité de droit international public , 2 vols. (1951).
Sirey	Recueil général des lois et des arrêts (founded by Sirey).
Smith	Smith, Great Britain and the Law of Nations, a Selection of Documents , vol. I (1932), vol. II (1935).
Spiropoulos	Spiropoulos, Traité théorique et pratique du droit international public (1933).
Stowell	Stowell, International Law. A Restatement of Principles in Conformity with Actual Practice (1931).
Strupp, Éléments	Strupp, Éléments du droit international public, universel, européen et américain , 2nd ed., 3 vols. (1930).
Strupp, Wört.	Wörterbuch des Völkerrechts und der Diplomatie , ed. by Strupp (begun by Hatschek), 3 vols. (1924-9).
Suarez	Suarez, Tratado de Derecho internacional público , 2 vols. (1916).
Temperley	Temperley, History of the Peace Conference of Paris , 6 vols. (1920-4).
Testa	Testa, Le droit public international maritime , translation from the Portuguese by Boutiron (1886).
Toynbee, Survey	Toynbee, Survey of International Affairs .
Travers	Travers, Le droit pénal international , 5 vols. (1920-2).
Treaty Series	United Kingdom Treaty Series, vol. I, 1892, and a volume every year.

ABBREVIATIONS OF TITLES OF BOOKS

Twiss	Twiss, The Law of Nations , etc., 2 vols., 2nd ed., vol. I (Peace, 1884), vol. II (War, 1875).
U.N.R.I.A.A.	United Nations, Reports of International Arbitral Awards .
U.N.T.S.	United Nations Treaty Series .
Vattel	Vattel, Le droit des gens , 4 books in 2 vols., new edition (1773).
Verdross	Verdross, Die Verfassung der Völkerrechtsgemeinschaft (1926).
Walker	Walker, A Manual of Public International Law (1895).
Walker, History	Walker, A History of the Law of Nations , vol. I (1899).
Walker, Science	Walker, The Science of International Law (1893).
Westlake	Westlake, International Law , 2 vols., 2nd ed. (1910-13).
Westlake, Chapters	Westlake, Chapters on the Principles of International Law (1894).
Westlake, Papers	The Collected Papers of John Westlake on Public International Law , ed. by L. Oppenheim (1914).
Wharton	Wharton, A Digest of the International Law of the United States , 3 vols. (1886).
Wheaton	Wheaton, Elements of International Law , 8th American edition by Dana (1866).
Z.I.	Zeitschrift für internationales Recht .
Z.ö.R.	Zeitschrift für öffentliches Recht .
Z.ö.V.	Zeitschrift für ausländisches öffentliches Recht und Völkerrecht .
Z.V.	Zeitschrift für Völkerrecht .

I ·

INTERNATIONAL LAW
AS LAW

THE NATURE OF INTERNATIONAL LAW AND GENERAL JURISPRUDENCE

Editor's note This chapter is reprinted from Economica, 12 (1932), 301-20. Most of the article was incorporated in The Function of Law in the International Community (first published in 1933 by the Oxford University Press and reprinted photographically in 1966 by Archon Books, Conn., U.S.A.), at pp. 420-3 and 432-8. Nonetheless, as explained in the Preface to volume 1 of these Papers, it has been thought appropriate to include this item in the systematic presentation of Lauterpacht's works.

1. THE DENIAL OF INTERNATIONAL LAW

A large and not the least important part of present-day international law is based on the assumption that what appears to the ordinary lawyer as incompatible with the conception and the purpose of law is not necessarily inconsistent with the body of rules called international law. This is so, it is said, because international law, far from being like any other law, is a 'specific' law. The purpose of this article is to examine the relevance of this view both to the question of the nature of international law and to the major question of the conception of law in general jurisprudence. In the first place we must inquire how far theories based on the independence of international law of the conception of law as developed in municipal jurisprudence can be regarded as consistent with the legal nature of international law. It will be submitted in this article that such theories, in so far as they have a definite meaning, amount to a negation of international law.

The number of writers who deny, without any qualifications, the existence of international law is comparatively small. In their view the relations of States are in effect governed by rules neither legal nor moral but by laws regulating the mutual relations of physical forces. Thus Hobbes found in the relations of States the historical demonstration of what, even in his own view, would otherwise have been a mere hypothesis, namely, of the existence among men of a pure state of nature<sup>1</sup> co-extensive with an entire absence of

<sup>1</sup> Leviathan, part 1, ch. xiii: 'But though there had never been any time, wherein particular men were in a condition of war one against another; yet in all times, kings and legal regulation. Spinoza followed him closely.<sup>1</sup> In the middle of the nineteenth century Lasson, a prominent German writer, gave clear expression to the same negative attitude towards international law.<sup>2</sup> He found followers both before and after the World War.<sup>3</sup> For some of these writers the negative attitude towards international law has been merely a link in the chain of an argument calculated to support their political theory of the State. This was notably the case with Hobbes and Spinoza. With others it is an expression and a justification of an attitude of nationalism and of a deliberate negation of the existence or of the practicability or of the need for an organized international community under the reign of law. With others still it is a denunciation of the predominant attitude of complacent disregard of realities and of the actual reign of force in an admit-persons of sovereign authority, because of their independency, are in continual jealousies, and in the state and posture of gladiators; having their weapons pointing, and their eyes fixed on one another; that is 'their forts, garrisons, and guns upon the frontiers of their kingdoms; and continual spies upon their neighbours; which is a posture of War.' This is the true meaning of Hobbes's identification of the law of nature with the Law of Nations: 'Concerning the offices of one sovereign to another, which are comprehended in that law, which is commonly called the Law of Nations, I need not say anything in this place; because the Law of Nations and the law of nature, is the same thing. . . . And the same law, that dictateth to men that have no civil government, what they ought to do, and what to avoid in regard to one another, dictateth the same to commonwealths, that is, to the consciences of sovereign princes, and sovereign assemblies' (ibid. part II, ch. xxx (in fine)). And see part II, ch. x (in fine) of his De Corpore Politico (1640) for a clear statement to the effect that 'that which is the law of nature between man and man before the constitution of commonwealth, it is the Law of Nations between sovereign and sovereign, after.' And see also the well-known Dedication to Elementa philosophica de Cive (1642) for the juxtaposition of the principles homo homino deus and homo homini lupus, the first obtaining within the State, the second in the relations of States.

<sup>1</sup> See Lauterpacht in B.T. 8 (1927), 89 et seq. [printed below p. 366], and the literature there quoted; and Verdross in Z.ö.R. 7 (1927), 100 et seq.

<sup>2</sup> Prinzip und Zukunft des Völkerrechts (1871); System der Rechtsphilosophie (1882). He says, in the former work: 'Two States confront each other like two physical forces. It is true that they are persons endowed with intelligence enabling them to recognize what is advantageous to them and to act accordingly. But there is no other link between them than their common interests, and no form of moral will limits their attitude of selfishness' (at p. 56). And he says, in the latter work: 'International law lacks the quality of true law . . . not only provisionally and for the duration of a lower stage of civilization, but permanently' (at p. 402). Seydel, a distinguished German constitutional lawyer, gave expression to the same views in almost identical terms: Grundzüge einer allgemeinen Staatslehre (1873), pp. 31-2.

<sup>3</sup> See, for instance, Binder, Philosophie des Rechts (1925), pp. 550-93; Hold-Ferneck, Lehrbuch des Völkerrechts (1930). Hold-Ferneck doubts whether there is in the modern world any measure of cultural or legal unity to serve as a basis for international law (pp. 23-4). He is of the opinion that a true community of law between States is inconceivable (p. 86); that the relation between sovereign States is necessarily one of enmity, international law being merely the

(pp. 86-9); and, in the same work, 'any large measure of acceptance of the commitments of obligatory arbitration constitutes a departure 'from the wide and clear paths dictated by the very nature of the State' (p. 151).

tedly transient stage in the development of the international society.<sup>1</sup>

Another group of writers, while not denying the obligatory force of the rules governing the relations between States, have denied to them the character of legal rules. Thus Austin regarded rules of international law - conceived as an independent system of law<sup>2</sup> - as 'positive moral rules which are laws improperly so-called', i.e., 'laws set or imposed by general opinion',<sup>3</sup> and pointed to 'the greatest logical error of all . . . committed by many continental jurists, who include in public law, not only the law of political conditions, of crimes, and of civil and criminal procedure, but also international law; which is not positive law at all, but a branch of positive morality.'<sup>4</sup> But he agreed that these rules were binding and that they were enforced by moral sanctions like fear of provoking general hostility and reprobation for the violation of maximæ generally received and respected.<sup>5</sup> Recently, Felix Somló, an able representative of the Austinian method on the continent of Europe, without denying the binding force of the rules commonly referred to as international law, denied that they partake of the character of law.<sup>6</sup>

Both the denial of the existence of international law and the denial of its legal nature are, as mentioned, comparatively rare. The more usual approach is to maintain that it is either a 'necessarily weak law' or 'specific law'. It is maintained that international law is a law

<sup>1</sup> See Lundstedt, Superstition or Rationality in Action for Peace? Arguments against Founding a World Peace on the Common Sense of Justice. A Criticism of Jurisprudence (1925). See also Nelson, Rechtswissenschaft ohne Recht (1917). And see Fricker in Zeitschrift für die gesamte Staatswissenschaft, 28 (1872), 90 et seq. and 347 et seq.; ibid. 34 (1878), 368 et seq.

<sup>2</sup> Lectures on Jurisprudence or the Philosophy of Positive Law (5th ed., 1885), I, 182.

<sup>3</sup> Ibid. II, 754.

<sup>4</sup> The denial of the legal nature of international law conceived as an independent system of law is not incompatible, and must not be confused, with the affirmation of the legal character of some of its rules, namely, of those which are administered as legal rules expressly adopted by the State and its courts. Austin distinguished clearly between these two aspects of the question. He was pointing out repeatedly that 'although positive international morality (so-called international law) . . . has no force within one nation yet . . . a nation may adopt it and enforce it as positive law within itself': Jurisprudence (4th ed. by Campbell, 1873), II, 635. This point of view is clearly expressed in Mortensen v. Peters in the High Court of Justiciary of Scotland (8 Session Cases 93): 'It is a trite observation that there is no such thing as a standard of international law extraneous to the domestic law of a kingdom, to which appeal may be made. International law, so far as this court is concerned, is the body of doctrine regarding the international rights and duties of States which has been adopted and made part of the law of Scotland.' It is not shared by writers on English law in so far as they touch on international law. For a further discussion of international law as external constitutional law see Wenzel, Juristische Grundprobleme (1920). See also Akzin, Les problèmes fondamentaux du droit international public (1929).

<sup>5</sup> Jurisprudence, I, 226.

<sup>6</sup> Juristische Grundlehre (2nd ed., 1927), pp. 153-73.

analogous to that obtaining among primitive communities; that these undoubted shortcomings do not seriously imperil the legal nature of international law; that they are the necessary consequence of the existence of a community of sovereign States; and that to remedy them would in effect mean the termination of international law and its transformation into internal or federal law. This is a school of thought which is generally not regarded as unprogressive. It combines an idealistic defence of the legal nature of international law – conceived as weak law – with repeated assertions that its shortcomings are of a permanent nature as there 'is not and never will be a central authority above the several States'.<sup>1</sup> This view is held by writers as wide apart as Holland,<sup>2</sup> Zitelmann<sup>3</sup> and De Louter.<sup>4</sup> Some writers even go to the length of maintaining that although most of these permanent deficiencies constitute legal shortcomings, they contribute towards making international law a superior type of law from the moral and social point of view.<sup>5</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Oppenheim, International Law (4th ed., by McNair, 1928), I, 288. And see ibid. pp. 13–15, for an exposition of the legal character of international law notwithstanding its being a weak law. The view that there cannot and 'never will be' an organized civitas maxima exercising authority over States is a persistent feature of Oppenheim's treatise.

<sup>2</sup> The Elements of Jurisprudence (6th ed. 1893), p. 339. International law, he says, 'is the vanishing point of Jurisprudence: since it lacks any arbiter of disputed questions, save public opinion, beyond and above the disputant parties themselves, and since, in proportion as it tends to become assimilated to true law by the aggregation of States into a larger society, it ceases to be itself, and is transmitted into the public law of a federal government'.

<sup>3</sup> Die Unvollkommenheit des Völkerrechts (1919). After enumerating a series of shortcomings of international law, he expresses the opinion that these shortcomings are the necessary consequence of an international law as a law between sovereign States. The present shortcomings of international law, he says, could be removed by the League of Nations becoming the civitas maxima and exercising judicial and executive functions over the States. 'But then,' he says, 'this would no longer be international law seeing that the latter presupposes logically the existence of sovereign States' (at p. 53).

<sup>4</sup> De Louter, I, 59: 'Le droit international n'a pas de législateur, et, qui plus est, n'en aura jamais. Un pouvoir législatif ne saurait exister que dans un État. Dès que le droit international cesse d'être un droit entre des États souverains, pour devenir le droit d'un pouvoir qui leur est supérieur et auquel tous sont soumis, les États perdent leur souveraineté et le droit international se métamorphose en droit public d'un État mondial.'

<sup>5</sup> 'The Law of Nations is of a distinctly different character from municipal law. It may truly be affirmed that the lex gentium is of a more elevated nature. Applying as it does inter gentes, it does not appeal to the policeman; it appeals to reason itself, to the sense of equity, to a higher moral consciousness' (Philip Marshall Brown, International Realities (1917), at p. 104). See also Sauer, Lehrbuch der Rechts- und Sozialphilosophie (1929), at p. 290, to the effect that although international law is deficient qua law, it is a superior cultural phenomenon: 'From the cultural point of view international law transcends municipal law as based on compulsion. It aspires, from the limited domain of strict law, to an affirmation, as a matter of moral conviction, of the cultural community of mankind.' The historian of legal thought will note with interest that at a certain stage of the development of international law its notional attractiveness was regarded by some as a sufficient compensation for its substantial shortcomings.

The latter doctrine, although viewing the weaknesses of international law as necessarily and permanently connected with the existence of the international society of States, admits that they are shortcomings from the more general legal point of view. But according to another view, the so-called shortcomings of international law are merely the manifestation of its specific character. They are shortcomings, it is said, only so long as they are viewed from the narrow perspective of municipal law, whereas in fact they are a reminder of the existence of a wider conception of law of which municipal law is only a historical category. Thus we find Westlake suggesting that the controversy whether rules of international law are rules of law or of morality can be solved if we decline 'to treat the law of the land as the only proper kind of jural law, for then while keeping law distinct from morality, we shall not encourage an undue attribution to international law of the characters only appropriate to the law of the land'.<sup>1</sup> It is said that 'the orthodox concept of law is not sacrosanct'; that 'it is necessary to inquire whether it ought not to be adapted to the requirements of actual life' (actual life meaning for this purpose the existence of rules called international law);<sup>2</sup> and that the proper way to approach philosophy of law is international law 'through which one is in the position to follow the delicate problem of the creation and the development of law'.<sup>3</sup>

We thus arrive at the central problem in the question of the determination of the legal nature of international law. The answer to this question obviously depends upon the conception of law which we adopt as the basis of the investigation. To what conception of law must international law conform in order that it can accurately be described as law? Is it a conception of law deduced from the positive legal order within the State, i.e., a conception of law of general jurisprudence in modern society? Or is it a conception of law made so elastic as to embrace the body of rules regulating at present the mutual relations of modern States? Shall international law be guided, while admitting its own shortcomings, by the generally accepted notion of law which few would venture to deny but for the necessity of defending the legal nature of international law? Or shall it broaden it and impart to it some of its elasticity? To put the question in a manner expressing the view of the present writer -- Shall international law aim at improvement by trying to bring its rules within the compass of the generally accepted notion of law, or shall it disintegrate it and thus deprive itself of a concrete ideal of perfection? It will be noted that the question thus put transcends the limits of a problem of international law. It becomes a problem of general jurisprudence, a problem whether the general conception of law should be broadened by the inclusion of a generalized norm of conduct based on the relations of sovereign States as at present constituted. Before answering these questions it is necessary to consider the doctrine in which the theory of the specific character of international law has found its current expression. This is the so-called theory of international law as a law of co-ordinate entities or, shortly, as a 'law of co-ordination'.

<sup>1</sup> Papers, p. 14. However, Westlake himself saw the dangers of this method of approach, and admitted that 'if we give the name of law to anything which we so discover in a remote state of society before we have fixed in our minds what we mean by that name, we beg the question, and have no security that our language has any consistent, or therefore useful, sense' (ibid. p. 22). The whole trend of his work justifies the observation of Oppenheim that 'he belonged to the legal school of international jurists who, in contradistinction to the members of the diplomatic school, desire International Law to develop more or less on the lines of Municipal Law' (ibid. p. 10).

<sup>2</sup> Mayer in Archiv des öffentlichen Rechts, 38 (1918), 14.

<sup>3</sup> Sauer, Grundlagen der Gesellschaft (1924), p. 431.

2. INTERNATIONAL LAW AS A SO-CALLED LAW OF CO-ORDINATE ENTITIES

The notion of international law as a law of co-ordination has recently been increasingly adopted by writers, but there has been no attempt to elaborate it in detail.<sup>1</sup> In a recent text-book of <sup>1</sup> See, for instance, Strupp, Éléments, I, 11 ('Les États étant égaux entre eux, le droit international public en tant qu'il est un droit de co-ordination et non un droit de subordination'); Liszt, p. 8 ('International law is based on a corporate not authoritarian principle'); Walz, Das Wesen des Völkerrechts und die Kritik der Völkerrechtstheorie (1930), pp. 252-61, also bases his construction of international law on the theory of co-ordination, but there is no attempt at a detailed exposition of what the law of co-ordination really means. Ultimately, the whole theory is reduced to a difference in the manner of the creation of rules of law. Walz does not deny that rules of international law, once established, bind States independently of their will. But he attaches decisive importance to the difference in the 'process of positivation' (i.e. of creation) of rules of law. There is no explanation why this should be a reason for regarding international law as 'a law of a specific character strongly differing from municipal law' (p. 295). See also Heller, Die Souveränität (1927), pp. 43-4, who regards international law as 'a non-authoritarian legal order based on contract' (herrschaftsfreie Vertragsordnung).

It seems that the insistence on the specific law of co-ordination on the part of German writers has recently assumed the form of a particularly German conception of international law grounded in the Teutonic as distinguished from the Romanistic tradition as embodied in some peculiarities of the political structure of German society in the Middle Ages and in the feudal period. See, for instance, Sternberg, Einführung in die Rechtswissenschaft (2nd ed. 1927), part I, p. 26. See also for an admirable survey with an extensive bibliography, Borchard in Yale Law Journal, 36 (1926-7), 1058-74. That the idea of the societas inordinata as the basis of political relations is necessarily bound up with the existence of a legal power above the societas inordinata is clearly pointed out by Binder, Die Philosophie des Rechts (1925), p. 572.

Hatschek<sup>1</sup> there is a restatement of the theory of co-ordination, but the attempt is not particularly illuminating. International law, he says, is a legal system based on co-ordination.<sup>2</sup> This, he explains, means that, unlike municipal law, which is based on subordination of persons to the legal rule, there is in international law no superior will which imposes the law. There is no super-State endowed with authority. He then proceeds to define the international law of co-ordination as a 'legal order based on the recognition of States as equal subjects of international law' -- a somewhat inconclusive explanation seeing that municipal law, which is a law of 'subordination', is also based on the equality of individuals before the law. How are rules of international law created in such a system? They are created principally by parallel legislation or customary municipal rules in various countries, for instance, by that relating to the inviolability of envoys and foreign heads of States. These rules are binding upon States not as legal rules but as so-called social or conventional rules, i.e., rules which are not created by an authoritative source of law and whose sanction consists merely in social compulsion.<sup>3</sup> From these conventional rules there grows, as the result of their becoming part of the legal conviction of States, particular and, in the long run, general customary international law. We are not told what is the basis or the nature of the binding force of this customary international law. This somewhat slender basis serves as the foundation for Hatschek's exposition of international law. For a more satisfactory exposition of the law of co-ordination it is necessary to go back to earlier German writers, in particular to Jellinek and Triepel.

Jellinek was the first to construe international law as a specific law of co-ordination. He did it with the help of the theory of self-limitation,<sup>4</sup> a theory originally developed in order to demonstrate <sup>1</sup> Völkerrecht als System rechtlich bedeutsamer Staatsakte (1923). An English translation by Manning of the abridged version of this book appeared in 1930.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid. p. 2.

<sup>3</sup> Hatschek instances the conventions and customs of the constitution in Great Britain as an example of conventional rules. On the whole the term 'conventional rules' as used by Hatschek and other German writers is identical with Austin's 'positive morality'.

<sup>4</sup> The theory was first formulated in Jellinek's Die rechtliche Natur der Staatenverträge (1880), and subsequently amplified and defended in his Allgemeine Staatslehre (1st ed. 1900). Of the latter a French translation by Fardis appeared in two editions under the title L'État moderne et son droit (2nd ed. in 1911 and 1913). The rudiments of the doctrine of self-limitation will be found in Ihering's Der Zweck im Recht (1880), I, 318, and possibly even in Rousseau's Contrat Social (Book I, chs. IV and VII). See Sukiennicki, Essai sur la Souveraineté des États en Droit International Moderne (1926), pp. 170-4. For examples of the adoption of the theory of self-limitation see Nippold, Der völkerrechtliche Vertrag (1894), pp. 19-22, and Zorn, Grundzüge des Völkerrechts (1903), p. 7. The doctrine has been accepted by some French writers, for instance, Mérygnac, I, 291 et seq.; Malberg, Contribution à la théorie générale de l'État, I (1920), 237 et seq.

the partial subjection of the State to law. In this act of self-limitation Jellinek recognizes also the source of such binding force as international law possesses. He sees no difference between international and municipal law except that, whereas the latter is a relation of subordination of the members of the community to law, the former is one of co-ordination of entities. International law is grounded in the will of the State, and ultimately it is this basis of international law which is decisive. Where international law and the existence of the State conflict, the former must yield, for international law exists for States and not States for international law. Legally, says Jellinek, the State is entitled to disengage itself at any time from an obligation deemed to be inconsistent with the interests of the State. This precarious nature of international obligations does not, in his view, deprive them of their legal nature, for in addition to the purely normative aspect there is a psychological foundation for law arising out of the fact that it is recognized as binding by the members of the society. Such obligations are not absolutely binding as a matter of strict law, but they possess a binding force grounded in the objective nature of international relations which from the point of view of their social necessity are comparable to those obtaining among individuals.<sup>1</sup> Thus, although as a matter of legal theory the will of the State is the origin and the basis of the obligation, that will is not an entirely irrational factor.

This juxtaposition of two conflicting methods of approach has led to some confusion as to the actual meaning of Jellinek's combination of the doctrine of self-limitation and the theory of a law of co-ordination. Whereas his treatment of international law is generally subjected to severe criticism and regarded as the very negation of law and a glorification of force, there are writers who draw attention to Jellinek's insistence on the objectively binding force of international law and express the opinion that there is no substantial difference between his approach and the more recent doctrines from Triepel to Kelsen and Verdross.<sup>2</sup> It may be doubted whether this is so. As a legal theory the doctrine of self-limitation cannot be interpreted otherwise than as a denial of the binding force of international law. As a sociological and psychological doctrine it amounts to a negation of the ultimate supremacy of the legally sovereign State and thus to an affirmation of the binding force of international law. This double method of approach Jellinek defended on the ground that the same object may form the subject-matter of various modes of cognition. Thus, he said, a symphony may be the subject-matter of physiology or aesthetics. In proceeding thus he laid himself open to the reproach that it is scientifically impossible to treat objects as the subject-matter of various modes of knowledge at the same time.<sup>1</sup> The fact that the juridical supremacy of the State is sociologically or morally limited by other considerations necessarily escapes juridical appreciation. In practice these considerations may or may not become operative; in practice political considerations may limit the State's freedom from the legal bond, but they need not when these very considerations dictate to the State the necessity of disregarding its obligations. The juridical theory of self-limitation leaves open that possibility. It makes the observance of rules of international law not a matter of legal obligation, but the result of a calculation—which may or may not take the long view—as to the compatibility of the observance of the obligation with the interests of the State. Jellinek himself admitted that as the result of a law of co-ordination thus conceived, 'the community of States is of a purely anarchical nature and international law, originating from an unorganized authority and possessing accordingly no overriding authority, may properly be described as an anarchical law'.<sup>2</sup> It is not surprising that he regarded war not only as a necessary factor but also as an element of progress in this anarchical society. This is in fact the attitude of most of the adherents to the doctrine of auto-limitation. Thus Bergbohm, one of the precursors of the doctrine, regarded the very idea of a permanent international court as incompatible with the modern conception of the State.<sup>3</sup> This was also the attitude of some of the followers of Jellinek.

Where, as the result of the adoption of a somewhat promiscuous method, a writer's opinion lends itself to two diametrically different interpretations, then that interpretation ought to be preferred—as being more accurate—which is most in accordance with the actual influence exercised by the doctrine.<sup>4</sup> It must be judged by its fruits.

<sup>1</sup> See for a vigorous criticism of this 'two-sides' theory Kelsen, Der soziologische und der juristische Staatsbegriff (1922), pp. 114-20. <sup>2</sup> Allgemeine Staatslehre (3rd ed. 1921), p. 379.

<sup>3</sup> Staatsverträge und Gesetz als Quellen des Völkerrechts (1877), p. 32. See also the same, Jurisprudenz und Rechtsphilosophie (1892).

<sup>4</sup> For a criticism of the doctrine of self-limitation see Triepel, Völkerrecht und Landesrecht (1899), pp. 77-81; Duguit in H.L.R. 31 (1917-18), 139-48; Kelsen, Das Problem der Souveränität und die Theorie des Völkerrechts (1920), pp. 168-74; Sukiennicki, op. cit., pp. 174-222; Verdross, pp. 12-20, and in Hague Recueil, 16 (1927) (i), 262-74; Chklaver, Le droit international dans ses rapports avec la philosophie du droit (1929), pp. 179-87; Briery, 'Le fondement du caractère obligatoire du droit international', Hague Recueil, 23 (1928) (iii), 482-4.

<sup>1</sup> Die rechtliche Natur der Staatenverträge, pp. 46-9.

<sup>2</sup> See, for instance, Spiropoulos, Théorie générale du droit international (1930), pp. 46-50.