ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

The author wishes to thank Rochelle Fenchel, once again, for invaluable assistance, especially in editing and helpful comments. The research assistance of Yuri Slyz was important to the final draft. Once again, the Filomen D'Agostino and Max E. Greenberg Research Fund facilitated completion of this work, which is a substantially revised and updated version of my 1993 General Course at the Academy of International Law at the Hague. In particular, these revisions were much aided by dynamic interaction with my superb students from all over the world, who entered so enthusiastically into this effort to examine critically the fairness towards both states and persons, of contemporary international law.
