Preface

Zhanjiang is situated in the Zhanjiang is one of the firscoastal cities and in the southwest part of Guangdong Province, at 109° 40° to `110° 55° East Longitude, 20° 15° to 21° 55° North Latitude. Zhanjiang locates just in the conjunction area between Guangdong, Hainan and Guangxi provinces. Zhanjiang faces the south China Sea to the east; in the south across the qiongxhou strait, Zhanjiang borders hainan Province; in the west the Beibu Gulf and in the northwest the Guangxi Zang Autonomous Region; in the north-east Maoming city. The sea-air-and land transportation in Zhanjiang is excellent. Zhanjiang is one of the first fourteen open coastal cities in China. Under its jurisdiction are four districts (Chikan, Xiashan, Potou and Mazhand), two counties (Xuwen and Suixi), and three county level cities (Leixhou, Lianjiang and Wuchuan). Also, there are one state-approved Economic and Technological Development Zone and four provincial-approved Economic Development Test Zones (Donghai Island, Haian, Mazhg and Jiuzhoujiang). Zhanjiang covers an area of 12,500 square kilometers with a popultion of 6.37 million, of which 4.83 million love in the countryside.

The land in Zhanjiang si open and flat. Zhanjiang has marine monsoon climate, so it is neither too cold in winter nor extremely hot in summer. With plenty of sunshine and ample rainfall, the annual mean temperature is 22.7-23.3c and the average rainfall is 1417-1802mm. Zhanjiang has 350,000 hectares of cultivated land and 1556 km of coastline. Along its curved coast there are 490,000 hectares of tidal fiats and shallow waters. With a wide variety of animal and plant species, Zhanjiang offers an ideal place for agriculture and animal husbandry.

Since China opened its door to the outside world, Zhanjiang has focused on the development of "3-High Agriculture" (high productivity, high quality and high return) and the devdlopment of tropical and subtropical fruit. Therefore the agriculture structure has been adjusted. At present 21 agriculture production bases have been built in grain, sugarcane, oil crops, fruit and vegetable production, animal husbandry, aquaculture and forsetry. The bases of sisal, rubber, sugarcane, vegetables pineapples, mangoes, oranges, bananas, eucalyptus, sea pearl, prawns as well as cattle have been listed as state and provincial production bases. All this makes Zhanjiang is a well=known agriculture center in South China. In 1998 the agriculture output value reached RMB 17.5 billion; the gross output value of township and private enterprises amounted to RMB 29.1 billion, and the income of the farmers has reached RMB 3,013—an increase of 0.7,7.8 and 2.7 times respectively over that of 1990.

In the new millennium, Zhanjiang will take advantages of its unique geographical location. We will further adjust our farm structure so that our products will be more marketable and competitive and we will focus the economy as our center. We will further develop scientific agriculture to speed up the South-Asia-Tropical-Agriculture Demonstration Ares and the agriculture modernization drive. With improved farming conditions more projects will be realized in Leizhou and the Peninsula will be a vibrant and attractive place, indeed.

The people in Zhanjiang are honest and hardworking. The lead a simple lofe style and their minds are as open as the sea. We sincerely Welcome investors from home and abroad to invest in our agriculture and in the construction of the South-Asia Subtropical Agriculture Demonstration Base.
