SHANGHAI ZOO

Formally named the Western Suburban Park, the zoo is a lovely retreat situated in the western suburbs of Shanghai. Here, in an area around 1,000 mu (approx. 70 hectares), some 320 diverse kinds of indigenous animals are kept for exhibition, among which are rare and precious animals and birds from all over the country, such as pandas, langurs, antelopes with twisted horns, the white-lipped deer, the Asian elephants, the Yangtze crocodiles, etc. Exotic animals representative of other regions of the world, such as black gorillas, giraffes and hippopotami from Africa, sea lions and wild oxen from America, ostriches and kangaroos from Australia are also on display here.

Animals here are exhibited in enclosures simulating their natural habitats. For example, the panda hill is densely planted in bamboos, the lion and tiger hills are steep and hazardous and surrounded by deep sombre pines, the elephant palace is surrounded by clusters of palms and the swan lake is a wide expanse of green water with quiet ripples. In a word, one can find "mountains" and "forests" here together with the animals and birds.
