They may look like the latest in canine cool, but to these dogs they're a lot more than that. It's where a Munich company called Dog Goes comes in. It makes glasses specially designed to fit canine heads and dog owners are snapping them up.

The image conscious owner might be swayed by the different colors and sizes available, but the company is keen to stress they're not simply a fashion accessory. They offer a hundred percent protection from UV rays, rain, sand and wind. The glasses range in prices from 85 to around 95 dollars and can be bought over the Internet. A series of adjustable straps keeps them in place for those occasional rough scraps with other dogs. And cruising down a country road, with the top down, leaves man and his best friend looking twice as cool.
