The Declaratory Judgment

Preface to the Fourth edition

Between the first edition and the second, 31 years elapsed. As a result the second edition required an almost complete rewriting. The third edition followed a more respectable eight years later. The fourth edition follows in its footsteps after a ten year gap. During this period there have been no profound changes. However, there have been a number of cases that have shown a welcome recognition of the breadth of the Court's jurisdiction to grant declaratory relief.

We have been greatly indebted to Lord Clyde and Professor Fancis Jacobs for their contributions to the Scottish and European sections to the previous two editions of this work. Following Lord Clyde's untimely death we are greatly indebted to Lord Eassie for spearing the time from his heavy commitments in the Court of Session to update Chapter 8 on the Declarator. We would also like to thank Eleanor Sharpston, who despite her gruelling schedule as an Advocate General in the Court of Justice, found the time to review the sections of the book that are directed at the Court of Justice of the European Union. We also remain indebted to Professor Itzhak Zamir, who has retired from the Supreme Court of Israel, for providing the foundations to this work. Finally, we are also greatly indebted to all those at Sweet and Maxwell who have played a part in the publication of this edition for their assistance.

We would like to thank Benjamin, his mother Wendy and grandmother Marguerite for their support and forbearance while we were working on this edition. We trust those who turn to this edition will find the assistance they require.
