This book was written to serve the need for an accessible introduction to some of the key issues in the increasingly complex and rapidly changing field of internet law in Canada.

I have sought to cover a few of the more important elements in the law. The topics covered are encountered in many kinds of internet-related issues. Due to the limited scope of the text some areas, such as criminal law, are not addressed.

The more research one does, the more there is a temptation to include more detail. That can affect readability, especially in an introductory text. I have sought to keep the text accessible and place some more detailed nuances and areas for further study in the footnotes. I hope that will be found helpful for readers. In some areas I have provided more expanded examples and lessons from key cases in order to make the text more usable for those studying in challenging areas such as assessing the emerging fair dealing user's right under the Copyright Act.

I am grateful to the many thoughtful questions from my students over the years at, respectively, Osgoode Hall Law School, LLM program and my co-instructors in Osgoode Hall Law School's unique e-Business LLM program; Concordia University College of Alberta, M.Sc. program; and the University of Alberta law school and University of Calgary law school where I have offered courses in Internet Law. An instructor benefits from that intellectual stimulation as much as the students do. I am also grateful to my colleagues and friends Sebastien Gittens, Mary Beth Currie, Michael Whitt, Duncan Card, Stephen Burns, Robert Irani, Ciara Toole, Cody Olsen, Cassia Prentice and Bryan West, who each helped share some insights, experience and wisdom with me and also often shared some early work on selected topics in the text. Their efforts and creativity are acknowledged and benefit this text. Any errors in the text are my own.

The text was written using the Word™ program of Microsoft Office™ 2010 on both a MacBook® Pro and a MacBook Air®. I welcome suggestions and comments at mpjkratz@gmail.com.

I thank the efficient team at Carswell (Thompson Reuters), and especially Lisa Gordon, Product Development Manager, for her patience, support, feedback and guidance.

A work such as this text involves countless hours on weekends and evenings reading cases, thinking, writing, and redoing this cycle leading to editing and more refinements. That is time away from my family and I am grateful to them for their patience. I thank my children, Alexandra, Robert and Marcus, for their quiet support. I am grateful for my wife Christina's patience, support and encouragement.
