Preface

Since the 'Year Book of Health in the People's Republic of China 1986' was published for the first time, there has always been a need for update information about the Chinese health services which have developed and changed dramatically over the past decade. Along with the improvement of the health services, the establishment of medical insurance and health legislation, a relatively complete health system to meet the needs of socialist market economy and Chinese people's health has been gradually shaped in China through ongoing reform in the past years. Presented here is the sixth volume of the Year Book which has come out at the right time to meet the worldwide readers' needs, and the contents of this volume are mainly centered around the further overall reforms in all aspects of the health sector since the reforms have had significant influence on Chinese health services and increasingly attracted worldwide attention. Furthermore, this book provides readers with current and essential information which will help readers gain overall picture about the current Chinese health services.

With view to reflecting update information every year about the Chinese health services, this volume has been compiled on the basis of reviewing the health development and progress made up to the end of 1995 in the hope of providing readers with overall information in this year. It presents fifteen parts including Health Policies and Reform, Public Health Supervision and Inspection, Disease Control, Endemic Disease Control and Health Quarantine Services, Patriotic Health and Sanitation, Maternal and Child Health Care, Traditional Chinese Medicine, Medical Administration, Medical Education, Medical Sciences and Technology, Drug Administration and Pharmaceutical Industry, International Exchanges and Foreign Loan Project Implementation, Public Figures in the Health Field, the 1995 Health Chronology and Health Information and Statistics. In addition, 17 colour photographs are included.

The editorial committee of the book consists of a large number of senior officials and health specialists from the Ministry of Health, the National Patriotic Health Campaign Committee, the State Pharmaceutical Administration, the State Administration of Traditional Chinese Medicine and the Health Department of the PLA Logistics Ministry. Minister of Health Chen Minzhang is the editor-in-chief of this book.

We are trying to give readers of the Year Book update and overall information that can help them gain better understanding of development of the Chinese health services. We hope that we have done so this year.
