PREFACE

In writing this book I have had the help of a great many people, and it is a pleasure to be able to thank them. I must first acknowledge the financial support of the Canada Council, the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, and the Research Board of the University of Toronto. Their generosity made possible the archival work upon which the book largely rests and also enabled me to analyze much of the data by computer. At a crucial stage in the writing I was fortunate to be awarded a Killam Senior Fellowship, which relieved me from teaching duties, and I am pleased to record my thanks to the Killam Research Programme of the Canada Council.

I owe a considerable debt of gratitude to a large number of librarians and archivists in England and Canada. It is a great pleasure to thank Dr. David Robinson, the county archivist of Surrey, and the staff of the County Record Office for their cheerful and efficient help. I am particularly grateful to Elizabeth Stazicker and Anne McCormack, who have forwarded my work in numerous ways over many years. I remember with gratitude, too, the late Miss Marguerite Gollancz, who was the county archivist when I first worked in Surrey and whose interest and encouragement meant a great deal to me. I am also grateful to the archivists at the Guildford Muniment Room and to Mr. J. R. More-Molyneux for permission of quote from the Loseley Mss., which he has so generously put on deposit there. I would like to express my thanks to the staffs of the Public Record Office, the British Library, the Cambridge University Library, the East and West Sussex Record Offices, the Wiltshire Record Office, and the Robarts Library, University of Toronto. I am particularly grateful for numerous kindnesses to Roy Hunnisett of the Public Record office and to Mary McTavish and Merrill Distad of the Robarts Library.

I have been fortunate to have had the help of a number of research assistants in the collection of evidence, the coding of data for computer analysis, and the running of computer programs. I would like especially to thank Linda Distad, whose skill and enthusiasm I depended on over a long period in the early stages of the research, and Peter Munsche, David Clark, Christine Cook, and Georgina Wyman. I wish to thank Chris Grounds of the Geography Department, University of Toronto, for preparing the maps, and Constance Craig for the figures.

A large number of friends and colleagues have helped me over the years by sending references and by reading and commenting on parts or all of the manuscript in its various drafts. I am of course responsible for the errors and shortcomings that remain, but I have been saved from numerous mistakes and have benefited in countless ways from their suggestions and criticisms. It is a pleasure to have this opportunity to thank Donna Andrew, David Flaherty, Arie Freiberg, Martin Friedland, Thomas Green, Peter King, Norma Landau, Peter Lawson, Peter Linebaugh, Robert Malcolmson, Peter Munsche, and John Styles. I owe a particular debt of gratitude to James Cockburn, whose knowledge of the records of the assize courts and whose advice I have depended on over many years; to John Langbein, who has generously provided me with a great deal of information and who subjected an early version of the manuscript to a particularly thorough and helpful reading; to Douglas Hay, who helped me plan the quantitative aspects of the work at the beginning of my research and who has continued over the years to give me the benefit of his advice on this and other subjects; and to Joanna Innes, who has been the most generous of friends and has shared unstintingly the results of her own work and offered a great deal of valuable advice.

It is also a pleasure to record my gratitude to my colleagues in the Centre of Criminology at the University of Toronto. I have drawn heavily on their resources for typing and computer analysis in recent years, and while the main financial support of my work came from the Canada Council and the Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, I must also acknowledge the help of the Ministry of the Solicitor General of Canada through the Contributions grant made to the Centre of Criminology. I am grateful to the staff of the Centre, particularly to Rita Donelan, Marie Pearce who typed the final manuscript, Janet Chan who gave me a great deal of help with data analysis, and Catherine Matthews and the staff of the library. I have benefited not only from the physical resources of the Centre, but also from the criticism, advice, and interest of members of its research and teaching staff, especially Patricia Baranek, Richard Ericson, Clifford Shearing, and Philip Stenning. I feel a particular debt of gratitude to John Edwards, the founder and first Director of the Centre, and to Tony Doob, his successor: their interest in my work and their generous support have meant a great deal.

I wish to thank the editorial staff of Princeton University Press, and particularly Barbara Stump for her skill and patience in editing the manuscript.

Finally, I am grateful to my family: to my children who have helped me in many ways; and above all to my wife, who has taken part in the research and read and criticized every draft of the manuscript. She has contributed greatly to this book from its inception, and it is a particular pleasure to dedicate it to her.
