THE AUTHORS

BETTY W. TAYLOR is a Director of the Legal Information Center and Professor of Law at the College of Law of the University of Florida. She received her M.A. degree in Library Science in 1950 and a J.D. degree from the University of Florida in 1962. She has been employed in the library system at the University of Florida since 1950 and has been Director of the Legal Information Center since 1962. She is the author of many publications and is a frequent speaker on the subject of libraries, law, and computers. As a Board Member of both the American Association of Law Libraries and SOLINET, the Southeastern Library Network, and a member of the American Bar Association's Committee on Law Libraries, she has been influential in the development of automation of law libraries.

ROBERT J. MUNRO has been a law librarian at the Legal Information Center for ten years. He earned his M.A. in Political Science and a J.D. from the University of Iowa, his M.L.S. at Louisiana State University, and his Ph.D. in Higher Education at the University of Florida in 1981. He and his wife Louise reside in Gainesville, Florida.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR USE OF BIBLIOGRAPHIC INDEXES

The author index consists of the bibliographic entries arranged alphabetically by personal author; where a personal author does not exist, the entry is listed by title alphabetically. The author entries also include the "note" information commonly found on catalog cards in addition to the full bibliographic information.

The subject index consists of the entries arranged alphabetically by Library of Congress Subject Headings. Under each subject entry, the full title is listed in addition to full bibliographic information; the entries in the subject index do not include the "note" information.

PREFACE

The need for a history and analysis of law book publishing for the period 1860-1900 requires elucidation. American legal history, to the shame of the well-paid and luxuriously-equipped American legal profession, remains one of the worst-chronicled of important American institutions. Much of a legal historian's work consists of the culling of the research materials that he needs in his work from local histories, dictionaries of biography, company histories, and sources other than full-length specialized monographs on the rules of lawyers. 1 This is not to say that several excellent histories do not exist. A valuable work on the earliest age of the American legal profession is Anton-Hermann Chroust's, The Rise of the Legal Profession in America, 2 volumes, 1965, a massive compilation of facts about the profession and its practitioners until 1820. A valuable modern survey of the vague and diverse activities of American lawyers in the mid-twentieth century is Martin Mayer's, The Lawyers, 1967, an anecdotal, statistical account all the more valuable because it is by an experienced reporter, who is not a lawyer. Lawrence M. Friedman's A History of American Law, 1974, is a more recent, comprehensive treatment of the subject. The state of legal bibliography parallels the problem of legal history: poor and incomplete records, superficial research, and general lack of interest. In the past, a student of legal bibliography of the 1860-1900 period has been forced to work his way through various book catalogs of the larger libraries to determine bibliographic information on any one item and any subject searching was impossible and still is today though the growth computer-based search system such as OCLC and RLIN will no doubt make such searching more feasible. This existence of the book catalogs was complemented by very few good treatises. Charles Warren's History of the American Bar, 1911, contains among many fine chapters, two chapters on "Early American Law Books" and "American Law Books, 1815-1910." These chapters provide the beginning student an invaluable starting point in research. However, the errors and omissions in Warren's classic work are serious.

"Warren's book, it goes without saying, is still a basic, indispensable, and perhaps, unsurpassed text that must be consulted by anyone interested in our subject. Unfortunately, it is so replete with misprints, inaccuracies of detail, errors of citations, and even errors of fact, that it would be extremely unwise to accept any of Warren's statements without further verification."<sup>2</sup>

In addition to library book catalogs such as the Catalogue of the Library of the Law School of Harvard University, 1909, book catalogers such as Charles C. Soule's The Lawyer's Reference Manual of Law Books and Citations (1883) are of value to the research.<sup>3</sup>

The absence of a comprehensive bibliography of law books published in the latter half of the nineteenth century led to an interest in the legal literature of the period and ultimately promoted the undertaking of a bibliographical project to fill the void and compliment the bibliography being compiled by Professor Morris Cohen, Director of the Yale University Law

Library, from the beginning of American legal publishing to 1860.

The authors initiated the compilation, surveying the completeness of the existing resources, and extracting entries from extant bibliographies. The authors, assisted by members of the research staff and aided by NEH funding, culled entries from the following sources:

- United States, Library of Congress, A Catalog of Books Represented by Library of Congress Printed Cards. (Paterson, N.J.: Rowman and Littlefield, Inc. 1963).
- 2) Soule, Charles C. The Lawyers Reference Manual of Law Books and Citations. (Boston: Soule and Bugbee, 1883).
- 3) Griswold, H.E. Catalogue of Law Books: Banks & Brothers. (Buffalo Hein, 1977). (Reprint of 1894 ed.).
- 4) Warren, Charles. "American Law Books, 1815-1910," History of the American Bar (1911).
- 5) Catalogue of the Library of the Law School of Harvard University.
  Volume I and II. Cambridge: Harvard Law School Press, 1909.
- 6) Catalogue of Law Books, 1902, St. Paul, Minn.: West Pub. Co., 1902.
- 7) Catalogue of Law Books Published or for Sale by William Gould and Son, Albany, New York: William Gould Publishing Co., 1881.
- 8) Catalogue of Law Books Published or for Sale by F.W. Thomas and Co. St. Louis, Mo.: F.H. Thomas and Co., 1884.
- 9) Schwartz, Mortimer and Henke, Dan. Combined Catalog Anglo-American Law Collections: University of California Law Libraries, Berkeley and Davis with Library of Congress Class K added. Littleton, Col.: Fred B. Rothman & Co., 1970. 10 v. Supplement, 1979. 9v.

Each author entry garnered from these sources was searched on the OCLC system to locate more entries by the same author. Consequently, we tapped the resources of law and general libraries throughout the U.S. The student of bibliography will note with great interest that the Library of Congress catalog data constituted only one of several significant sources for bibliographic data. Consequently, it would be very wrong to assume that LC catalogs are comprehensive in their coverage.

While compiling the titles, guidelines for inclusion and exclusion of entries were refined for uniformity in identifying appropriate books. Bibliographies do exist for official publications, statutes, court reports, and serials; therefore, they are excluded from the bibliography unless they have been enhanced by an author's contributions to the work. The guidelines, refined as the project progressed, describe the monographs and subject matter that were included:

- A legal monograph with an American imprint from the period 1860 to 1900.
- Only a limited selection of government documents of a substantial nature and relating to major legal issues.
- Digests or collections of statutes only when compiled by an individual and containing commentary or annotations.
- Legal dictionaries, bibliographies, directories, and similar works of the period.
- Pamphlets, similar short monographs, published trials and briefs (with notes, commentary, or other additional text) of a legal and valuable nature.
- Law-related monographs, including these with a mixture of other subject areas and law.

Exclusions:

- Session laws, reporters, digests, attorney general reports, official codes and statutes and works of a serial nature.
- 2. Single speeches in Congress.
- 3. Reprints of articles previously published in journals.
- 4. Official trial records and briefs filed in litigation.

The bibliographic data was then input via computer terminals at the Legal Information Center onto discs and then tapes at the University of Florida's Northeast Regional Data Center. The computer magnetic tapes were then transmitted to the publishing company's data processing affiliate where the data was manipulated to produce the author and subject indexes.

The inclusion of background readings on the culture and socio-economic environment of this publishing period was designed to acquaint the reader with the developments and institutional factors that created the markets, readers, and interest in the many areas of law publications of the 1860-1900 period. The historical background information and the readings were organized around the following topics:

- I. Introduction
- II. History of Education 1860-1900
- III. Libraries 1860-1900
- IV. The Legal Profession
- V. Printers, Booksellers, and Publishers
- VI. American Law Books 1860-1900

Within each chapter, there is a discussion of critical developments and the literature on the topic with readings from or concerning the period.

The authors are indebted to numerous individuals and organizations for their help in sponsoring this research effort. The authors thank Mr. Phillip Cohen and Mr. David Cohen of Oceana Publishing Company, Dobbs Ferry, N.Y., for their support and encouragement and the National Endowment for the Humanities for its financial support. The research project was ably assisted by Barbara Pactor in preparing the bibliographic data and Carole Grooms and Carol Feltz of the Cataloging Department. Numerous law student assistants and computer programmers, Charles White and Bruce Klein, were involved in the garnering and organizing of the bibliographic entries. Claire Moynihan and Lauren Frazier provided valuable assistance in the editorial preparation of the historical readings.
