INTERNATIONAL FINANCE HANDBOOK

Volume 1

Ellinet by

ABRAHAM M. GEORGE

INTERNATIONAL FINANCE HANDBOOK

Volume 1

Edited by

ABRAHAM M. GEORGE

Multinational Computer Models, Inc.

IAN H. GIDDY

Columbia University

Copyright © 1983 by John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

All rights reserved. Published simultaneously in Canada.

Reproduction or translation of any part of this work beyond that permitted by Section 107 or 108 of the 1976 United States Copyright Act without the permission of the copyright owner is unlawful. Requests for permission or further information should be addressed to the Permissions Department, John Wiley & Sons, Inc.

This publication is designed to provide accurate and authoritative information in regard to the subject matter covered. It is sold with the understanding that the publisher is not engaged in rendering legal, accounting, or other professional service. If legal advice or other expert assistance is required, the services of a competent professional person should be sought. From a Declaration of Principles jointly adopted by a Committee of the American Bar Association and a Committee of Publishers.

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data: Main entry under title:

International finance handbook.

"A Wiley-Interscience publication."

Includes bibliographies and indexes.

1. International finance—Handbooks, manuals, etc.

2. International business enterprises—Finance—Handbooks, manuals, etc. I. George, Abraham M.

II. Giddy, Ian H.

HG3881.157633 1983 332'.042 82-23824

ISBN 0-471-09861-2 (set)

Printed in the United States of America

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

PRFFACE

This International Finance Handbook is designed to deal directly with the practical problems of international finance. It is conceived along the lines of Wiley's Accounting Handbook and Financial Handbook, and is intended to bring together all the major tasks and tools of international financing, banking and investment.

The two volumes of which the book comprises amply supplies the need expressed by many for a single comprehensive and detailed reference source for the intelligent nonspecialist in the field of international finance. Moreover, we believe that not only does the book offer insights into the intricacies of international finance to the amateur in the field, it also throws light on the many specialized areas of the subject to the experienced international financial community.

The Handbook is divided into nine parts, each part self-contained and treated as a guide to a particular sub-field of international finance. Moreover, the reader gets the option to choose and read a chapter here, a chapter there, as the need arises to familiarize himself with a particular subject area.

The introductory chapter opens the reader to the world of international finance, followed by fourteen chapters in three parts that give a comprehensive view of the foreign exchange and eurocurrency markets. Part 4 describes seven national money and banking markets and also three regional surveys. Part 5 deals with the international bond markets, followed by an authoritative description of the world's major and a few minor equity markets. Part 7 contains four chapters on specialized international financing techniques, and the subsequent 12 chapters in Part 8 deal in a practical manner with the management of international finance.

Volume II of the Handbook concludes with two extensive appendices on information sources and on calculations of international finance, a glossary of terms and a detailed index. The authors have also selected a short list of references for further exploration on the subjects which are listed at the end of each chapter. The index given is intended to help the reader find explanations and applications of key concepts, words or institutions.

As editors, we have not sought to eliminate all repetition because we value the shift in perspective that is gained from different authorities' treatment of the same problem. On the other hand, we have sought clarity of exposition and the use of sub-headings and bold type for rapid reviews. While we do vouch for the authority of our authors, most of whom are at the top of their fields, erros will, of course have escaped our eagle eyes, and alert readers who bring these to our attention will have performed a valuable service.

viii PREFACE

This brings us to the thank-you notes: to our colleagues and friends who have put so much time and knowledge into the pages that follow; to Professor Robert Hawkins of New York University for his encouragement; to our assistants, who helped us to produce, and perfect (especially Zora Prochazda, Mary Townswick), and to Stephen Kippur, our editor, and the staff of John Wiley and Sons, Inc.

We trust you will find the book useful, and we hope you enjoy it.

Abraham M. George Ian H. Giddy

Montclair, N.J. New York, N.Y. March 1983

CONTRIBUTORS

FLORIN AFTALION is professor of finance at the Ecole Supérieure des Sciences Economiques et Commerciales (ESSEC) in Paris. Dr. Aftalion has a PhD and an MBA from Northwestern University and a science degree from the University of Paris. In 1976, 1977, and 1981 he was visiting professor at New York University. He has written a number of scholarly articles and is co-author of three books: Théorie Financière de l'Entreprise (1974), Théorie du Portefeuille (1977), and Le Monétarisme (1981).

ANTOINE W. VAN AGTMAEL is a graduate of the Netherlands School of Economics, has an MA in international studies from Yale University and has an MBA in international finance from New York University Graduate School of Business. In 1970 he joined the training program of Bankers Trust Company, New York where he became a vice-president in 1975. After being an account officer responsible for lending to several Middle Eastern countries, he became head of the Africa Group in 1974. During 1976-79, Professor van Agtmael was managing director of TISCO, Thailand's leading investment bank which is majority owned by Bankers Trust. In September 1979 he joined the International Finance Corporation, an affiliate of the World Bank, where he works as a senior investment officer in the capital markets department. Professor van Agtmael has taught at the Harvard Institute of Politics and the Graduate Business School of Thammasat University, Bangkok. He is the author of Practical Financial Management in a Developing Money and Capital Market: Thai Case Studies (Bangkok, 1979) and various articles on country risk and international finance in Euromoney, Financial Executive, Harvard Political Review, Asian Finance, the Asian Wall Street Journal, Far Eastern Economic Review, among others.

PEREGRINE ALDRED is managing director of Ross & Partners (Securities) Ltd., the wholly owned subsidiary of the Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc., which specializes in eurobond market trading. He graduated from St. Catherine's College, Oxford, and spent seven years with Strauss Turnbull, a pioneering firm in the international capital markets, before joining Stanley Ross to help set up Ross & Partners in 1978.

DEBORAH L. ALLEN is currently executive vice-president at Claremont Economics Institute and visiting professor at Claremont Graduate School. She holds a PhD in economics from Duke University and was previously an international economist at the Office of the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency. Her published research deals mainly with international banking and commercial policy.

LAURIE J. ARON is a staff member of the Management Decision Laboratory of the Graduate School of Business Administration, New York University. She was formerly an investment associate in the Asset Management Department of the Prudential Insurance Company. She received her BA degree from Barnard College and is presently in the MBA program at New York University.

PAUL H. ARON is executive vice-president of Daiwa Securities America, Inc. He was formerly an investment manager and vice-president, both for the Dreyfus Fund and the College Retirement Equities Fund, where he was a pioneer in overseas investment. He has written extensively, both on international security analysis and interpretation of foreign financial reporting and contributed to the Accountants' Handbook edited by L. J. Seidler and D. R. Carmichael. His work has been translated into Japanese and widely circulated in that country. He is a member of both the Foreign Analyst Relations Committee and the Financial Accounting Policies Committee of the Financial Analysts Federation and is an American delegate to the International Coordinating Committee of World Analysts Federation, the Asian Security Analysts Council, and the Consultative Committee of the International Accounting Standards Committee. He has won an international reputation for his work on interpreting foreign financial statements and his studies in robotics. He is adjunct Professor at the Graduate School of Business Administration New York University, where he introduced a course on international equity markets and analysis. He did his undergraduate work at City College (New York), and his graduate work at Columbia University.

PHILIP A. BETSCH is vice-president of finance of Estee Lauder International, Inc. He has over eighteen years experience in international affairs, having served abroad in both private industry and in government diplomatic service. He is a graduate of Rider College, and a Certified Public Accountant. The majority of his private industrial experience has been as a financial executive in the consumer package goods industry. He is a member of Board of Directors of the New York City Chapter of the Financial Executives Institute and has served on a number of occasions as both public speaker and consultant on international financial matters.

FRÉDÉRIC BOMPAIRE studied both finance and commercial law (doctorat de 3ème cycle) at ESSEC in Paris. He has also been a fellow of the Center for Study of Financial Institutions at the University of Pennsylvania (LLM 1979). For over 4 years he has been active on the French domestic market working for the new issues department of C.C.F., one of the leading private banks in France. He is involved in the preparation of all kinds of public offerings and tender offers, although his specialty is bonds and convertible bonds. He is, in addition, a lecturer at ESSEC.

ROLF E. BREUER is head of the investment and trading department of Deutsche Bank in Frankfurt, West Germany. Born in Bonn, he received his doctor of law degree at Bonn University in 1967 with a dissertation on company law. He has also studied law at the Universities of Lausanne and Munich. Dr. Breuer has been with Deutsche Bank since 1966.

RODRIGO K. BRIONES is vice-president of the International Treasury Management Consulting Division, Chase Manhattan Bank. Mr. Briones is a specialist in foreign exchange rates and local financial trends for Latin America, Spain, Portugal, Italy, and France. His most recent experience was as a corporate economist in Bank of America for three years. Under that capacity, he was involved in foreign advisory services, country risk assessment, and several major syndicated loans to Latin American countries. He also spent several years as a consultant with the United Nations in New York and Chile, a Chilean government agency in the United States, and the private sector in Chile. Mr. Briones has a BA and an MA in economics from the University of Chile, an MBA in international economics and finance and is currently completing his PhD dissertation at New York University. Mr. Briones currently teaches at the Pace Graduate School of Business and at the Graduate School of Business, New York University, and has also taught at the University of Chile. He has published various articles on Latin America and has participated in several seminars and presentations sponsored by the United Nations, New York University, American Management Association, World Trade Institute, and Business International.

THOMAS M. CAMPFIELD is vice-president in charge of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company's Foreign Exchange Advisory Service. Prior to assuming this position in 1980, he was for four years the chief dealer for foreign exchange and funding in MHT offices in Tokyo and Bahrain. Mr. Campfield graduated from Villanova University in 1968 with a bachelor's degree in electrical engineering. In 1973, he received his MBA in International Business at Pennsylvania State University.

NICHOLAS CARLOZZI is an economist in the Research Department of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia. He received a PhD in economics from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in 1981. Mr. Carlozzi also served an internship with the Division of International Finance of the Federal Reserve Board in 1978. His current research interests include the econometric modeling of large open economies, the international transmission of economic disturbances, and the performance of the foreign exchange market.

E. EUGENE CARTER is professor and head of the department of finance at the University of Illinois at Chicago. He received a BS from Northwestern University and MS and PhD degrees from Carnegie-Mellon University, where he studied under National Defense, Woodrow Wilson, and Ford Foundation Fellowships. In addition to his work in international finance, he has published articles and monographs in the area of corporate finance, capital budgeting, and non-profit financial management. He is a consultant to several institutions and is a director of A. G. Edwards and Sons, Inc. He previously has taught at Carnegie-Mellon University, Harvard University, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

MARIO A. CORTI holds a doctorate in economics from the University of Lausanne (1971) and an MBA from the Harvard Business School (1975). He is actively involved in the Swiss money and bond markets through his responsibilities as a deputy director of the Swiss National Bank in Zurich.

GUNTER DUFEY has been on the faculty of the Graduate School of Business Administration. The University of Michigan since 1969. His academic interests center on international money and capital markets as well as on financial policy of multinational corporations. He teaches related courses at the graduate level and he covers these subjects in the school's Executive Development Programs. In the past, he had visiting appointments at C.E.I. in Geneva, Switzerland; at the Universities of Augsburg and Wurzburg, Germany; at the Cranfield Institute, Bedford, U.K.; at the University of Texas at Dallas. During 1981-82 he held appointments as national fellow at the Hoover Institution and visiting professor at the Graduate School of Business, Stanford University. Dr. Dufey has served as a consultant on the U.S. Capital Control Program to the U.S. Treasury Department, he was a member of the Economic Advisory Board to the U.S. Secretary of Commerce, and has completed a study of Japanese banking regulations for the OECD, Paris. Throughout his career, Dr. Dufey has been in close touch with the practical aspects of his field. He has been employed with companies both in Europe and the United States and currently serves as a consultant to a number of international companies. He is also very active in management education. Dr. Dufey was born in Germany where he took his undergraduate work in economics, business, and commercial law. In 1964, he was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship to pursue studies at the University of Washington in Seattle. He earned MA and DBA degrees from this institution in 1965 and 1969, respectively.

MAXIMO ENG is professor of economics and finance at the Graduate Division of the College of Business Administration, St. John's University, New York. He received a PhD from the Graduate School of Business Administration, New York University. Dr. Eng was formerly an economic advisor for Citibank. He has published several books on banking and finance, including International Financial Markets, and has contributed to scholarly journals. Dr. Eng is currently a consulting editor for Intercontinental Publications, Inc.

ALEXANDER F. GALLI is chief economist and vice-president at Handelsbank N.W., Zurich. He previously spent ten years in economic research in the National Bank of Switzerland. He has a doctorate in economics from the University of Basle (1978) and previously studied at Carnegie-Mellon University (1975–76) and the University of Basle (1966–71). He is the author of two scholarly works on Swiss monetary affairs.

ABRAHAM M. GEORGE is President of Multinational Computer Models, Inc., an international financial consulting firm in Montclair, N.J., established in 1975 and presently serving over 100 corporate and financial clients in the U.S., Canada, and Europe. In addition to advising companies about foreign exchange and international investments, Dr. George is an innovator in the field of computerized financial systems. He has achieved a number of major breakthroughs in designing and developing financial systems, such as PASSPORT (SM), to meet the needs of individual clients. Previously, he held financial positions at Chemical Bank, the Singer Company, and the Standard & Poor's Corporation. Dr. George holds M.B.A. and Ph.D. degrees in Business Administration from New York University. He is the author of Foreign Exchange Management and the Multinational Corporation (published by Praeger in 1978), and has contributed articles about foreign exchange and international finance to a number of professional journals.

IAN GIDDY is associate professor at Columbia University's Graduate School of Business. He has also been an assistant professor at the University of Michigan, a visiting assistant professor at the University of Chicago, and a professorial lecturer at Georgetown University. He has served in the U.S. Government for the Comptroller of the Currency and for the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. During 1980–81 he was on leave as an economist at the International Monetary Fund. He is employed part-time as senior international economist at the Claremont Economics Institute. A U.S. citizen, he was born in South Africa where he obtained a BS in psychology and mathematical statistics. His MBA degree from the University of Michigan (1972) was followed in 1974 by a PhD obtained from the same institution under a Ford Foundation Western European Fellowship. Dr. Giddy has taught in numerous management development programs, including in-house programs at the Bank of America, Citibank, and Barclays Bank, and has lectured in South Africa, Canada, Belgium, the United Kingdom, Portugal, Brazil, Switzerland, France, Mexico, Italy, Germany, the Netherlands, Singapore, India and Bangladesh. He is a regular lecturer on international finance at INSEAD in France as well as Columbia University's executive programs. He has served as a consultant to several multinational corporations and banks and to the U.S. Treasury Department, Dr. Giddy's research and teaching experience reflect his interest in international finance, financial markets, and financial management. He has participated in three studies for the U.S. Treasury and is the author or co-author of over fifty articles on international banking, the Eurocurrency and foreign exchange markets, and corporate international finance. These have appeared in various books as well as in professional and scholarly journals such as Euromoney and the Journal of Financial and Quantitative Analysis. He is coauthor of The International Money Market (Prentice-Hall, 1978) and is currently writing a book on international banking regulation.

R. PHILIP GILES is an economic consultant based in New York, specializing in money and banking, business cycle, and international financial topics. He has developed and conducted management training programs in these areas at several banks, including Morgan Guaranty Trust and Manufacturers Hanover Trust. He also gives special courses each year at Columbia University's Walter Bagehot Fellowship Program for business press writers and at the Summer Graduate Institute in Bank Management of Adelphi University for bank officers. He has contributed a monthly column on economic forecasting and the business cycle for the Parallax Market Timing Letter. Giles began his career as a systems analyst with Rockwell International in Columbias, Ohio and Los Angeles, California where he developed and utilized large scale digital simulation models. He received his bachelor's degree in mathematics from Oklahoma City University, his MEA degree from Ohio State University, and his PhD in business economics from Columbia University.

DIEGO GIURLEO is manager of economic research in the international money markets division of the Royal Bank of Canada. He is editor of the bank's publication, International Money Markets, and his research interests lie in the area of international economics and finance. A Canadian citizen who was born in Italy. Mr. Giurleo is a graduate of Queens and Loyola Universities. He has also been a lecturer at Queens University.

xx CONTRIBUTORS

LAURIE S. GOODMAN is an economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. She has published several articles on international banking and international financial markets. Prior to joining the Federal Reserve System, Dr. Goodman taught finance at New York University's Graduate School of Business. Dr. Goodman holds a PhD in economics from Stanford University.

CHRISTINE R. HEKMAN is assistant professor of business administration at the Fuqua School of Business, Duke University. She received a PhD in 1977 from the Graduate School of Business, University of Chicago and taught from 1975 to 1981 at the Graduate School of Business, Harvard University. Dr. Hekman's specialties include international managerial finance and corporate financial management; her special emphasis is on the relationship between exchange rates and the financial management of international corporations. She has co-authored International Finance: Cases and Simulation (1980) and has contributed to professional periodicals including The Journal of World Trade Law, The Review of Economics and Statistics, the Harvard Business Review and the Financial Analysts Journal.

ROGER HUBLEY is an economist with the Conference Board of Canada in Ottawa. He has responsibility for macroeconomic studies of the Canadian economy, including the energy sector. He is a graduate of the University of Western Ontario. Mr. Hubley's research interests center on international economics and financial markets, including the foreign exchange markets.

MONA E. ISMAIL is a research analyst at Lehman Securities Division, Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb, Inc. She holds a BS degree in electronic and computer science from Washington University, St. Louis, and an MBA from Columbia University, New York.

VINITA M. ITTOOP has been an economist with Multinational Computer Models, Inc. since 1977. She specializes in international monetary economics and has conducted econometric research on the behavior of currency and money markets. She holds an M.S. degree in Quantitative Analysis from New York University and is presently working working towards at Ph.D. in Economics from Columbia University.

BERTRAND JACQUILLAT is professor of finance at CESA in France and the University of Lille. In 1976–1978 he was a visiting professor at Stanford University. Dr. Jacquillat holds masters degrees in economics and political sciences from Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales and Institut d'Etudes Politiques in Paris, an MBA from the Harvard Graduate School of Business and a PhD in finance from the University of Paris, Dauphine. He is the coauthor of numerous articles published in scholarly journals both in Europe and the United States. He is coauthor, with George Fliger, of International Finance. He has conducted seminars and training programs for international banks and corporations and is a consultant to the Paris Stock Exchange.

WILLIAM JOHNS is currently employed by Chemical Bank in their Finance Division, Corporate Finance Group. He received his MBA degree from Columbia University and AB degree from the University of Michigan.

BARRY L. KLEIN is the senior managing director of Drexel Burnham Lambert Trading Corporation, the merchant banking subsidiary of the Drexel Burnham Lambert Group, Inc. He was formerly vice-president of the Commercial and Banking Division of J. Aron and Company, Inc. with responsibilities for precious metals trading. Mr. Klein, who also holds an MBA degree in international finance from New York University, attended the Rutgers School of Law. He was formerly an officer of the Chemical Bank in New York with responsibilities in foreign exchange and Eurocurrency trading.

FRANCIS A. LEES is professor of economics and finance at the Graduate Division, College of Business Administration, St. Johns University. His principal areas of research include international finance, international banking, and international investment. He has published papers in professional journals in these fields and is the author of several books and monographs including three published by The Conference Board. He has served as a consultant to the New York Clearing House Association, Central Bank for Cooperatives, and Royal Commission on Electric Power (Toronto).

J. STUART LEMLE'S expertise in international trade and finance currently is employed in his Washington-based law firm. Lemle Associates. He is also adjunct professor of law specializing in international finance at Georgetown University Law Center, Washington, D.C. In 1976, Mr. Lemle was awarded a Senior Fulbright Fellowship appointment to the Delhi University Law Faculty, Delhi, India. Subsequently, he was designated a White House Fellow and served as assistant director of the Office for Domestic Policy at the White House. He began private practice in international commercial law with the firm of Rogers & Wells. Mr. Lemle holds an AB degree in government from Cornell University and a JD degree from Harvard Law School.

RICHARD LEVICH is associate professor of finance and international business at New York University Graduate School of Business Administration. He is also a research associate with the National Bureau of Economic Research in Cambridge, Massachusetts. Dr. Levich was a visiting faculty member at the University of Chicago and at Yale University and visiting scholar at the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System. Dr. Levich's research on international financial markets has appeared in the Journal of Political Economy, the Columbia Journal of World Business, and other scholarly publications. He is the author of The International Money Market: An Assessment of Alternative Forecasting Techniques and Market Efficiency (JAI Press, 1979) and the co-editor (with Clas Wihlborg) of Exchange Risk and Exposure: Current Developments in International Financial Management (Lexington Books, 1980). Mr. Levich received his PhD from the University of Chicago, where he was the Oscar Meyer Fellow.

DONALD R. LESSARD is associate professor of international finance at the M.I.T. Sloan School of Management. He has published extensively in leading professional journals on international diversification, capital budgeting for multinational corporations, and financial strategies for developing countries and is editor of International Financial Management (Wiley, 1982). He is a principal of Lightstone-Lessard Associates, a consultant to corporations and governments and an independent trustee of Putnam International Advisory Trust. He earned his BA, MBA, and PhD degrees from Stanford University.

DANIEL MAGRAW is an attorney at Covington & Burling, Washington, D.C., practicing in the areas of private and public international law. He has a JD from the University of California, Berkeley and an AB in Economics from Harvard University. Mr. Magraw has lectured and published in the area of international law, and he taught International Technology Transfer and Industrial Property Law at the School of Law (Boalt Hall), University of California, Berkeley, where he was editor-in-chief of the California Law Review. He also worked for three years as an economist and business consultant in India following his graduation from Harvard University.

JAMES MAYCOCK worked for many years in the city of London with the Midland Bank Ltd., from 1967 to 1973 as its economic adviser and editor of the Midland Bank Review. In 1974 he was visiting lecturer at the University of Georgia and since then has been joint director of the Institute of European Finance at the University College of North Wales, U.K. Publications include Sources of Corporate Finance in Western Europe (with C. Gardner, Graham, & Trotman, 1976) and European Banking: Structures and Prospects (Graham & Trotman, 1977).

PHILIP MEES is a vice-president of Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company, New York. As a member of the Corporate Cash Management Department, he manages a team responsible for marketing the global cash management services of the bank to corporations and banks in Europe and the Middle East. This includes the programs offered through the affiliate Bank Mendes Gans in Amsterdam, Holland.

MORRIS MENDELSON is a professor of finance at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. He is a member of the International Faculty for Corporate and Capital Market Law. He is a member of the advisory or editorial boards of the Journal of Corporate Law and Securities Regulation, the Financial Review, and the Financial Services Review. His publications deal with the domestic and international securities markets.

JOHN O'BRIAN is senior vice-president of the Central National Bank of New York. He has been a banker for over 25 years: at Chemical Bank, at Bank of New York, at J-Henry Schroder, and at Charles Fulton, where he was senior vice-president and manager of foreign exchange.

YOON S. PARK is associate professor of business administration at the School of Government and Business Administration, George Washington University, Washington, D.C. Before coming to George Washington University, he was a visiting associate professor of business administration at the Graduate School of Business, Columbia University, New York. Previously he served the World Bank in Washington as a senior economist. He received a DBA in international finance from Harvard Business School and a PhD in economics from George Washington University. He is the author of The Eurobond Market (Praeger Publishers, 1974) and Oil Money and the World Economy (Westview Press, 1976), as well as many journal articles and research papers in the areas of international banking and international finance.

HARVEY A. PONIACHEK is vice-president and economist at Bank of America, World Banking-North America Division, Strategic Planning and Marketing; and adjunct professor of economics and finance, at Pace University Graduate School of Business. Dr. Poniachek has been with the bank since 1973—engaged in money and foreign exchange markets, strategic planning and banking studies, and responsible for Europe, Middle East, and Africa economic desk. In 1980 he was a visiting economist at Bank of America's European headquarters in London for six months. Dr. Poniachek has conducted major research studies on a broad spectrum of topics. including the Eurocurrency market and the foreign exchange system, international banking and the payments system, correspondent banking, the financial services industry, regional economies, international trade finance, and foreign direct investment. Harvey Poniachek received a PhD degree in 1977 from the State University of New York at Albany, and studied at New York University. He has published in professional journals and is the author of Monetary Independence Under Flexible Exchange Rates, and The Financial Markets, in Ingo Walter (ed.), Handbook of International Business. He is also author of Bank of America's publication Direct Investment From Abroad. 1981.

GILLES PUCHON is a vice-president of the Chase Manhattan Bank, and a managing consultant responsible for advising multinational corporations in coping with global financial risks created by volatility in interest, foreign exchange, and inflation rates. He has done extensive work in international financial policies, currency exposure management, financial performance measurement, and strategic analysis. Prior to joining Chase in 1979, he was a consultant and money manager with Marine Midland Bank, responsible for developing exposure management models, advising corporation on short-term hedging techniques, and forecasting foreign exchange rates. Mr. Puchon holds an MBA in finance and international business from Columbia University; a marketing degree from the Ecole Superienre de Commerce et d'Administration des Entreprises de Rouen (France), and an accounting degree from the Institut Universitaire de Technologie de Montpellier (France).

BRIAN SCOTT QUINN is a lecturer in international finance and accounting at the University of Reading near London. He is author of two books on international finance, one on the eurobond market and one on the eurodollar market. In addition he has written extensively on international finance and U.K. monetary policy, and lectures regularly to business audiences on foreign exchange forecasting. He has also been a consultant to the Japanese Embassy in London, the U.S. office of the Controller of the Currency, a number of large European multinationals, and is an adviser on economic policy to the Conservative Party. He is a director of Ross & Partners (Securities) Ltd., and has been an adviser to them since the company's formation.

LEE H. RADEBAUGH is an associate professor of accounting and international business at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah. Dr. Radebaugh is currently a member of the advisory board of the international accounting section of the American Accounting Association and served as the section chairman in 1978–79. He is also a member of the national advisory committee to the International Affairs Committee of the American Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business. Dr. Radebaugh is the coauthor of International Accounting and Multinational Enterprises and International Business: Environments and Operations. He has also published several articles on international accounting and international business. He is a member of the Academy of International Business and the European Accounting Association in addition to the American Accounting Association.

xxiv CONTRIBUTORS

GERNOT H. REINERS was born and raised in Germany. He graduated from Freiburg Law School in 1966 and obtained his doctorate in laws from Freiburg in 1971. He did graduate studies at Johns Hopkins University (Bologna) 1966–67 and was a teaching fellow at Stanford School of Law (1967–68). After practicing law in Berlin, he joined McKinsey & Co. in 1970 and J.P. Morgan & Co. in 1972. Mr. Reiners is currently a vice-president in the Private Placement and Leasing Department of Morgan Guaranty Trust, specializing in cross-border leasing transactions.

RITA M. RODRIGUEZ is professor of finance at the University of Illinois at Chicago, and a member of the Board of Directors of the U.S. Export-Import Bank. She received a BS from the University of Puerto Rico and MBA and PhD degrees from New York University. She has published numerous articles in the field of international finance and foreign exchange management. She is author of Foreign Exchange Management in U.S. Multinationals (D.C. Heath, 1980) and coauthor of Foreign Exchange Markets (McGraw-Hill, 1977). She consults with various corporations, financial institutions, international lending agencies, and governments. She previously taught at Harvard University.

MICHAEL R. ROSENBERG is director of international fixed income research at Prudential Insurance Company. He has a PhD in economics from Penn State University (1976) and has worked as an economist and a foreign exchange market analyst for Chase Manhattan Bank (1976–1977) and Citibank (1977–1982).

ROBERT M. RUBIN is managing director of Drexel Burnham Lambert Trading Corporation. He is formerly vice-president of J. Aron and Company, where he was responsible for central bank reserve management activities. A graduate of Yale University, Mr. Rubin is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations. He is also a member of the Gold Institute, and the International Precious Metals Institute, having served on the latter's Board of Directors for several years.

MARILYN P. SKONY is vice-president and senior consultant at Conticurrency, New York. She has previously been with Marine Midland Bank and with First National Bank of Chicago. Then, as now, she was a consultant on currency risk management. She has an MA from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy, Tufts University, and a BA from Northwestern University.

JACK R. SKYDEL is director of financing, American Express Company, responsible for arranging and planning long-term financing, and capital structure. Prior to his current position, Mr. Skydel was manager of treasury planning responsible for conducting cash management and foreign exchange studies in the United States and internationally. Mr. Skydel has an MBA from the Graduate School of Business, University of Chicago.

PHILIP R. STANSBURY, a partner at the law firm of Covington & Burling in Washington, D.C. since 1966, specializes in the areas of private and public international law. He was educated at Haverford College (AB 1953) and Harvard Law School (LLB 1956). Stansbury has published several articles on international project financing and on the structuring of joint participation relationships between developing country governments and multinational enterprises. At the request of the State Department, he served in 1981 as a United States delegate to the United Nations Commission on International Trade Law (UNCITRAL) in Vienna, which initiated consideration of a legal guide for contracts involving large transnational industrial works, oriented to the special problems of developing countries as technology recipients.

E. SURESH is a visiting lecturer of international business at the Graduate School of Business Administration, The University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. His research interests are mainly in international money and capital markets. He has taught courses in money, banking, and financial markets, and international business at The University of Michigan. His doctoral thesis deals with interest rate relationships between the Eurodollar and domestic market segments. He has been closely associated with Professor Gunter Dufey on several research projects, including a comparative study of commercial banking and investment banking, and the corporate financing patterns in some major countries.

ALAN TECK is president of Teck Enterprises, Inc., a consulting firm specializing in foreign exchange exposure management and international investments for multinational corporations and financial institutions. He was formerly director of financial consulting at Chemical Bank, a financial officer at two multinational corporations, and an economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. Dr. Teck earned his MA and PhD degrees from the Department of Economics, Columbia University, a BS degree from Cornell University and completed the executive management program at the Harvard Business School. He is author of a book and numerous articles about foreign exchange and international finance.

LARS H. THUNELL is vice-president of financing, American Express Company, responsible for fund raising and foreign exchange. He is also Chairman of American Express Overseas Credit Corporation. Prior to his current position, Mr. Thunell was assistant treasurer of the international division responsible for all treasury related activities outside the United States. Before joining American Express in 1977, Mr. Thunell was with Business International Corporation in New York. He also worked with Multinational Computer Models, Inc. Mr. Thunell has a PhD from the University of Stockholm and has been a research fellow at the Center For International Affairs, Harvard University. He has published Political Risk In International Business (1977) and several articles including International Cash Management, the American Express Formula in Euromoney.

STUART VALENTINE is a graduate of the London School of Economics (University of London), where he gained a second class honours degree, specializing in monetary economies, in 1964. He has spent his working life as an economist with financial institutions in London, first with the Economics Department of the Midland Bank, where he was latterly assistant manager. In 1976 he was recruited by the Stock Exchange to head its Economics Department, the position he now holds. Stuart Valentine is coauthor of a basic textbook on the U.K. banking system—Teach Yourself Banking—and writes regularly for financial publications on a variety of economic, financial, and particularly stock exchange matters.

TOWNSEND WALKER holds a PhD in economics from Stanford University. Since 1972 he has been with Bank of America in London, Paris, and New York as a foreign exchange dealer and treasury consultant. Currently he is a vice-president with the bank in San Francisco responsible for correspondent bank relationships in the eastern and southern United States. Walker wrote A Guide for Using the Foreign Exchange Market (Wiley, 1981).

JULIAN WALMSLEY is a vice-president at the Foreign Exchange and Money Market Center of Barclays Bank International in New York. He worked previously for several years at Barclays' Foreign Exchange Center in London after reading economics at Cambridge University. He is the author of A Dictionary Of International Finance (Greenwood Press/Macmillan, 1979) and A Foreign Exchange Handbook (Wiley, 1983) as well as articles in Euromoney, The Banker, and elsewhere.

KEVIN P. WRIGHT, special project director, photographic sales forecasting, Eastman Kodak Company has an MBA from the University of Rochester and has spent his entire working career with Kodak. He was the first foreign exchange planning director at Kodak, establishing and developing its foreign exchange management function at its corporate headquarters in Rochester between 1975 and 1981.

EDDY O. WYMEERSCH is Professor of Commercial Law at the Ghent University (Rijksuniversiteit Gent) in Belgium. His education in law was at Ghent University and Harvard, where he obtained an LL.M. in 1967. Mr. Wymeersch has been an advisor on European securities markets to the Commission of the European Economic Community. In 1977–81 he published a three-volume study, Control of Securities Markets in the EEC.

LARRY WYNANT is associate professor of finance at the School of Business Administration, the University of Western Ontario in London, Canada. He received an MBA degree from the University of Western Ontario and a Doctor of Business Administration degree from the Harvard Business School. Before entering academic life, Dr. Wynant gained experience in credit and general banking with a major Canadian chartered bank. Through his research, teaching, and consulting activities, Dr. Wynant has for several years investigated strategies for financing large-scale ventures. He has written extensively on the topic of project financing.