

ROUTLEDGE ADVANCES
in EUROPEAN POLITICS

EUROPEAN UNION PUBLIC HEALTH POLICY

Regional and global trends

EDITED BY SCOTT L. GREER AND PAULETTE KURZER

European Union Public Health Policy

Regional and global trends

Edited by Scott L. Greer and
Paulette Kurzer

First published 2013
by Routledge
2 Park Square, Milton Park, Abingdon, Oxon, OX14 4RN

Simultaneously published in the USA and Canada
by Routledge
711 Third Avenue, New York, NY 10017

Routledge is an imprint of the Taylor & Francis Group, an informa business

© 2013 selection and editorial material, Scott L. Greer and Paulette Kurzer; individual chapters, the contributors

The right of the editors to be identified as the authors of the editorial material, and of the authors for their individual chapters, has been asserted in accordance with sections 77 and 78 of the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reprinted or reproduced or utilised in any form or by any electronic, mechanical, or other means, now known or hereafter invented, including photocopying and recording, or in any information storage or retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publishers.

Trademark notice: Product or corporate names may be trademarks or registered trademarks, and are used only for identification and explanation without intent to infringe.

British Library Cataloguing in Publication Data

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Library of Congress Cataloging in Publication Data

European Union public health policy : regional and global trends / edited by Scott L. Greer and Paulette Kurzer.

p. ; cm. — (Routledge advances in European politics ; 90)

Includes bibliographical references.

I. Greer, Scott L. II. Kurzer, Paulette, 1957- III. Series: Routledge advances in European politics ; 90.

[DNLM: 1. European Union. 2. Health Policy—trends—Europe.

3. International Cooperation—Europe. 4. Public Health Administration—Europe. 5. Public Health Practice—Europe.

WA 530 GA 1]

362.1094—dc23

2012024222

ISBN: 978-0-415-51664-8 (hbk)

ISBN: 978-0-203-07724-5 (ebk)

Typeset in Times New Roman by Swales & Willis Ltd, Exeter, Devon

Printed and bound by CPI Group (UK) Ltd, Croydon, CR0 4YY

European Union Public Health Policy

Ranging from influence over world trade laws affecting health to population health issues such as obesity to the use of comparative data to affect policy, the EU's public health policies are increasingly important, visible, expensive and effective. They also provide an invaluable case study for those who want to understand the growth and impact of the EU as well as how states can affect their populations' lives and health.

European Union Public Health Policy capitalizes on extensive new research, providing an introduction to the topic and indicating new intellectual directions surrounding the topic. An introductory section and extended conclusion explore the meaning of public health, the relationship of EU public health policy to health care policy, and the place of public health in the study of European integration and Europeanization. Focusing on health system transformation, global health governance and population health, the chapters address:

- relevant policy issues and EU policies;
- effects of the EU policies on practice or outcomes;
- an explanation of the policy trajectory;
- current issues and likely future directions or conflicts.

Drawing together an international and multidisciplinary selection of experts, this volume is an important contribution for all those interested in public health policy, EU health policy and EU governance.

Scott L. Greer is Associate Professor of Health Management and Policy at the University of Michigan's School of Public Health, USA, and Honorary Senior Research Fellow at LSE Health, London School of Economics and Political Science, UK.

Paulette Kurzer is Professor of Political Science in the School of Government and Public Policy at the University of Arizona, USA.

Routledge Advances in European Politics

1. Russian Messianism

Third Rome, revolution, Communism and after
Peter J.S. Duncan

2. European Integration and the Postmodern Condition

Governance, democracy, identity
Peter van Ham

3. Nationalism in Italian Politics

The stories of the Northern League,
1980–2000
Damian Tambini

4. International Intervention in the Balkans since 1995

Edited by Peter Siani-Davies

5. Widening the European Union

The politics of institutional change and reform
Edited by Bernard Steunenberg

6. Institutional Challenges in the European Union

Edited by Madeleine Hosli, Adrian van Deemen and Mika Widgrén

7. Europe Unbound

Enlarging and reshaping the boundaries of the European Union
Edited by Jan Zielonka

8. Ethnic Cleansing in the Balkans

Nationalism and the destruction of tradition
Cathie Carmichael

9. Democracy and Enlargement in Post-Communist Europe

The democratisation of the general public in fifteen Central and Eastern European countries, 1991–1998
Christian W. Haerpfer

10. Private Sector Involvement in the Euro

The power of ideas
Stefan Collignon and Daniela Schwarzer

11. Europe

A Nietzschean perspective
Stefan Elbe

12. European Union and E-Voting

Addressing the European Parliament's internet voting challenge
Edited by Alexander H. Trechsel and Fernando Mendez

13. European Union Council Presidencies

A comparative perspective
Edited by Ole Elgström

14. European Governance and Supranational Institutions

Making states comply
Jonas Tallberg

15. European Union, NATO and Russia

Martin Smith and Graham Timmins

16. Business, The State and Economic Policy

The case of Italy
G. Grant Amyot

17. Europeanization and Transnational States

Comparing Nordic central governments
Bengt Jacobsson, Per Lægveid and Ove K. Pedersen

18. European Union Enlargement

A comparative history
Edited by Wolfram Kaiser and Jürgen Elvert

19. Gibraltar

British or Spanish?
Peter Gold

20. Gendering Spanish Democracy

Monica Threlfall, Christine Cousins and Celia Valiente

21. European Union Negotiations

Processes, networks and negotiations
Edited by Ole Elgström and Christer Jönsson

22. Evaluating Euro-Mediterranean Relations

Stephen C. Calleya

23. The Changing Face of European Identity

A seven-nation study of (supra)national attachments
Edited by Richard Robyn

24. Governing Europe

Discourse, governmentality and European integration
William Walters and Jens Henrik Haahr

25. Territory and Terror

Conflicting nationalisms in the Basque country
Jan Mansvelt Beck

26. Multilateralism, German Foreign Policy and Central Europe

Claus Hofhansel

27. Popular Protest in East Germany

Gareth Dale

28. Germany's Foreign Policy Towards Poland and the Czech Republic

Ostpolitik revisited
Karl Cordell and Stefan Wolff

29. Kosovo

The politics of identity and space
Denisa Kostovicova

30. The Politics of European Union Enlargement

Theoretical approaches
Edited by Frank Schimmelfennig and Ulrich Sedelmeier

31. Europeanizing Social Democracy?

The rise of the party of European socialists
Simon Lightfoot

32. Conflict and Change in EU Budgetary Politics

Johannes Lindner

33. Gibraltar, Identity and Empire

E.G. Archer

34. Governance Stories

Mark Bevir and R.A.W Rhodes

35. Britain and the Balkans

1991 until the present
Carole Hodge

36. The Eastern Enlargement of the European Union

John O'Brennan

37. Values and Principles in European Union Foreign Policy

Edited by Sonia Lucarelli and Ian Manners

38. European Union and the Making of a Wider Northern Europe

Pami Aalto

39. Democracy in the European Union

Towards the emergence of a public sphere
Edited by Liana Giorgi, Ingmar Von Homeyer and Wayne Parsons

40. European Union Peacebuilding and Policing

Michael Merlingen with Rasa Ostrauskaite

41. The Conservative Party and European Integration since 1945

At the heart of Europe?
N.J. Crowson

42. E-Government in Europe

Re-booting the state
Edited by Paul G. Nixon and Vassiliki N. Koutrakou

43. EU Foreign and Interior Policies

Cross-pillar politics and the social construction of sovereignty
Stephan Stetter

44. Policy Transfer in European Union Governance

Regulating the utilities
Simon Bulmer, David Dolowitz, Peter Humphreys and Stephen Padgett

45. The Europeanization of National Political Parties

Power and organizational adaptation

Edited by Thomas Poguntke, Nicholas Aylott, Elisabeth Carter, Robert Ladrech and Kurt Richard Luther

46. Citizenship in Nordic Welfare States

Dynamics of choice, duties and participation in a changing Europe

Edited by Bjorn Hvinden and Håkan Johansson

47. National Parliaments within the Enlarged European Union

From victims of integration to competitive actors?

Edited by John O'Brennan and Tapio Raunio

48. Britain, Ireland and Northern Ireland since 1980

The totality of relationships

Eamonn O'Kane

49. The EU and the European Security Strategy

Forging a global Europe

Edited by Sven Biscop and Jan Joel Andersson

50. European Security and Defence Policy

An implementation perspective

Edited by Michael Merlingen and Rasa Ostrauskaitė

51. Women and British Party Politics

Descriptive, substantive and symbolic representation

Sarah Childs

52. The Selection of Ministers in Europe

Hiring and firing

Edited by Keith Dowding and Patrick Dumont

53. Energy Security

Europe's new foreign policy challenge

Richard Youngs

54. Institutional Challenges in Post-Constitutional Europe

Governing change

Edited by Catherine Moury and Luis de Sousa

55. The Struggle for the European Constitution

A past and future history

Michael O'Neill

56. Transnational Labour Solidarity

Mechanisms of commitment to cooperation within the European Trade Union movement

Katarzyna Gajewska

57. The Illusion of Accountability in the European Union

Edited by Sverker Gustavsson, Christer Karlsson and Thomas Persson

58. The European Union and Global Social Change

A critical geopolitical-economic analysis

József Böröcz

59. Citizenship and Collective Identity in Europe

Ireneusz Pawel Karolewski

60. EU Enlargement and Socialization

Turkey and Cyprus

Stefan Engert

61. The Politics of EU Accession

Turkish challenges and Central European experiences

Edited by Lucie Tunkrová and Pavel Šaradín

62. The Political History of European Integration

The hypocrisy of democracy-through-market

Hagen Schulz-Forberg and Bo Stråth

63. The Spatialities of Europeanization

Power, governance and territory in Europe

Alun Jones and Julian Clark

64. European Union Sanctions and Foreign Policy

When and why do they work?

Clara Portela

65. The EU's Role in World Politics

A retreat from liberal internationalism

Richard Youngs

66. Social Democracy and European Integration

The politics of preference formation

Edited by Dionyssis Dimitrakopoulos

67. The EU Presence in International Organizations

Edited by Spyros Blavoukos and Dimitris Bourantonis

68. Sustainability in European Environmental Policy

Challenge of governance and knowledge
Edited by Rob Atkinson, Georgios Terizakis and Karsten Zimmermann

69. Fifty Years of EU-Turkey Relations

A Sisyphean story
Edited by Armagan Emre Çakir

70. Europeanization and Foreign Policy

State diversity in Finland and Britain
Juha Jokela

71. EU Foreign Policy and Post-Soviet Conflicts

Stealth intervention
Nicu Popescu

72. Switzerland in Europe

Continuity and change in the Swiss political economy
Edited by Christine Trampusch and André Mach

73. The Political Economy of Noncompliance

Adjusting to the Single European Market
Scott Nicholas Siegel

74. National and European Foreign Policy

Towards Europeanization
Edited by Reuben Wong and Christopher Hill

75. The European Union Diplomatic Service

Ideas, preferences and identities
Caterina Carta

76. Poland within the European Union

New awkward partner or new heart of Europe?
Aleks Szczerbiak

77. A Political Theory of Identity in European Integration

Memory and policies
Catherine Guisan

78. EU Foreign Policy and the Europeanization of Neutral States

Comparing Irish and Austrian foreign policy
Nicole Alecu de Flers

79. Party System Change in Western Europe

Gemma Loomes

80. The Second Tier of Local Government in Europe

Provinces, counties, départements and Landkreise in comparison
Hubert Heinelt and Xavier Bertrana Horta

81. Learning from the EU Constitutional Treaty

Democratic Constitutionalism beyond the Nation-state
Ben Crum

82. Human Rights and Democracy in EU Foreign Policy

The cases of Ukraine and Egypt
Rosa Balfour

83. Europeanization, Integration and Identity

A social constructivist fusion perspective on Norway
Gamze Tanil

84. The Impact of European Integration on Political Parties

Beyond the permissive consensus
Dimitri Almeida

85. Civic Resources and the Future of the European Union

Victoria Kaina and Ireneusz Pawel Karolewski

86. The Europeanization of National Foreign Policies towards Latin America

Lorena Ruano

87. The EU and Multilateral Security Governance

Sonia Lucarelli, Luk Van Langenhove and Jan Wouters

88. Security Challenges in the Euro-Med Area in the 21st Century

Mare Nostrum
Stephen Calleya

89. Society and Democracy in Europe

Oscar W. Gabriel and Silke Keil

90. European Union Public Health Policy

Regional and global trends
Edited by Scott L. Greer and Paulette Kurzer

Contributors

François Briatte, University of Grenoble, France.

Elize Massard da Fonseca, Center for Metropolitan Studies, Brazilian Center for Analysis and Planning (CEM/CEBRAP), São Paulo, Brazil.

Heather Elliott, Department of Health Management and Policy, School of Public Health, University of Michigan, USA.

Scott L. Greer, Department of Health Management and Policy, School of Public Health, University of Michigan, USA.

Sébastien Guigner, Institute of Political Science, Centre Emile Durkheim, University of Bordeaux, France.

Boris Hauray, CNRS-INSERM-EHESS, Université Paris 13, France.

Holly Jarman, Department of Health Management and Policy, School of Public Health, University of Michigan, USA.

Loes Knaapen, Social Studies of Medicine Department, McGill University, Canada.

Paulette Kurzer, School of Government and Public Policy, University of Arizona, USA.

Wolfram Lamping, Institute for Political Science, Technical University of Darmstadt, Germany.

Jenny Cisneros Örnberg, Centre for Social Research on Alcohol and Drugs (SoRAD), Stockholm University, Sweden.

Donley T. Studlar, Department of Political Science, West Virginia University, USA.

Contents

List of figures	xi
List of tables	xii
List of contributors	xiii
1 Introduction: What is European Union public health policy?	1
SCOTT L. GREER
PART I
The EU and health systems	17
2 European Union health care policy	19
WOLFRAM LAMPING
3 European Union health information infrastructure and policy	36
HEATHER ELLIOTT
4 The politics of European public health data	51
FRANÇOIS BRIATTE
5 European regulation and harmonization of clinical practice guidelines	64
LOES KNAAPEN
6 The European regulation of medicines	81
BORIS HAURAY

PART II

The EU and global health governance 95

7 The EU as a global health actor: Myth or reality? 97

SÉBASTIEN GUIGNER

8 Trade in services and the public's health: A "Fortress Europe" for health? 110

HOLLY JARMAN

9 Intellectual property enforcement in the European Union 126

ELIZE MASSARD DA FONSECA

PART III

The EU and population health 139

10 Catch me if you can: Communicable disease control 141

SCOTT L. GREER

11 Non-communicable diseases: The EU declares war on "fat" 155

PAULETTE KURZER

12 Alcohol policy in the European Union 168

JENNY CISNEROS ÖRNBERG

13 Tobacco control: The end of Europe's love affair with smoking? 181

DONLEY T. STUDLAR

14 Conclusion 194

PAULETTE KURZER

Bibliography 207

Index 241

Figures

5.1	Benchmarking guideline development programs (vertical axis) along AGREE criteria (horizontal axis)	74
5.2	J. Miller and G. Ollenschläger, slide 17 from presentation: “Globalisation of CPGs: Do we need an international guidelines network?” Berlin, June 2002	76
9.1	Médecins Sans Frontières ’ international campaign (access to medicines).	132

Tables

5.1	The AGREE collaboration led to many other international guideline projects (co-)funded by the EU	66
8.1	Dimensions of EU power in trade and health services	112
8.2	EU health-related commitments under the GATS	114
8.3	The opportunities and costs of increased patient mobility	117
8.4	The opportunities and costs of increased professional mobility	120
13.1	Eras of tobacco control in Europe	183
13.2	Chronology of tobacco policy in the EU	187

1 Introduction

What is European Union public health policy?

Scott L. Greer

Defining European Union public health policy is hard: because the place of public health in the EU is new and still under debate; and because the borders and meaning of public health are less agreed than its scholars and practitioners might think. This introductory chapter first addresses the problem of defining public health. The second section addresses the issue of public health policy in the European Union, identifying it and separating it from the very substantial economic policies associated with the EU that also have economic effects. It argues that the public health policies of the EU are concentrated in three areas: the EU as a global actor (with repercussions inward on the EU itself); the EU as a supporter of health systems; and the EU as a public health regulator in its own right. The third section presents the chapters in the book.

What is public health policy? A plea for empirical definitions

At its most abstract, public health is the health of the population: their freedom from disease, incapacity, and avoidable death. Public health policy is that range of policies that contribute to such an end—from injury prevention to anti-smoking campaigns, to health systems strengthening, to microbiological research. Public health stands in relation to society like the doctor in relation to the patient: charged with diagnosing, prescribing, and treating its ills. In other words, public health is affected by almost every policy in government, and almost every policy in government could potentially be seen as more or less successful public health policy. And just like medical diagnoses, prescription, and influence over patients are highly imperfect, the influence of public health diagnoses, advice, and influence over states and peoples are highly imperfect.

We see the confusion in the endless definitional conversations that afflict public health. They are sparked by practical organizational requirements (such as degree accreditation or reorganization of a ministry), by professional self-definition (such as the border wars between medicine, nursing, and public health), by disagreement about whether a public health policymaker should be attending a given government meeting, or by simple disagreement about what topics are fit for public health scholars. The particularly neuralgic definitional divide is between public health and medicine; stances range from outright opposition (the argument that prevention and public health, rather than clinical medicine, save lives) to a variety of tangled syntheses that mirror the tangled relationships between public health and medically trained people in governments, practice, and scholarships.

The first problem for scholarship in particular is conceptual overreach. It arises when the impact of every policy on public health becomes a warrant for public health advocates to intervene in any and all areas of public health. On one hand, the odds are good that their expertise is either irrelevant (as with many discussions of social and health care services policy within public health) or very partial (epidemiology can say something about almost any topic in society, but not necessarily something other scholars and policymakers will find useful or want to hear). On the other hand, basic politics suggests that the expertise, connections, and coalitions of public health policymakers, like any other policymakers, have limits. The problem of integrating public health into the thinking of other policymakers, aka “Health in all policies,” has scarcely been solved (Stähl et al. 2006; Geyer and Lightfoot 2010; Greer 2012b).

The second problem arises when the difficulty of discussing public health’s nature and borders leads to unreflective definitions that mix the quintessence of public health with the organization and preoccupations of any one country. It is a basic methodological mistake to confuse the field of action (public health) with the people acting on the field (whatever corps of people have “public health” in their job description) (Bourdieu 2012, p. 334). Public health’s definitional debates are particularly prone to go wrong when participants cross borders; every one of the small number of studies comparing public health in Europe reveals major differences in the form and content of public health organization and activity (Mereckiene et al. 2010; MacLehose et al. 2001; Reintjes et al. 2007; Reintjes 2012; Elliott et al. 2012; Mounier-Jack and Coker 2006; Coker and McKee 2008; Brand 2012).

It stands to reason that the starting point of a conversation in the UK, where public health is dominated by highly trained medical specialists, will take a different course from conversations in the United States, where the two-year Masters of Public Health is the dominant degree, or from the numerous countries of continental Europe where there is no particularly prestigious degree or profession associated with the field. Furthermore, the big differences between politics matter and might not be easy to explain. Historical research, by far the dominant kind of scholarly research into public health politics and organization, has so far found path-dependent and otherwise patternless variation, a challenge to social scientists of all kinds (Baldwin 2005a,b). It has also made it clear just how different “public health” looks from different standpoints (Solomon et al. 2008)—and how often a writer’s assumptions about “how it is done” turn out to actually mean “how it is done in my country.”

The way out of these two problems—overreach and parochialism—is to abandon such “legislative” definitions, in which the academic observer determines the nature and scope of the topic. Instead, we should examine the scope of the policies—and the definitional debates—in different jurisdictions. Searching for the true nature of public health, or public health policy, is an activity best left to philosophers and advocates. Those from the social sciences who wish to understand the dynamics of public health policymaking would probably be better off starting with the policies, and understandings, of the participants in the system they are studying. In the case of the European Union, this means understanding two separable issues: the effects of the EU on public health, which are mostly from its role as an economic actor, and the set of policies that, as a practical question of EU politics, do involve the justifications and people associated with public health. The former might constitute a challenge to public health systems and advocates, and something they can use their participation in government to attack; the latter is what they are accustomed to doing.

What is the European Union? A public health policy approach

The European Union is a distinctive organization in world politics. Its institutions and politics are like those of many other polities, but as a whole it resembles little else. It began as a club of six countries that agreed to pool sovereignty over coal and steel, and later share atomic energy—and, fatefully, then, to form a common market with supranational institutions. Over decades it grew in both territorial expanse and the power of its law and institutions. Sometimes extension was due to great interstate bargains such as the ones that relaunched the internal market for 1992, admitted the post communist states of central Europe, or founded the currency union. Often, though, the deepening of integration was the work of the institutions: the entrepreneurial executive Commission and the European Court of Justice, which between them created many a fait accompli of integration that states found they could only accept. Later, the European Parliament would start to become a credible voice, heard in many of this book's chapters.

The EU might have distinctively powerful and entrepreneurial institutions, but its powers are theoretically enumerated in treaties, the most recent of which is the Lisbon Treaty. Like the constitutions of most federations, the treaties enumerate the powers of the EU. Where there is no “treaty base,” there is no basis for EU action. But like the constitutions of many federations, this restriction has proven more able to channel than to prevent the expansion of EU power. The mechanism is simple: the EU might not have treaty bases authorizing significant action in the area of health care, for example, but it is firmly within its rights (as defined and expanded over the years by the Court of Justice) when it regulates the internal market that includes the patients, doctors, providers, devices, and money of a health system.

The activity of these institutions then drives further European integration in a process known as spillover, in which integration essentially begets integration. Sometimes integration creates a demand for integration—if European integration allows farmers to buy and sell cattle across borders, it creates demands, come a crisis, for somebody to certify the quality of meat. Such spillover creates pressure for integration in the form of a nexus for cross-border coordination, and in the geopolitical and institutional environment of Europe it works (Knab 2011). Sometimes integration operates in a largely political sense: once the Court has created a right to health care across borders, everybody with an interest in health care has a reason to flock to Brussels and populate a new and once-unthinkable European Union health policy community (Greer 2006b). Both kinds of integration process are at work in this book.

The logic of integration instills its own biases, however. The powerful treaty bases have actually given rise to the “constitutional principles” of the European Union, known as the “four freedoms” in an appropriation of a phrase first coined for more inspiring ends by Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The four freedoms are the freedom of movement of goods, services, capital and people within the EU. A policy that interferes with such freedoms needs a powerful justification in theory, and a strong coalition in politics, to survive.

A European Union with a derisory budget, powerful legal system, and “constitutional” commitment to freedom of goods, services, capital and people is a perfect example of a regulatory state. Its principal policy tool is regulatory: setting the conditions under which others, including states, may make their decisions and ensuring that they do not interfere with the four freedoms in the internal market. Regulatory states can be infuriating because they make others pay for their policy goals; the Court can enunciate a right to health care, but member states must pay for it. Policy advocates in the EU often spend much of their time developing forums, programs, and initiatives that will help them counteract the information deficits, democratic deficits, and distrust such an organization creates among those it regulates.

Once European integration has taken place in a policy area—once the EU has an acknowledged role—the problem becomes one of action and impact. After integration comes EU policymaking and Europeanization. Those topics involve asking what combination of lobbying, institutions, entrepreneurship and luck explains EU agendas and policy decisions, and then, what impact it has and why.

What this all means is that the EU has two kinds of impact on public health. One comes through its role as an economic actor. The other is through policy justified by and intended to improve Europeans’ health. The latter is the focus of this book, but the former is the crucial context.

The EU: Economic actor

The EU is first and foremost an economic actor; it is no accident that it was called an “Economic Community” until 1992. The economic influence of the EU on public health comes through two routes. One is the regulatory agenda of the internal market. This is the core business of the main EU institutions: Court, Commission, Council and Parliament. They are engaged in developing law and policy that broadens and deepens economic integration. Policy in this area suffers from the “constitutional asymmetry” that Fritz Scharpf identified (Scharpf 2002). The Treaties enable more liberalization (“negative integration,” the removal of barriers to trade within Europe) than promoting new EU-wide standards and proposals (“positive integration,” the creation of programs that raise standards,