The Author

André Louw holds the degrees BA, LL.B, LL.M and LL.D from the University of Stellenbosch (South Africa).

André is a Senior Lecturer at the Faculty of Law, University of KwaZulu-Natal, Durban, South Africa, where he lectures in contract, intellectual property and sports law. He is an attorney of the High Court and a property conveyancer, and occasionally consults on sports law matters.

His research interest is exclusively in the field of sports law, and he has, since 2004, published articles in legal journals on a range of issues (including discrimination and the application of affirmative action in professional sport, sports governance and regulation, athletes' image rights, and restraint of trade and other challenges to governing bodies' regulation of the employment of professional athletes). He is currently engaged in writing a book (for expected publication in early 2012) which will undertake a critical review of the commercial monopolization of sports mega-events and the way(s) in which the law in domestic systems is used to protect commercial rights to events.

André is a (hopelessly untalented) weekend golfer and an avid cricket fan.
