

TERRORISM & COMMUNICATION

A Critical Introduction

JONATHAN MATUSITZ

TERRORISM & COMMUNICATION

A Critical Introduction

JONATHAN MATUSITZ

University of Central Florida

Los Angeles | London | New Delhi
Singapore | Washington DC

Los Angeles | London | New Delhi
Singapore | Washington DC

FOR INFORMATION:

SAGE Publications, Inc.
2455 Teller Road
Thousand Oaks, California 91320
E-mail: order@sagepub.com

SAGE Publications Ltd.
1 Oliver's Yard
55 City Road
London EC1Y 1SP
United Kingdom

SAGE Publications India Pvt. Ltd.
B 1/I 1 Mohan Cooperative Industrial Area
Mathura Road, New Delhi 110 044
India

SAGE Publications Asia-Pacific Pte. Ltd.
3 Church Street
#10-04 Samsung Hub
Singapore 049483

Acquisitions Editor: Matthew Byrnie
Editorial Assistant: Stephanie Palermi
Production Editor: Laura Stewart
Copy Editor: Matthew Sullivan
Typesetter: C&M Digitals (P) Ltd.
Proofreader: Eleni Georgiou
Indexer: Enid Zafran
Cover Designer: Candice Harman
Marketing Manager: Liz Thornton
Permissions Editor: Karen Ehrmann

Copyright © 2013 by SAGE Publications, Inc.

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced or utilized in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording, or by any information storage and retrieval system, without permission in writing from the publisher.

Printed in the United States of America

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

Matusitz, Jonathan Andre, 1976-

Terrorism and communication : a critical introduction / Jonathan Matusitz.

p. cm.

Includes bibliographical references and index.

ISBN 978-1-4522-4028-2 (pbk.)

1. Terrorism and mass media. 2. Terrorism.
3. Communication—Political aspects. I. Title.

P96.T47.M38 2013

363.325—dc23      2012026843

This book is printed on acid-free paper.

12 13 14 15 16 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

TERRORISM & COMMUNICATION

Preface

OVERVIEW OF THE TEXTBOOK

---

Terrorism and Communication provides a conceptual look at terrorism from a deeply communicative perspective. This is the first textbook to examine terrorism in relation to all major aspects of communication.

An important premise of this textbook is that terrorism is essentially a message. Communication is indispensable for a terrorist cause, not just to garner attention, but also to ensure its longevity and very survival. The victims' identities are not necessarily important to the terrorists, as long as the victims are members of a large group and the attack sends the intended message to the much larger population (i.e., an entire nation and possibly the entire world). Each chapter isolates a particular dimension of terrorism and communication, exposes the contexts and processes involving the main participants in terrorism (i.e., terrorists, targets, media, and audience), and examines the ways in which terrorism has, and will always have, the same objective: to send a message to cause change. Throughout all chapters, about twenty areas of communication are covered: two-way communication (i.e., David Berlo's Model of Communication), mass communications, media theory, visual communication, semiotics, intercultural communication, social constructionism, political communication, rhetoric, persuasion, linguistics (e.g., euphemisms, etc.), group dynamics, organizational communication, globalization, international communication, new media, interpersonal communication, nonverbal communication, conflict management, and crisis communication. Definitions of key terms, examples, data, facts from experts, theories, case studies, topic coverage, speech excerpts, and models and tables are provided to enhance and enrich understanding of how terrorism functions within communication contexts.

Another important premise of this book is that a symbiotic relationship exists between terrorism and the media. Without established methods of communication, terrorists depend on the media to communicate their objectives and interpret their signals. The media are considered tools for terrorists, providing the familiar "oxygen for publicity." After all, the media become very instrumental in forming interpretations of events. As terrorism scholar Walter Laqueur (1976) explains it, "[T]he media are the terrorist's best friend. The terrorist act by itself is nothing; publicity is all" (p. 104). On the other hand, media outlets can boost their ratings by covering terrorist incidents.

A third important premise is that globalization, which allows international communication channels to be exploited to the fullest, has given terrorism unprecedented ubiquity. The Internet, in particular, enables terrorism to travel with just a few mouse clicks away. And thanks to borders becoming increasingly porous, GTT (global transnational terrorism) offers non-state actors weapons and organization structures never used before. One organizational tactic is the use of autonomous sleeper cells, which require practically no leadership or vertical structure.

PREVIEW OF ALL CHAPTERS

---

Chapter 1 introduces the complex definition of terrorism. At best, there is a “most universally accepted” definition of it, which is the following: terrorism is the use of violence to create fear (i.e., terror; psychic fear) for (1) political, (2) religious, or (3) ideological reasons. This chapter also compares old and new terrorism: while old terrorism strikes only selected targets, new terrorism is indiscriminate; it causes as many casualties as possible. In Chapter 2, terrorism is described as a dynamic, two-way communication process between a sender (the terrorist) and a receiver (the audience). The chapter argues that the real objective of terrorism is persuasion. To understand how the communication process works and creates terrorism for the audience, three forms of communication of terrorism are analyzed: social noise, the signature method, and the conduit metaphor. Chapter 3 highlights the symbiotic relationship between terrorism and the media. Terrorists need the media or else their cause would be less known. Conversely, a terrorist act that just happened or that is going to happen may be a major scoop for the media; the audience ratings will likely increase. In fact, government officials have a tendency to associate the media with terrorists’ success or failure. Because the media select events that are newsworthy, terrorists select targets and locations that will be given high priority by news organizations. Examples of this are the Munich massacre and the Oklahoma City bombing.

In Chapter 4, terrorists are described as participating in a dialogue with various audiences beyond their immediate target. Terrorism is a spectacle, like a form of drama or theater. The audience is the public character of terrorism: it is both the second party (immediate target of the message) and the third party (target beyond the immediate target of the message) of terrorism. Chapter 5 explores how terrorism is framed by the media and examines the ways in which conventional frames about terrorism can influence public opinion. Framing gives priority to facts, images, or developments over others. Media interpretations of terrorism have become one-sided: terrorism has increasingly come to refer to acts associated with agents and supporters of foreign-based terrorist movements such as Al Qaeda, rather than with the violence of homegrown activists and radicals. Also part of the framing strategy is censorship. For example, in the Afghan War, there have been instances of military-imposed censorship on reporters.

Chapter 6 discusses terrorism as a social construct. The construction of terrorism is what people agree on through consensus. Language is essential to the social construction of reality. A striking response to 9/11 was the upsurge of symbolism across the U.S. (e.g., patriotic slogans), which led to an American collective identity: patriotism, memorialization, and celebration. This chapter also explores the pivotal role that culture plays in shaping how terrorism is perceived.

Chapter 7 looks at the use of stereotypes in response to terrorism. There are diverse ways for stereotyping the enemy: guilt by association, linguistic profiling, and so on. A direct consequence is stigmatization (an invisible sign of condemnation) of the “Other”; Arabs and Muslims have been stigmatized as a result of guilt by association. This chapter also explores related issues including discursive imperialism (a type of discourse that berates the enemy’s culture), racism, and stereotyping in Hollywood movies.

In Chapter 8, terrorism is interpreted through rhetoric. This chapter examines rhetorical appeals used in both the Global War on Terror (GWOT) and the Iraq War, and explores rhetorical strategies used in response to terrorism such as Othering, enemification, evilification, Orientalism, Occidentalism, or the “us vs. them” dichotomy. The chapter offers in-depth analysis of the rhetorical strategies of the Bush and Obama administrations’ counterterrorism efforts, as well as rhetorical strategies used by terrorists themselves.

Chapter 9 describes the use of euphemisms for terrorism and how they play an active role in the lives of many Americans. Euphemisms, in place of natural language, can be used to obscure issues through deliberate deception or to provide tactful language. For example, the act of bombing has been romanticized with nicer language. Ultimate consequences of euphemisms are obscurantism (intentionally keeping the facts from becoming known, which has a direct effect on our thinking process) and glossocracy (government or ruling through distorted language).

In Chapter 10, terrorism is described from the perspective of group dynamics. Many people become terrorists through indoctrination techniques, which are very efficient in small groups and Communities of Practice (CoPs). The role of Social Identity Theory (SIT) fits well to organizations like Al Qaeda, where new members are taught to hate the out-group (i.e., America and the West) and to avenge humiliations against the ummah (the global Muslim community). In addition, terrorist groups tend to rely heavily on symbols to solidify their in-group cohesion. For example, for Hamas, key symbols have contributed to Palestinian identity. These symbols include Zionist presence, the rise of Islamic awakening, and the signing of the Oslo Accords.

In Chapter 11, terrorist organizations are described through an organizational communication perspective. For instance, in the pyramidal (or hierarchical) structure, leaders are at the top and passive supporters at the bottom. In the horizontal structure, where there is no pyramid of command, the organization is divided according to particular tasks and loosely organized cells. With respect to leadership, two leadership types are described: authoritarian leadership and charismatic leadership. The important role of terrorist cells is something to behold. The clandestine cell structure has vague leadership and organizational configurations. It protects the cell and gives a group certain secretiveness. Likewise, a sleeper cell lies dormant until it wakes up or decides to conduct missions.

In Chapter 12, Diffusion of Innovations (DoI) theory explains how innovations (i.e., ideas or movements) are diffused through certain channels over time across society and diverse cultures. Opinion leaders and change agents are diffusers of ideas: they sway people’s attitudes or behavior in a desired fashion and, in the process, infuse innovative extremist ideologies into entire populations. Put simply, most of the jihad problem today can be traced back to Iran, beginning in 1979. The urge to change the world was diffused across all Muslim and Arab nations. A more extreme version of DoI is mimetism, the theory explaining the capacity of imitation (to mimic), which one mind diffuses to another mind. A meme can be disseminated through vertical transmission or horizontal transmission.

Chapter 13 looks at the impact of globalization and the Global Village of cyberspace on terrorism. Global transnational terrorism (GTT), along with its violent non-state actors (VNSAs), is analyzed. Globalization, thanks to international trade and transportation, has given new opportunities for terrorist groups to obtain and use better and deadlier weapons. Modern-day technologies diffuse power and level the playing field for terrorists. Terrorism also plays a huge role in cyberspace. Terrorism exploits the Global Village. Terrorists also communicate via predetermined codes that are generally transmitted through old personal messenger systems. Such a method is steganography (an ancient practice of concealing messages within texts, pictures, and objects). Lastly, terrorists can turn into cyberterrorists. Cyberterrorism is the use of information technology (e.g., the Internet or computer systems) as a method to mount attacks.

Chapter 14 examines interpersonal communication in terrorism, beginning with an exploration of hostage negotiation. One psychological and communicative method for solving a hostage crisis is relational development, the idea that relationships evolve into stages as a result of interpersonal dialogue. Because relational development was used during the Moluccans' hijacking in the Netherlands in 1975, the remaining hostages were safely released. Negotiation is discourse. The second part of the chapter is about the role of interpersonal communication in interrogation of suspected terrorists. In any case where interrogation has the objective of extracting reliable information, a rapport-based method is first recommended, using an approach of personal appearance (including appropriate age), good conduct, and tactful communication.

In Chapter 15, both international communication and international dialogue are important when facing terrorists one-on-one. Negotiating with terrorists is difficult as parties may have different objectives and cultural backgrounds. Various tactics and strategies in negotiation are listed and described. The concept of third-party intervention can be useful in that an individual (or team of people) can help the conflicting parties manage or resolve it. Another important method is diplomacy. A specific type of diplomacy is multi-track diplomacy, the combination of five track diplomacies: Track I, Track II, Track III, Track IV, and Track V. For instance, Track II diplomacy is celebrity diplomacy, in which a rock star like Bono will step in to improve inter-civilizational diplomacy.

Chapter 16 explores how crisis communication responds to terrorism, and how it may be used to improve terrorism preparedness. Crisis response through the web and movable phones is also discussed in this chapter. The chapter also examines intelligence about terrorism, and the ways in which intelligence may be thwarted by both misinformation (inaccurate information that is disseminated unintentionally) and disinformation (deliberately inaccurate information, including the spread of fabricated intelligence).

SAGE researchmethods

The essential online tool for researchers from the world's leading methods publisher

Find exactly what you are looking for, from basic explanations to advanced discussion

More content and new features added this year!

"I have never really seen anything like this product before, and I think it is really valuable."

John Creswell, University of Nebraska-Lincoln

Discover Methods Lists—methods readings suggested by other users

Watch video interviews with leading methodologists

Explore the Methods Map to discover links between methods

Search a custom-designed taxonomy with more than 1,400 qualitative, quantitative, and mixed methods terms

Uncover more than 120,000 pages of book, journal, and reference content to support your learning

Find out more at www.sageresearchmethods.com

Contents

Preface	xvii
Overview of the Textbook	xvii
Preview of All Chapters	xviii
 1 What Is Terrorism?	 1
Terrorism: Origin of the Word	1
Terrorism: Definition	2
Definitions from Various Scholars and Institutions	3
Most Universally Accepted Definition	4
U.S. Department of State's List of Current Terrorist Organizations	5
Brief History of Terrorism	7
Statistics on Present-Day Terrorism	9
RAND Corporation	10
Muslim Support for Terrorism in the U.S.	10
Old Terrorism vs. New Terrorism	11
Classical, Modern, and Postmodern Terrorism	11
Four Waves of Terrorism	12
Clash of Civilizations	12
New Organizational Structures	14
Why Does Terrorism Exist? Fifteen Causes	14
Case Study: Anders Behring Breivik's Manifesto	19
The Terrorist Identity	20
Ascribed Terrorist Identity	20
Self-Ascribed Terrorist Identity	20
Terrorists' Educational and Family Backgrounds	22
The Gender of the Terrorist	22
The Age of the Terrorist	23
Summary	23
Key Terms	24
 2 Terrorism as a Communication Process: Tactics	 33
Communication: Definition	33
Berlo's Model of Communication	34
Terrorism as a Communication Process	35

Communicating Terrorism: A Model	36
Act of Terrorism	36
Collective Communication Model of Terrorism	37
Communication of Terrorism: Social Noise	37
Propaganda by the Deed	38
Martyrdom	39
Communication of Terrorism: The Signature Method	41
Signature Methods in History	41
The IRA's Signature Methods	42
Suicide Bombings	42
Kidnappings and Hijackings	43
Beheadings	44
Underpublicized Signature Methods	44
Communication of Terrorism: The Conduit Metaphor	45
Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine	46
Osama bin Laden Videotapes	46
Summary	48
Key Terms	48

3 Terrorism as a Communication Process: The Media 53

Media: Definition	53
Terrorism and the Media: A Symbiotic Relationship	54
Media as Amplification Effect	57
Media as a Fickle Friend	59
Osama bin Laden: A Household Name	59
Examples of Terrorists' Exploitation of the Media	60
Problems with Media Coverage of Terrorism	63
Media Terrorism	65
Terrorism and the Media: A Semiotic Perspective	67
Saussurean Semiotics	67
Peircean Semiotics	68
The Signal-Index Paradigm	69
Media Portrayals of Female Terrorists	69
Summary	70
Key Terms	70

4 Terrorism as a Communication Process: The Audience 77

The Audience: Definition	77
Terrorism and the Audience: From Intimate to Public Distance	78
Beyond the Immediate Targets of Terrorism	78
An Audience Already Established	80
Yale Model of Persuasion	81
Uses and Gratifications Theory	82

Audience for Jihadist Terrorists	83
9/11 and Its Eight Types of Audiences	84
Measures of Audience Effectiveness	86
Emotional and Attitudinal Impacts of Terrorism on the Audience	88
Fear and Trauma	88
Tertiary Identities	89
Impacts of Media Exposure of Terrorism on the Audience	90
Managing Citizens' Fears	90
Remarks on Israelis' Reactions	91
Affecting Memory	92
Perception Is Not Reality	92
Gradual Lessening of Interest	93
Terrorism as Spectacle: It's All for the Audience	94
Commanding the Audience's Gaze	94
The Medium Is the Message	95
Dawson's Field Hijackings	95
Culture of Terror	96
Terrorism as Spectacle: Analyzing 9/11	96
A Disaster Movie	97
A Horror Movie	97
A Speech Performance	98
Terrorism as Spectacle: Dramaturgical Analysis	98
9/11 as Performance as Political Action	98
9/11 as Script	99
9/11 as Mise en Scène	100
9/11 as Choreography	101
Summary	101
Key Terms	102

5 Framing Terrorism 111

Framing: Definition	111
Framing vs. Agenda Setting	113
Types of Framing	114
Framing through the Power of Television	115
Emotional Cues in Television Coverage	116
Media Dependency Theory	117
Framing Terrorism	117
One-Sided vs. Two-Sided Coverage	118
"Sound-Biting" the Audience	119
Keeping the Audience Interested	120
Media–Military Collaboration	120
Media–Government Collaboration	122
A Clash of Civilizations in Media Framing of Terrorism	123

Framing the Image: Durrah vs. Norzich	124
Framing for Censorship	125
Framing Reporters for Censorship	126
Freedom of Information (FOI) Act	126
Visual Determinism	126
Arguments for and against Censoring Media Coverage of Terrorism	128
Arguments for Censorship	128
Arguments against Censorship	129
Framing the Media as Janus-Faced Means	130
Summary	131
Key Terms	131

6 Terrorism as Social Construction of Reality 137

Social Construction of Reality: Definition	137
Terrorism, Language, and Co-Construction of Reality	138
Discourse	138
Narrative	139
Social Construction of Terrorism in the West	140
Symbolism	140
American Collective Identity	141
United States vs. Europe	142
Social Construction of Fear	142
Social Construction of Emotions	143
Definitions of Emotions	144
Collective Emotional Orientation	144
Emotion and Interpersonal News Diffusion	145
The Role of Culture in Terrorism	145
Three Levels of Mental Programming	146
Collective Level of Mental Programming and Terrorism	146
Cultural Worldview (CWV)	149
Belief in a Just World	150
Symbolic Interactionism	151
Uncertainty Avoidance	153
Collectivism	153
Ethnography of Terrorism	154
Summary	156
Key Terms	156

7 Stereotyping Terrorists 163

Stereotype: Definition	163
Stereotyping the Enemy	164
Diverse Ways for Stereotyping the Enemy	164
Collective Unconscious	166

Stigmatization	166
Three Forms of Stigma	167
Racial Profiling	167
The Case of Liban Hussein	168
Stereotyping Arabs, Islam, and Terrorism	168
American Stereotypes of Arabs and Islam over the Years	169
Western Stereotypes of Arabs and Islam over the Years	170
Perspectives on Racism	171
McLuhan's Tetradic Framework	171
First Step	172
Second Step	173
Third Step	174
Fourth Step	176
Stereotyping Terrorism in Hollywood and Movies	177
Jack Shaheen's Studies	177
Narrative Transportation	178
Cultivation Theory	178
Summary	179
Key Terms	179

8 Interpreting Terrorism through Rhetoric 185

Rhetoric: General Perspectives	185
Three Modes of Rhetoric	186
Propaganda	187
Pro-War Rhetoric in the George W. Bush Administration	187
President Bush's Address to a Joint Session of Congress	189
Pro-War Rhetoric in the Media	190
The Propaganda of "World War"	191
Propaganda Content Analysis Categories and Descriptors	192
Dehumanizing the Enemy	193
Dehumanization during the Bush Administration	194
Boomerang Effect	195
The "Us vs. Them" Dichotomy	195
Cultural Hegemony	196
Occidentalism	196
Free Speech about Terrorism	197
Anti-Semetic Rhetoric	198
Terrorism Slogans	198
Counterterrorism and Antiterrorism Slogans	199
Anti-Iraq War and Anti-GWOT Slogans	199
Rhetoric of Islamist Terrorist Groups	200
Case Study: Osama bin Laden's Speech (10/29/2004)	202
Selective Moral Disengagement	205

Summary	207
Key Terms	207

9 Euphemisms for Terrorism 213

Euphemisms: Definition	213
It's Not Terrorism; It's the T-Word	214
Distancing Language	215
No More Bombing?	216
No More Killing?	217
Terrorism Euphemisms in the Bush Era	219
The Patriot Act	220
Unknown Unknown	221
Euphemisms for Torture	221
Terrorism Euphemisms in the Obama Era	222
Bluespeak	223
Euphemisms Used by Terrorists
Themselves	224
Effects of Terrorism Euphemisms	226
Obscurantism	226
Glossocracy	227
Solutions	227
Summary	228
Key Terms	229

10 Terrorism and Group Dynamics 233

Groups: Definition	233
Group Norms and Group Commitment	234
Primary Groups	234
Group Socialization and Terrorism	235
Trust and Support	235
Community of Practice (CoP)	236
Group Roles	237
Terrorism and Social Identity Theory (SIT)	237
Description of SIT	238
Social Identity of Terrorists	239
SIT and Hezbollah	240
SIT and Competition between
Terrorist Groups	242
SIT and Group "Mortality Salience"	242
SIT and Forgiveness	243
Small-Group Radicalization	243
Jihadization	244
Halaqa and Usroh	245

Groupthink	245
Risky Shift in Terrorist Groups	246
Consequences of Groupthink	247
Recruitment of Terrorists	248
The Importance of Identity	248
Models of Recruitment	248
“Staircase to Terrorism” Model	249
Ground Floor and First Floor	250
Second Floor	250
Third Floor	250
Fourth Floor	251
Fifth (and Last) Floor	252
Five Phases of Social Psychological Conditioning	253
Phases 1 and 2	254
Phase 3	254
Phase 4	256
Phase 5	256
The Pyramid Model	257
Levels of Involvement of Female Terrorists	258
Group Failure	258
Symbolic Convergence Theory	259
The Role of Myth in Terrorist Groups	260
Symbolic Cue, Fantasy Type, and Saga	261
Symbols in Terrorist Groups	262
Symbols and Terrorism	262
Symbolism in Shi’ite Terrorism	263
Symbolism in Hezbollah	264
Social Marginalization	265
Social Marginalization of Future Jihadists	266
“Damascus Road” Conversion	266
Summary	267
Key Terms	268

11 Organizational Structure and Leadership in Terrorism 281

Traditional Organizational Structure in Terrorism	281
Pyramidal (or Hierarchical) Structure	281
Horizontal Structure	282
Traditional Leadership in Terrorism	283
Leadership Influence	283
Authoritarian Leadership	284
Charismatic Leadership	285
Social Networks of Terrorists	286
Social Network: Definition	287
The AL Qaeda Network	287

Types of Social Networks	288
Financial Networks in Terrorism	290
Hawala System	290
Difficulties in Dismantling Terrorist Financial Networks	290
Safe Havens	291
Collaboration Models in Terrorism	292
Physical Exchange	292
Information Exchange	293
Knowledge Exchange	293
Action Exchange	294
Miscellaneous Types of Collaboration	294
Mexican Drug Cartels and Terrorists: A Collaboration	295
Terrorist Cells: General Outlook	296
Clandestine Cell Structure	296
Al Qaeda Cells	297
Self-Starter Cells	297
The "Lone Wolf" Cell Structure	298
Leaderless Resistance	299
Lone Wolf Terrorism in the U.S.	299
Summary	300
Key Terms	301

12 Diffusion of Innovations (DoI) and Terrorism 307

Diffusion of Innovations (DoI): Definition	307
Introduction to DoI and Terrorism	308
DoI, Terrorism, and Social Movement Theory	310
Spillover Effect	310
Opinion Leadership	311
Jihad Diffusing through Muslim Countries	312
Diffusion of Hamas and Its Ideas	313
Diffusion of the Muslim Brotherhood in Indonesia	314
Diffusing Suicide Terrorism	315
DoI and Mimetism: Definition	316
Vertical vs. Horizontal Transmission	316
Meme Replication	317
DoI and Mimetism: Terrorism	318
The Al Qaeda Memes	318
Suicide Terrorism and Social Proof	319
Mirror Neurons	320
Social Learning Theory	320
Meme Antibody	321
Radical Islam	321
British Islamic Schools	322
U.S. Islamic Schools	324