The Author

Judit Bayer (1974) is a full time associate professor and head of the Legal Department of King Sigismund College in Budapest. She taught and researched at the University of Wellington, New Zealand in 2006, and at Tama University, Tokyo in 2009. She had taught legal subjects at the International Business School's Oxford Brookes Ba(Hons) programme in Budapest (1998–2002). She acquired her LLM at Eötvös Loránd University (ELTE) of Budapest in 1992 and her Ph.D. from freedom of expression in the online environment, at the Department for Constitutional Law of ELTE in 2005. She pursued constitutional free speech studies at Central European University in 2000.

She carried out a research project at Open Society University in 2001–2002 on information policy issues. She lead a project at the Hungarian Academy of Sciences on public service television's regulation from a perspective of European competition law. She participated in several other research projects, specializing primarily in media regulation from a freedom of expression perspective, and in freedom and regulation of new media. Judit Bayer is frequently asked to speak at conferences and expert workshops or deliver legal or policy analyses. She is author and co-author of several books and author of numerous articles, both in English and in Hungarian. She is editor of the quarterly Médiakutató, a high quality media research journal. She is member of the executive board of the Society for Communication Research (MKTT) in Hungary.

The Co-Authors

Agnes Urban (1974, Budapest) is Associate Professor at the Corvinus University of Budapest (CUB). She has a master degree in Business Administration (1998), and she got her Ph.D. degree (summa cum laude) on the Corvinus University in 2006. The title of the PhD thesis was 'The market of new media services'.

She is a lecturer at the CUB (Media Economics, Media and Audience Research). Her primary research interest are diffusion of new media, reshape the business models and change of media consumption habits. In the last years she conducted researches about the restructuring of Hungarian television market, change of media consumption of teenagers and impact of new technologies on media markets.

She is the author of ca. 30 Hungarian and English publications including academic papers, book chapters, and conference proceedings.

Gábor Polyák is a lawyer. He is an associate professor at the University of Pécs and at the Corvinus University of Budapest. He is the leader of the Standards Media Monitor (Mérték Médiaelemző Műhely), an NGO financed by the Open Society Institute, dealing with the effect analysis of the Hungarian media law. He graduated in law and media sciences at the University of Pécs. He made an LL.M. degree at the University of Vienna on ITC law. His PhD was made at the University of Pécs with the title 'Forming the Media System'. He is the chief editor of the Hungarian professional journal 'Infokommunikáció és Jog' (Infocommunications and Law). He is the author of numerous publications and expert papers in media law, informatics law and telecommunications law. He worked as an advisor at the National Radio and Television Authority during the presidency of László Majtényi. Fellow of the Bolyai Scholarship of Hungarian Academy of Sciences.
