INTRODUCTION

The 25th edition of the Discrimination Guide has been completely revamped from previous editions.

Then we started this Guide, sex, race and equal pay were the only causes of action. As each new strand to the law was added - disability, religion or belief, sexual orientation, age - we added a new chapter to the publication. With the coming into force of the Equality Act 2010, however, this became anachronistic both in form and substance. Not only does the Equality Act standardise most of the definitions across the protected characteristics, but there have also been an increasing number of cases setting out principles which apply to all the discrimination strands. The principles established as to whether a volunteer has employment status for the purpose of discrimination law, as explored in the disability discrimination case of X v Mid Sussex Citizens Advice Bureau, for example, apply to all the protected characteristics. It was inappropriate, therefore, for principles of this nature to be found only in the chapter on disability discrimination.

A ccordingly, we have totally restructured the Guide, organising it according to cross-strand issues, with separate sections on particular protected characteristics only dealing with principles specific to that characteristic.

We have also used the statutory extracts from the Equality Act 2010, and this has meant dropping a large number of entries from the 24th edition which interpreted words from the old legislation that are not found, or are not repeated sufficiently closely, in the new legislation for us to remain confident that they are still valid.

The Guide covers both cases reported in Industrial Relations Law Reports (IRLR) during 2011 and also employment discrimination cases included in Equality Law Reports (EqLR). Another major change in the 25th edition is that this incorporates the first full year of cases reported in EqLR. EqLR was launched in part in response to the explosion in recent years in employment law decisions in general and discrimination decisions in particular. This meant that IRLR has been filled to capacity and many discrimination judgments of considerable interest, even if not of major importance, especially at EAT level, were not being reported. EqLR is able to include these cases and the result is reflected in this Guide. Of the 53 cases reported in 2011 from which principles are found in this edition, all were reported in EqLR, whereas only 16 were reported in IRLR as well.

Amajor purpose of this Guide is to extract from the thousands of discrimination cases decided over the years the main principles concerning employment discrimination that still can be regarded as binding authority. My hope is that this will assist those advising, acting or adjudicating in this jurisdiction on the current approach of the courts to the range of problems of interpretation posed by the statutes.

During 2011, EqLR and/or IRLR reported nine judgments of the Court of Justice of the European Union on discrimination law, one judgment of the Supreme Court, nine employment discrimination law judgments of the Court of Appeal, three from the Court of Appeal in Northern Ireland, two from the Inner House of the Court of Session, two from the High Court, one from the Mayor's and City of London Court, and 42 judgments from the EAT on aspects of discrimination law.

The reported EAT judgments came from courts presided over by 14 different judges: 16 judgments from the outgoing President, Mr Justice Underhill; four judgments from Lady Smith, four from HH Judge Peter Clark, four from HH Judge Richardson, three from HH Judge McMullen QC, two from Mr Justice Keith, Mr Justice Silber, HH Judge Serota QC and HH Judge Birtles, and one judgment each from the incoming EAT President, Mr Justice Langstaff, and from Mr Justice Bean, Mrs Justice Cox, HH Judge Reid QC and Mr Recorder Luba QC.

So far as causes of action are concerned, there was a fairly even split in the areas covered: 16 race discrimination cases, 15 sex discrimination, 14 equal pay, 12 disability discrimination, nine age discrimination, seven religion or belief, and four sexual orientation discrimination cases. Some cases concerned more than one protected characteristic.

Finally, since there has to be a cut-off point in preparing a publication such as this, I have only included cases reported in IRLR or EqLR up to the end of 2011. Inevitably, however, because this area of the law is developing so rapidly, the Guide may include some principles that been have overruled by the courts by the time this edition reaches your hands. For those who wish to keep up-to-date, the Guide thus should be seen as an adjunct to Industrial Relations Law Reports and Equality Law Reports, rather than a replacement for regular perusal of these journals. Equal Opportunities Review will continue to provide expert analysis of many of these key decisions.

Michael Rubenstein January 2012

1. EXCLUSIONS, EXCEPTIONS AND PRELIMINARY ISSUES

MEANING OF "EMPLOYMENT"

Employment" means -

(a) employment under a contract of employment, a contract of apprenticeship or a contract personally to do work;

EQUALITY ACT 2010 - 5.83

Jivraj v [2011] IRLR 827; Hashwani [2011] EqLR 1088 Sup Ct

In order to come within the scope of the definition of "employment", the relevant employment relationship must be "employment under" a contract personally to do work. It is not sufficient to ask simply whether the contract was a contract personally to do work, nor is it sufficient to ask what the dominant purpose of the contract was, although the dominant purpose may well be relevant in arriving at the correct conclusion on the facts of a particular case.

Mingeley v [2004] IRLR 373 CA Pennock and Ivory

On the plain words of the statute and the authorities, a claimant has to establish that his contract placed him under an obligation "personally to execute any work or labour".

In Allonby v Accrington and Rossendale College, the Court of Justice drew a clear distinction between those who are in substance employed and those who are "independent providers of services who are not in a relationship of subordination with the person who receives the services". There is no reason why the same distinction should not be drawn for the purposes of domestic law between those who are employed and those who are genuinely self-employed. In determining which of these two categories an individual falls into, the essential question to ask is whether, on the one hand, the person concerned performs services for and under the direction of another person in return for which he or she receives remuneration, or whether, on the other hand, he or she is an independent provider of services who is not in a relationship of subordination with the person who receives the services.

Quinnen v [1984] IRLR 227 EAT Hovells

The inclusion in the definition of "employment" of a third limb covering employment under "a contract personally to execute any work or labour" is a wide and flexible concept and was intended to enlarge upon the ordinary connotation of "employment" so as to include persons outside the master-servant relationship.

Muschett v [2010] IRLR 451 CA HM Prison Service

Mutuality of obligation is not a condition of a contract for services.

BP Chemicals Ltd v

[1995] IRLR 128 EAT

Gillick

The extended definition of "employment", referring to employment under a contract personally to execute work, must be taken to refer to a contract between the party doing the work and the party for whom the work is done. A contract worker does not enter into an "employment" relationship with the principal.

Burton v [2003] IRLR 257 EAT Higham t/a Ace Appointments

All that the statutory definition of employment requires is for there to be an obligation to do work. In this case, those engaged by an employment agency under a temporary worker's contract fell within the wider definition of "employment", notwithstanding that they provided their services to the client. The obligations set out in their contract corresponded to those envisaged in the statutory definition. The temporary worker's contract required them, when accepting an assignment, to do work. They could not substitute another person to take their place. That the work was performed for the client did not take it outside the scope of the statutory definition.

X v[2011] IRLR 335; Mid Sussex Citizens Advice Bureau [2011] EqLR 309 CA Volunteers at the Citizens Advice Bureau who are unpaid and have no binding contract fall outside the scope of the Disability Discrimination Act and the Framework Employment Equality Directive 2000/78. Volunteers do not fall within the meaning "occupation" in Article 2 of the Directive. The concept of "worker" has been restricted to persons who are remunerated for what they do. The concept of "occupation" is essentially an overlapping one, and there is no reason to suppose that it was intended to cover non-remunerated work. Nor could it be held that obtaining a voluntary post was a stepping stone to access to employment and therefore was an "arrangement" made for the purpose of determining who should be offered employment. An arrangement is not for the purpose of determining who should be offered employment if that is not what it is designed to achieve. The purpose of the arrangement in the present case was to secure advisers to provide advice to clients of the CAB; the purpose was not to create a potential pool from which full-time staff could be drawn.

Percy v [2006] IRLR 195 HL Church of Scotland Board of National Mission

An associate minister's relationship with the Church of Scotland constituted "employment" within the meaning of the statutory definition in that she was employed under a contract "personally to execute" work. Accordingly, she was entitled to bring her claim of sex discrimination against the church in an employment tribunal.

Percy v |2006| IRLR 195 HL Church of Scotland Board of National Mission

Holding an office and being an employee are not inconsistent. A person may hold an "office" on the terms of, and pursuant to, a contract of employment.

Hall v

[2000] IRLR 578 CA

Woolston Hall Leisure Ltd

Where the performance by the employer of a contract of employment involves illegality of which the employee is aware, public policy does not bar the employee, when discriminated against on grounds of sex by dismissal, from recovering compensation. A complaint of sex discrimination by dismissal is not based on the contract of employment. Although the employee must establish that she was employed and was dismissed from that employment, it is the sex discrimination which is the core of the complaint. The correct approach is for the tribunal to consider whether the claimant's claim arises out of or is so inextricably bound up with her illegal conduct that the court could not permit the claimant to recover compensation without appearing to condone that conduct.

Hounga v Allen

[2011] EqLR 569 EAT

There is no principle that if an employee does not have the legal right to work in the United Kingdom, he or she cannot bring a discrimination claim. The correct test for dealing with illegality in discrimination cases is the tortious approach set out by the Court of Appeal in Hall v Woolston Hall Leisure.

CLAIM IN TIME

- (1) Proceedings on a complaint within section 120 may not be brought after the end of -
 - (a) the period of 3 months starting with the date of the act to which the complaint relates, or
 - (b) such other period as the employment tribunal thinks just and equitable.
- (2) Proceedings may not be brought in reliance on section 121(1) after the end of
 - (a) the period of 6 months starting with the date of the act to which the proceedings relate, or
 - (b) such other period as the employment tribunal thinks just and equitable.
- (3) For the purposes of this section
 - (a) conduct extending over a period is to be treated as done at the end of the period;
 - (b) failure to do something is to be treated as occurring when the person in question decided on it.
- (4) In the absence of evidence to the contrary, a person (P) is to be taken to decide on failure to do something
 - (a) when P does an act inconsistent with doing it, or
 - (b) if P does no inconsistent act, on the expiry of the period in which P might reasonably have been expected to do it.

EQUALITY ACT 2010 - s.123

Dodd v British Telecom plc

[1988] IRLR 16 EAT

In order to be a valid complaint sufficient to stop time running, the written application must contain sufficient to identify who is making it and against whom it is made, and must contain sufficient to show what sort of complaint it is. An application whose contents did not comply with those broad minimum requirements would not be capable of being described as an originating application at all. However, the requirements of rule 1(a), (b) and (c) of the Employment Tribunals Rules of Procedure, which specify that an originating application shall set out the name and address of the claimant and of the person against whom relief is sought and the grounds, with particulars thereof, on which relief is sought, are not mandatory but are directory only. Therefore, where an application indicates that the claimant is making a complaint of discrimination in relation to her rejection for a particular post, a failure to specify whether the complaint is of sex discrimination or race discrimination or both is not fatal to the efficacy of the originating application.

Ali v [2005] IRLR 201 CA

Office of National Statistics

Direct discrimination is one type of unlawful act and indirect discrimination is a different type of unlawful act. Accordingly, a claimant who alleged on his originating application that he had been less favourably treated on racial grounds needed permission to amend his claim of race discrimination to add a claim of indirect discrimination since this was a new claim, which was brought out of time.

Cast v [1998] IRLR 318 CA Croydon College

A decision by an employer may be a separate act of discrimination for time limit purposes, whether or not it is made on the same facts as before, providing it results from a further consideration of the matter and is not merely a reference back to an earlier decision. If the matter is reconsidered in response to a further request, time begins to run again. Therefore, the appellant's complaint that the respondents had discriminated against her on grounds of sex by refusing to permit her to work part-time after she returned from maternity leave was not out of time, even though her request to work part-time was first refused prior to her maternity leave, and her originating application was not submitted until after she returned from maternity leave when her further requests to work part-time were again refused. Each decision amounted to a fresh refusal of a fresh request to work part time.

Swithland Motors plc v [1994] IRLR 276 EAT Clarke

An unlawful act of discrimination by omitting to offer employment cannot be committed until the alleged discriminator is in a position to offer such employment.

Aniagwu v [1999] IRLR 303 EAT London Borough of Hackney

A claimant must be able to identify the detriment to which he has been subjected before he can present a complaint. Therefore, the time limit for bringing a complaint of discrimination in respect of an employer's refusal to accept a grievance began to run from the date the decision of a grievance panel was communicated to the employee rather than the date on which that decision was taken.

3

British Gas Services Ltd v McCaull

[2001] IRLR 60 EAT

Time does not run in respect of a discriminatory dismissal until the notice of dismissal expires and the employment ceases. In dismissal cases, it is when the individual finds himself out of a job that he suffers detriment as a result of the discrimination.

Matuszowicz v [2009] IRLR 288 CA Kingston upon Hull City Council

A failure to make reasonable adjustments is an omission, not an act. The time-limit provisions relating to "deliberate omissions" apply even where the failure to make a reasonable adjustment is inadvertent. In such a case, where a person has not done an act inconsistent with making a reasonable adjustment, the tribunal must determine when, if the employer had been acting reasonably, it would have made the reasonable adjustment.

Extension

Robertson v [2003] IRLR 434 CA Bexley Community Centre

An employment tribunal has a very wide discretion in determining whether or not it is just and equitable to extend time. It is entitled to consider anything that it considers relevant. However, time limits are exercised strictly in employment cases. When tribunals consider their discretion to consider a claim out of time on just and equitable grounds, there is no presumption that they should do so unless they can justify failure to exercise the discretion. On the contrary, a tribunal cannot hear a complaint unless the claimant convinces it that it is just and equitable to extend time. The exercise of discretion is thus the exception rather than the rule.

Chief Constable of Lincolnshire [2010] IRLR 327 CA Police v

Caston

The statement in Robertson v Bexley Community Centre has been latched on to by commentators as offering "guidance", but in essence is an elegant repetition of well-established principles relating to the exercise of a judicial discretion. What the case does is to emphasise the employment tribunal's wide discretion.

Mills v [1998] IRLR 494 EAT Marshall

The words "just and equitable" in the discrimination legislation giving power to extend time could not be wider or more general. The discretion to extend time is unfettered and may include a consideration of the date from which the complainant could reasonably have become aware of her right to present a worthwhile complaint.

London Borough of Southwark v [2003] IRLR 220 CA Afolabi

In considering whether it is just and equitable to extend time, a tribunal is not required to go through the matters listed in s.33(3) of the Limitation Act 1980, provided that no significant factor has been left out of account by the tribunal in exercising its discretion.

Mills v [1998] IRLR 494 EAT Marshall

Where a person was reasonably unaware of the fact that they had the right to being proceedings until shortly before the complaint was filed, whether it is just and equitable to extend time is for the employment tribunal to determine, balancing all the relevant factors, including whether it is possible to have a fair trial of the issues raised by the complaint. Unawareness of the right to sue might stem from a failure by the lawyers to appreciate that a claim lay, or because the law "changed" or was differently perceived after a decision of another court.

Chohan v [2004] IRLR 685 EAT Derby Law Centre

Delay in bringing a claim in time due to incorrect legal advice ought not defeat a claimant's contention that the claim ought to be heard. The failure by a legal adviser to enter proceedings in time should not be visited upon the claimant for otherwise the defendant would be in receipt of a windfall.

Robinson v [2000] IRLR 904 EAT Post Office

An employment tribunal was entitled to find that it was not just and equitable to extend the time limit for presenting the claimant's disability discrimination complaint in respect of his dismissal, notwithstanding that his complaint was out of time because he was pursuing an internal appeal against dismissal. Parliament deliberately has not provided that the running of time should be delayed until the end of the domestic processes. When delay on account of an incomplete internal appeal is relied upon as a reason for failing to lodge a tribunal application in time, it will ordinarily suffice for the employment tribunal to put this into the balance when the justice and equity of the matter is being considered.

Apelogun-Gabriels v [2002] IRLR 116 CA London Borough of Lambeth

The correct law for whether it is just and equitable to extend the time limit for presenting a discrimination complaint which is out of time because the claimant was pursuing internal proceedings was laid down by Robinson v Post Office rather than by Aniagwu v London Borough of Hackney. The fact, if it be so, that the employee had deferred proceedings in the tribunal while awaiting the outcome of domestic proceedings is only one factor to be taken into account. To the extent that Aniagwu lays down some general principle that one should always await the outcome of internal grievance procedures before embarking on litigation, it was plainly wrong.

Department for Constitutional [2008] IRLR 128 CA Affairs v

Jones

Although there is no general principle that a person with mental health problems is entitled to delay as a matter of course in bringing a claim, there is an additional factor in disability discrimination not present when some of the other discretions come to be exercised, which is that the disability must be a 12-month disability as defined in the Act. Any person with a mental condition has therefore to predict whether he is likely to come within the definition. In this case, an employment judge was entitled to exercise his discretion to extend time where the true reason for the delay which occurred in presenting the claim was that the claimant did not want to admit to himself or to others that he was disabled within the meaning of the Act.

Continuing discrimination

Barclays Bank plc v [1991] IRLR 136 HL Kapur

To maintain a continuing regime which adversely affects an employee is an act which continues so long as it is maintained.

Hendricks v [2003] IRLR 96 CA Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis

In determining whether there was "an act extending over a period", as distinct from a succession of unconnected or isolated specific acts, for which time would begin to run from the date when each specific act was committed, the focus should be on the substance of the complaints that the employer was responsible for an ongoing situation or a continuing state of affairs. The concepts of policy, rule, practice, scheme or regime in the authorities were given as examples of when an act extends over a period. They should not be treated as a complete and constricting statement of the indicia of "an act extending over a period".

Robertson v [2003] IRLR 434 CA Bexley Community Centre

To establish a continuing act it must be shown that the employer had a practice, policy, rule or regime governing the act said to constitute it.

Cast v [1998] IRLR 318 CA

Croydon College

Application of a discriminatory policy or regime pursuant to which decisions may be taken from time to time is an act extending over a period. There can be a policy even though it is not of a formal nature or expressed in writing, and even though it is confined to a particular post or role.

Cast v [1997] IRLR 14 EAT Croydon College

The mere repetition of a request cannot convert a single managerial decision into a policy, practice or rule.

Hendricks v |2003| IRLR 96 CA Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis

The burden is on the claimant to prove, either by direct evidence or by inference from primary facts, that alleged incidents of discrimination were linked to one another and were evidence of a continuing discriminatory state of affairs covered by the concept of "an act extending over a period."

Tyagi v [2001] IRLR 465 CA BBC World Service

A job claimant cannot complain of a policy of "continuing discrimination" extending over a period. The statutory language relating to selection arrangements, which refers to discrimination in the arrangements which the employer makes "for the purpose of determining who should be offered that employment", makes it clear that what is being complained about is not employment generally but the particular employment that is being offered.

Examples

Sougrin v [1992] IRLR 416 CA Haringey Health Authority

A grading decision is a one-off act with continuing consequences rather than a continuing act of discrimination.

Rovenska v [1997] IRLR 367 CA General Medical Council

If the General Medical Council's regime for exemption from a test set for registration as a medical practitioner was indirectly discriminatory, then it would be committing an act of unlawful discrimination on every occasion that it refused to allow the claimant limited registration without first taking the test.

Owusu v [1995] IRLR 574 EAT London Fire & Civil Defence Authority

In alleging a failure by the employers over a number of years to re-grade him and a failure to give him an oppor-tunity to act-up when such opportunities arose, the complainant was alleging a continuing act in the form of maintaining a practice which resulted in consistent discriminatory decisions.

Calder v [1989] IRLR 55 EAT James Finlay Corporation Ltd

By constituting a mortgage subsidy scheme under the rules of which a woman could not obtain benefit, the employers were discriminating against the appellant woman in the way they afforded her "access" to the benefit. It followed that so long as she remained in the employers' employ, there was a continuing discrimination against her. Alternatively, it could be said that so long as her employment continued, the employers were subjecting her to "any other detriment". As the rule of the scheme constituted a discriminatory act extending over the period of the appellant's employment, it was therefore to be treated as having been done at the end of her employment rather than on the last occasion on which she was deliberately refused access to the scheme. Consequently, as her complaint had been presented within three months of leaving her employment, the employment tribunal had jurisdiction to entertain it.

Littlewoods Organisation plc v [1993] IRLR 154 EAT Traynor

A complaint of racial discrimination in respect of alleged racial abuse was not out of time, notwithstanding that the last incident took place more than three months before the complaint was filed, in circumstances in which remedial measures promised by the employers had not been fully implemented when the respondent resigned and made his complaint to the tribunal. So long as the remedial measures which had been agreed on were not actually taken, a situation capable of involving racial discrimination continued and allowing that situation to continue amounted to a continuing act.

CONTRACTING OUT

- (1) A term of a contract is unenforceable by a person in whose favour it would operate in so far as it purports to exclude or limit a provision of or made under this Act.
- (2) A relevant non-contractual term (as defined by section 142) is unenforceable by a person in whose favour it would operate in so far as it purports to exclude or limit a provision of or made under this Act, in so far as the provision relates to disability.
- (3) This section does not apply to a contract which settles a claim within section 114.
- (4) This section does not apply to a contract which settles a complaint within section 120 if the contract—
 - (a) is made with the assistance of a conciliation officer, or
 - (b) is a qualifying compromise contract.
- (5) A contract within subsection (4) includes a contract which settles a complaint relating to a breach of an equality clause or rule or of a non-discrimination rule.
- (6) A contract within subsection (4) includes an agreement by the parties to a dispute to submit the dispute to arbitration if
 - (a) the dispute is covered by a scheme having effect by virtue of an order under section 212A of the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992, and
 - (b) the agreement is to submit the dispute to arbitration in accordance with the scheme.

EQUALITY ACT - s.144

- (1) This section applies for the purposes of this Part.
- (2) A qualifying compromise contract is a contract in relation to which each of the conditions in subsection (3) is met.
- (3) Those conditions are that -
 - (a) the contract is in writing,
 - (b) the contract relates to the particular complaint,
 - (c) the complainant has, before entering into the contract, received advice from an independent adviser about its terms and effect (including, in particular, its effect on the complainant's ability to pursue the complaint before an employment tribunal),
 - (d) on the date of the giving of the advice, there is in force a contract of insurance, or an indemnity provided for members of a profession or professional body, covering the risk of a claim by the complainant in respect of loss arising from the advice,
 - (e) the contract identifies the adviser, and
 - (f) the contract states that the conditions in paragraphs (c) and (d) are met.

EQUALITY ACT - s.147

Clarke v [2006] IRLR 324 EAT

Redcar & Cleveland Borough Council

Where the parties make a contract that follows any attempt by an ACAS conciliation officer to promote a settlement, the contract is made with the assistance of that ACAS officer. Whether a settlement is effective to preclude a claim being brought before a tribunal depends on whether what the ACAS officer has done corresponds to the functions which a conciliation officer has a duty, or power, to discharge. In determining whether the conciliation officer exercised her functions in order to effect a valid conciliation contract, the following principles apply:

- a. The ACAS officer has no responsibility to see that the terms of the settlement are fair on the employee.
- b. The expression "promote a settlement" must be given a liberal construction capable of covering whatever action by way of such promotion as is applicable in the circumstances of the particular case.
- c. The ACAS officer must never advise as to the merits of the case.
- d. It is not for the tribunal to consider whether the officer correctly interpreted her duties; it is sufficient that the officer intended and purported to act under the section.
- e. If the ACAS officer were to act in bad faith or adopt unfair methods when promoting a settlement, the agreement might be set aside and might not operate as a bar to proceedings.

Clarke v [2006] IRLR 324 EAT

Redcar & Cleveland Borough Council

An ACAS conciliation officer is not under a duty to give advice, to evaluate the claims or to ensure that the claimants understand the nature and extent of all their potential claims.

McWilliam v [2011] IRLR 568 EAT; Glasgow City Council [2011] EqLR 554 EAT

The requirement that a compromise contract must relate to a "particular complaint" does not mean that a complaint could only be validly compromised if either it was set out in a pre-existing Tribunal claim or if it had been articulated orally or in writing or in a prior grievance. Giving the words of the statute their ordinary meaning, the term "a complaint" is wide enough to include circumstances where there was nothing more than an expression of dissatisfaction about something. The purpose of the words "particular complaint" are to ensure that there was adequate specification in the compromise agreement itself of the complaint to which it related to so that both parties knew which particular complaint could not be litigated in the future. The employment judge in the present case had correctly concluded that what was required was that the complaint to be compromised should be sufficiently identified either by statutory provision or generically so that the employee was not asked to sign a blanket waiver of all possible claims he or she may have.

Lunt v [1999] IRLR 458 EAT

Merseyside TEC Ltd

The requirement that a compromise agreement "must relate to the particular complaint" is not limited to complaints that have been presented to an employment tribunal. However, a "blanket" agreement compromising claims which had never been indicated in the past is not permitted.

Lunt v [1999] IRLR 458 EAT Merseyside TEC Ltd

A single compromise agreement can cover claims under more than one statute.

The requirement that the employee must have received advice from a relevant independent adviser as to the "terms and effect of the proposed agreement" did not require the relevant independent adviser to offer a view on whether or not the deal on offer was a good one or whether or not the adviser thought that the employee should accept it.

IMMUNITY

Heath v [2005] IRLR 270 CA Commissioner of Police for the Metropolis

Proceedings before a police disciplinary board constituted under the Police (Discipline) Regulations are sufficiently "judicial" to fall within the rule of absolute immunity from suit that attaches to judicial or quasi-judicial proceedings and excludes complaints about unlawful discriminatory conduct in the course of such proceedings to other judicial bodies, including employment tribunals.

DEATH OF CLAIMANT

Harris v [2000] IRLR 320 CA

Lewisham & Guys

Mental Health NHS Trust

A complaint brought under the discrimination statutes survives the death of the complainant.

BANKRUPTCY OF CLAIMANT

Khan v [2004] IRLR 961 CA Trident Safeguards Ltd

A claim for race discrimination is a "hybrid" claim, since it includes both a claim for pecuniary loss, which is property that is part of the bankrupt's estate, and a claim for injury to feelings, which is "personal" and does not form part of the bankrupt's estate, and therefore the whole of the hybrid claim vests in the trustee in bankruptcy in accordance with the decision in Ord v Upton. However, there is a public interest in claims of race discrimination being fully examined. Therefore, a bankrupt should be permitted to limit their claim for relief to a declaration and compensation for injury to feelings only. If that is done, the claim ceases to be a hybrid one.

ACTS AUTHORISED BY STATUTE OR THE EXECUTIVE

- 1(1) This paragraph applies to anything done -
 - (a) in pursuance of an enactment;
 - (b) in pursuance of an instrument made by a member of the executive under an enactment;
 - (c) to comply with a requirement imposed (whether before or after the passing of this Act) by a member of the executive by virtue of an enactment;
 - (d) in pursuance of arrangements made (whether before or after the passing of this Act) by or with the approval of, or for the time being approved by, a Minister of the Crown:
 - (e) to comply with a condition imposed (whether before or after the passing of this Act) by a Minister of the Crown.
- (2) A person does not contravene Part 3, 4, 5 or 6 by doing anything to which this paragraph applies which discriminates against another because of the other's nationality.
- (3) A person (A) does not contravene Part 3, 4, 5 or 6 if, by doing anything to which this paragraph applies, A discriminates against another (B) by applying to B a provision, criterion or practice which relates to
 - (a) B's place of ordinary residence;
 - (b) the length of time B has been present or resident in or outside the United Kingdom or an area within it.

EQUALITY ACT 2010 - Sch. 23, para. 1

Hampson v [1990] IRLR 302 HL Department of Education and Science

An act is done "in pursuance of" an enactment, order or instrument only if it is specified in the enactment, order or instrument.

The interests of safety are not a justification for discrimination on grounds of sex unless the act was done to comply with a pre-existing statutory requirement.

In order to satisfy the statutory test, an employer does not have to show that debarring a woman from taking up a job was inexorably the only method available to him of satisfying the requirements of the Health and Safety at Work Act to ensure, so far as is reasonably practicable, the health, safety and welfare at work of his employees. It is important to consider all the circumstances of the case, the risk involved and the measures which it can be said are reasonably necessary to eliminate the risk. There may be cases where one course which is suggested as being sufficient may leave open some doubt as to whether it is going to achieve the desired level of protection. In such a case, it may be that an employer is complying with the requirements of the legislation if, in all the circumstances, he thinks it right not to allow an employee, for his (or her) own protection or safety, to do the particular job.
