Complicity in International Law

OXFORD MONOGRAPHS IN INTERNATIONAL LAW

The aim of this series is to publish important and original pieces of research on all aspects of international law. Topics that are given particular prominence are those which, while of interest to the academic lawyer, also have important bearing on issues which touch the actual conduct of international relations. Nonetheless, the series is wide in scope and includes monographs on the history and philosophical foundations of international law.

Acknowledgements

Complicity is a subject that lends itself to an appreciation of assistance and encouragement. This book, which grew out of the doctoral thesis I defended at the University of Oxford in November 2013, depended on a great deal of both.

First and foremost, I would like to thank Professor Dapo Akande for his direction and advice on the thesis, both of which were indispensable, and for his warm support and friendship beyond it. I owe him a great deal.

I owe an intellectual debt to those who taught me international law, in particular Professor Stefan Talmon, for his rigour and inspiration many years ago, and Professors Ryan Goodman and William Alford. In addition, I am immensely grateful, both personally and professionally, to Professor Liora Lazarus.

I am also thankful to my examiners, Professors Andrew Ashworth and André Nollkaemper, and all at the University of Oxford and elsewhere who discussed drafts, chapters, and ideas with me: Sir Frank Berman, Professor Michael Bohlander, Professor Sandra Fredman, Professor John Gardner, Professor Guy Goodwin-Gill, Professor Imogen Goold, Professor Doug Husak, Professor Nina Jørgensen, Dr Maris Köpcke Tinturé, Professor Vaughan Lowe, Professor Catherine Redgwell, Professor Antonios Tzanakopoulos, and Professor Stefan Vogenauer.

I would like to thank Farid Ahmadov, Nick Friedman, Ryan Goss, Claire Hewer, Sotirios-Ioannis Lekkas, Thomas Liefänder, Kubo Mačák, Travers McLeod, Dhvani Mehta, Rob Mullins, Brid Ni Ghráinne, Nikki Palmer, and Laith Tapper for their friendship, help, and advice along the way. I am also immensely grateful to Anna Begemann, Caitlin Goss, and Natasha Simonsen, all of whom read the entire draft and for whose comments it is vastly better.

I am thankful to Oxford University Press and its Delegates, and personally to Emma Endean, Merel Alstein, and John Louth for their support and work in turning the draft into a book. In addition, I appreciate all of the work that Dhanuj Nair of Newgen put into shepherding the project to completion and Cheryl Prohett's excellent copy-editing.

This project would not have commenced without the generosity of the Rhodes Trust. I am grateful to all at Rhodes House, especially Mary Eaton, John Gee, Don Markwell, Colin Page, and Bob Wyllie. In turning my thesis into this book, I was supported by the Global Justice Research Fellowship at St Anne's College; I am grateful to Don Ferencz of the Global Institute for the Prevention of Aggression for his support for the fellowship.

I am also indebted to the staff of the Law Faculty at the University of Oxford, the University's many libraries and librarians, and to University College, Oxford, and St Anne's College, Oxford.

Finally, I am deeply grateful to my family for their love and support, and to Emily Uecker for those and much more.
