ENGLISH HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS

1603–1660

Praise for the series:

‘Perhaps the most important historical undertaking of our age . . . one of the most valuable historical works ever produced.’ Times Literary Supplement

‘A landmark in the field of historical endeavour . . . the most admirable collection of sources on English history that exists.’ American Historical Review

English Historical Documents is the most ambitious and comprehensive collection of primary documents on English history ever published. The volumes were published between 1953 and 1977 and have become landmark publications in their own fields.

This long-awaited volume covers 1603 to 1660, the tumultuous years of the Stuart Kings, the English Civil War and the rise and fall of the Republic. The volume includes informative introductory pieces for the Parts and sections, and editorial comments are directed towards making sources intelligible rather than drawing conclusions from them. Opening with an overview of the landscape, people and places of England and Wales, the volume covers all the key aspects of the Stuart period, including:

- Parliaments
- Religion
- Multiple kingdoms
- Finance
- Political ideas
- The monarchy
- Internal wars and warfare
- Foreign policy and external wars
- Justice and judicial affairs
- Links between localities and centres

The format of the series has been fully updated for this new volume, and the documents gathered here encompass the most up-to-date approaches to the material.

Barry Coward is Emeritus Professor of History at Birkbeck, University of London and is the author of many books on the history of the Stuart Age, including The Stuart Age: England 1603–1714 (3rd edition, 2003) and The Cromwellian Protectorate (2002).

Peter Gaunt is Reader in History and Professor of Early Modern History at the University of Chester. His previous publications include Oliver Cromwell (2004) and The English Civil Wars, 1642–51 (2003).

Extracts of Analecta Hibernica 8 (1938) are reproduced here by permission of the Irish Manuscripts Commission.

I am also grateful to the British Academy for a Small Research Grant that facilitated the work of transcribing some of the documents I have used. My greatest thanks are to Bonnie Garnett, who coped cheerfully and efficiently in helping me with this often tiresome task, leaving me freer than I would otherwise have been for the more enjoyable selection of appropriate documents.

BARRY COWARD

Thanks are due to the National Archives for permission to use the following documents: 274, 280, 344, 356, 470, 513, 536, 565 and 595. I am most grateful to my colleagues in the Department of History and Archaeology at the University of Chester for their help and support in various ways during the long process of compiling and preparing my parts and sections of the volume, but particularly warm thanks are due to Dr John Doran, who kindly translated documents 296 and 355 from the original Latin and who offered advice on other Latin words and phrases which pepper the documents.

PETER GAUNT

NOTE TO READERS AND ABBREVIATIONS

Consistent with the approach adopted in other volumes of this series and with the aim of producing a readable and accessible edition of documents, the editors have generally modernised spelling, punctuation and the use of upper and lower case. However, in order to retain the distinctive seventeenth-century linguistic styles, rhythms and idioms, editorial intervention has otherwise been kept to a minimum. Translations of Latinisms and other foreign words or phrases have generally been offered in square brackets; similarly, archaic words and terms, especially in a legal or technical context, have often been defined or explained in square brackets, but no attempt has been made to explain every unusual or specialised word. Unless otherwise clearly indicated in the document, dates are old style, but the year has been taken to begin on 1 January.

3 A very positive description of London, compared favourably to Paris, 1618	13
4 A more jocular and mixed view of London and London life, 1632	14
5 A short but glowing account of London, though with a closing warning that such a monster city may not be good for the country as a whole, 1652	16
6 A description of aspects of Cornish life, including tinning, buildings and pastimes, 1603	17
7 A description of the produce, commodities and exports of Pembrokeshire, 1603	20
8 A description of Devon cloth manufacture and trade, 1630	22
9 A traveller's description of Newcastle upon Tyne and of the South Shields saltworks, 1635	23
10 A description of the commodities of the Tyne, especially coal, 1649	25
11 A journey in northern England undertaken by a courtier accompanying the king and his court during the First Scots' War, 1639	26
12 An account of towns and countryside visited by a soldier marching with the parliamentary army during the opening weeks of the civil war, 1642	27
13 An account of a journey north, viewing the Derbyshire lead fields and exemplary justice in Halifax, 1639	29
14 An account of a journey west, encountering poor accommodation en route and visiting the far west of Cornwall, including Land's End, 1649	30
