The Authors

Alvin Goldman received his A.B. from Columbia University in 1959 and his LL.B. from New York University in 1962. After practicing law in New York City, specializing in labor relations, he began full-time teaching at the University of Kentucky in 1965 where he is the Lafferty Professor of Law.

Professor Goldman served as Professor in Residence to National Labor Relations Board Member Sam Zagoria during the 1967–8 academic year, was a visiting scholar at the Institute for Labor Law, Catholic University, Leuven, Belgium, in 1973, and was Visiting Professor at the School of Law, University of California-Davis, 1976–7 academic year. In addition to teaching, he is a labor arbitrator.

Professor Goldman is a member of, and former Chair of, the Labor Law Group Trust for which he prepared Processes for Conflict Resolution (BNA 1972) and co-authored Legislation Protecting the Individual Employee (BNA 1982 with R. Covington), and Legal Protection for the Individual Employee (West 1989, 2nd edition 1996, 3d edition 2002, with M. Finkin and C. Summers). He also authored Settling for More: Mastering Negotiating Strategies and Techniques (BNA 1991) and The Supreme Court and Labor-Management Relations Law (D.C. Heath 1976), has written chapters for several books including Comparative Labour Law and Industrial Relations in Industrialized Market Economies (Kluwer), and is US co-reporter for International Labour Law Reports (Martinus Nijhoff). Professor Goldman is Chair of the US Branch, International Society for Labor Law and Social Security and a Vice President of the Society.

Professor Goldman wishes to thank C. Joe Cavitt and Danielle Flora for their very helpful research assistance.

The Authors

Rebecca Hanner White is a J. Alton Hosch Professor of Law at the University of Georgia. She received her law degree from the University of Kentucky in 1981, where she served as editor-in-chief of the school's law review. After graduation, she clerked for George Edwards, Chief Judge of the US Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit and then joined the Cincinnati, Ohio law firm of Dinsmore & Shohl, where she practiced labor and employment law. Professor White has been teaching at the University of Georgia law school since 1989. She is the author of Employment Law and Employment Discrimination published in 1998 by Aspen Books.
