PREFACE

In the summer of 2008, the Max Planck Encyclopedia of Public International Law (MPEPIL) was published as an online database by Oxford University Press and has since been continually expanded. Three years on, the publication of the library edition—marking the preliminary conclusion of the Encyclopedia—offers me the opportunity to take stock and to express my gratitude to a great number of people who have contributed to this work.

I

The Encyclopedia would not have been possible without its precursors, starting with Karl Strupp's three-volume Wörterbuch des Völkerrechts und der Diplomatie (1924–1929). From 1960 to 1962, Hans Jürgen Schlochauer edited the Wörterbuch des Völkerrechts which again appeared in three volumes with an additional index volume. The Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law under the direction of Hermann Mosler already greatly contributed to the production of this publication.

This was followed by the Encyclopedia of Public International Law (EPIL), first published in installments from 1981 to 1990 under the auspices of the Max Planck Institute for Comparative Public Law and International Law under the direction of Rudolf Bernhardt. EPIL already contained twice as much material as the earlier Wörterbücher and, while the majority of authors still came from German-speaking countries, it was written in English with the intention of addressing scholars in all parts of the world.

The Max Planck Encyclopedia of Public International Law seeks to continue this renowned series of reference works. Nevertheless, MPEPIL constitutes a new work rather than a second edition of EPIL. Radical changes and developments in public international law over the last decades have made it necessary to re-write nearly every article from scratch—only 12 articles were taken verbatim from the Bernhardt edition. While nearly 350 topics were discontinued, more than twice as many were introduced. Seeking a geographical balance that would correspond to MPEPIL's thematic scope, we invited more than 800 scholars from 83 countries to contribute to the Encyclopedia, and the response was overwhelmingly positive.

Responding to the scholarly community's demands, MPEPIL was first published as a state-of-the-art online database, offering wide-ranging research functions. The articles printed in this library edition are identical to those online, although the electronic version will continue to be expanded and updated beyond the print publication.

MPEPIL articles are hybrids in character insofar as they combine elements of a reference work with a law journal approach. Authors were asked to cover their topic in an objective, comprehensive manner but also to add a personal assessment, delineating their own scholarly view of the matter.

Quality control lay with the Advisory Board, which has convened at regular intervals since 2005. Coming from different areas of public international law, the members of the Board ensured that the various fields of international law were given adequate weight within the Encyclopedia. Every article was peer-reviewed by me and two or more members of the Advisory Board. Throughout the review and revision process, the Board (through the medium of the Heidelberg Max Planck Institute) was in constant close contact with the contributors, a synergetic procedure that considerably enriched the Encyclopedia. The Institute functioned as a point of intersection between the Board and authors, enabling a dialogue spanning legal cultures and traditions. I was surprised and delighted with how fruitful this process proved, even—or particularly—with some very controversial topics, and I am deeply indebted to the Board members for their efforts.

The purpose of this publication is a restatement of international law through global dialogue. This is reflected by the selection of keywords, which aims at covering international law in its entirety, geographically as well as substantially. Regional varieties have been treated with due brevity but so as to give the reader a helpful introduction.

II

A comprehensive publication in the field of international law that lays any claim to relevance has to take on the challenges of its time. My predecessor Rudolf Bernhardt in a mid-1990s article described the difficulties he faced when he set out to compile EPIL in the 1970s. It was the heyday of East–West antagonism; thus there was only a limited possibility of taking on East European authors.

EPIL was published in installments beginning in 1981. By the time the library edition appeared, with additional notes written in the 1990s, the Berlin Wall had come down. Bernhardt eventually had the satisfaction of seeing Central, Eastern and Western European scholars discuss international law without ideological barriers, something that had seemed impossible at the time when EPIL was projected.

Time has relegated the East–West conflict to the realm of history, but other antagonisms prevailed. By the time this present Encyclopedia was initiated, the attention of legal scholars had focused on new regional conflicts, most prominently the Middle East. As General Editor I was faced with the question whether and how to approach a dispute that seems so far from political resolution, so far from academic agreement. Yet we tried and thus initiated a discussion that would fill a volume in itself, one that brought together many experts in one of the most exciting debates I have experienced. At the end of the day I felt that, while rapprochement may have been modest and many questions left open, the discourse we thus triggered was one of the most valuable outcomes of this Encyclopedic project. I hope it will continue well beyond the publication of this work. My sincere wish is that by the time of the next edition of the Encyclopedia this conflict will have moved from topical to historical, as happened with the East–West polarity.

The decision to cover certain politicized issues also lead to controversies within the Advisory Board itself. I would like to emphasize that the views presented in this work do not always reflect the view of individual members of the Board or the Board as a whole. I assume sole responsibility both for the decision to cover controversial ground as well as for any content in these volumes that may be seen as divisive.

Of course, it is not just conflicts and geopolitical upheavals that have stretched the limits of international law over the last twenty years. Many new normative regimes have emerged, or have been significantly expanded and solidified, such as international environmental law, international trade law, international criminal law etc. Some of the notional underpinnings of international law have been modified. Today we are moving away from statehood as the foundational paradigm of international law as we know it. We are discussing the canon of sources, new actors, new principles of law. Any reference work on international law is a snapshot of material in flux. This Encyclopedia aims to record the present state of international law but at the same time it already envisages its further development. Ideally it will become a part of that progress.

III

Many people have contributed to the completion of this work.

I am particularly grateful to the Advisory Board who were willing to lend their untiring support and their expertise to this endeavour. The following persons have served on the Advisory Board: Armin von Bogdandy, Edith Brown Weiss, Jean-Pierre Cot, Yoram Dinstein, Thomas M. Franck, Jochen Abr. Frowein, Meinhard Hilf, Rahmatullah Khan, Martti Koskenniemi, Thomas Läufer, Thomas A. Mensah, Hanspeter Neuhold, Francisco Orrego Vicuña, W. Michael Reisman, Bruno Simma, Daniel Thürer, Christian Tomuschat, Tullio Treves, and Sir Michael Wood. Thomas M. Franck passed away in 2009; we miss him and honor his memory.

I would also like to thank the following members of the Max Planck Institute who served as Internal Advisers: Ulrich Beyerlin, Isabel Feichtner, Clemens Feinäugle, Rainer Grote, Alexandra Guhr, Daniel Heilmann, Holger Hestermeyer, Karen Kaiser, Frauke Lachenmann, Nele Matz-Lück, Christiane Philipp, Monika Pohlmann, Anja Seibert-Fohr, Matthias Reuß, Volker Röben, Nicola Wenzel, and Silja Vöneky.

Over a period of six years, many junior researchers of the Max Planck Institute joined the editorial team. They were responsible for editing the texts, checking, revising or compiling the sources and literature. The commitment and dedication of the editorial team were essential to the success of this project: Sange Addison-Agyei, Freya Baetens, Antje C. Berger, Monique Bianchi, Sina van den Bogaert, Ana Paula Barbosa-Fohrmann, Olivia Danai, John Dingfelder Stone, Angela Doul, Seth Ericsson, Ina Gätzschmann, Julia Gebhard, Katja Göcke, Petra Hardraht, Moritz Holm-Hadulla, Timo Knäbe, Judith Köbler, Chie Kojima, Maïke Kuhn, Gilbert Leung, Emmanuelle Mantlik, Jakob Pichon, Isabel Röcker, Mylin Sapiera-Köbele, Charlotte Steinorth, Bijan Tavakoli, Katrin Tiroch, Johann-Christoph Woltag, Nele Linn Yang, and Dominik Zimmermann. They were supported by student assistants Sanja von Beauvais, Daniela Fietze, Alexander Foff, Miriam Freier, Ina Gätzschmann, Christian Gerber, Lena Hagemann, Anja Höfelmeier, Natalia Jevglevskaja, Judith Junk, Frederik Just, Sophie Kiladze, Carolin Kley, Katrin Kohoutek, Lisa Kölsch, Jana Lohmann, Aleksandra Mazurek, Harald Niederstraßer, Ian Innocent Ogutu, Jan Polzer, Victoria Reuter, Herbert Rosenfeldt, Eva Saarmann, Katharina Schaub, Alexander Schwarz, Katja Stockburger, Vanessa van Weelden, and Patrik Zamorano-Martinez.

I am much indebted to the Managing Editors Alexandra Guhr, Daniel Heilmann, Karen Kaiser, Frauke Lachenmann, Monika Pohlmann, and Matthias Reuß. Assisted by the secretaries Birgit Bürgy, Iris Füll, and Margot Lintaller, and the Institute's library and administrative staff, they coordinated the in-house work and served as the point of contact between the authors and the Institute.

More than 800 people contributed manuscripts to this publication. Special thanks go to the authors for their patience and cooperation. Communicating with scholars from more than 80 countries was an exciting and fruitful experience which I and the editorial team would not want to have missed.

Sincere thanks are due to Oxford University Press and in particular to John Louth with whom we have closely cooperated from the beginning. Without his support and the interest he took in the Encyclopedia this work would not have been possible.

The Encyclopedia was generously funded by the Max Planck Society for the Advancement of Science. Only this support made the Encyclopedia possible and I am very grateful for it.
