FOREWORD

This volume contains the article Aliens and Citizens and replaces the article written in 1962. The subject of immigration has experienced tremendous change since the publication of the original article, including important statutory changes in 1976 and 1980. These changes and the case law interpreting the statutes and regulations in the growing area of the law are reflected in the revised article.

Based on Immigration Law Service, the publisher's 6-binder work which exhaustively covers the field of immigration and naturalization, the revised article discusses such important subjects as immigrant and nonimmigrant classifications; refugees and asylees; obtaining a visa and gaining entry into the United States; adjustment, change, and termination of status; exclusion and deportation; citizenship, naturalization, and loss of citizenship; and the rights, privileges, duties, and obligations of aliens.

Your attention is directed to the Research References at the beginning of the divisions within the article, providing the user with easy access to statutes discussed in the article, and to such other publications as national texts and other units of the Total Client-Service Library. In addition, practice-oriented paragraphs have been inserted throughout the text under such headings as Practice guide, Recommendation, Caution, Comment, and Observation, each preceded by the logo ■■■■.
