Preface

75 Readings: A Freshman Anthology is strategically designed to introduce students to a broad variety of both traditional and contemporary essays. This rhetorically organized collection—comprised of a total of 75 essays—includes classic selections as well as very topical pieces representing international, ethnic, and women writers. The primary aim has been to expose students to a range of styles while retaining maximum pedagogical flexibility for the instructor. Comprehensive apparatus, prepared by Professor Santi Buscemi of Middlesex County College, is provided separately in the Instructor's Manual to allow teachers greater flexibility in reading and writing assignments. Developed for each essay, the apparatus includes: Author's Biography, Vocabulary, Questions for Discussion, and Suggestions for Writing. The apparatus is also available on Ditto Masters.

Special thanks are due to those instructors who reviewed the anthology and pedagogical apparatus: Rosalie Hewitt, Northern Illinois University; Michael G. Moran, Clemson University; Leland Chambers, University of Denver; Robert Ochsner, University of Maryland—Baltimore County; Marion Linehan, Tarrant County Junior College—NE; and Timothy Terry Miller, Indian River Community College.

In addition, Kate Scheinman, Charlotte Smith, and the following people at McGraw-Hill helped to bring this project to fruition: Emily Barrosse, Phillip A. Butcher, Keith Herrmann, Alison Meerschaert, and Sheila Sponauer.
