Acknowledgments

The present monograph is an updated version of my D.Phil. thesis defended at the University of Oxford in June 2011. I would like to thank the two examiners, Professors Guy Goodwin-Gill of All Souls College, Oxford and Guglielmo Verdirame of King's College London for insightful comments, which, I am sure, have enabled the book to be an improvement on the thesis.

My doctoral research was supervised by Professor Stefan Talmon, now Professor of Public Law, Public International Law and European Law at the University of Bonn. Words fail me when it comes to expressing my sincere gratitude. One would be hard pressed to find a more caring, supportive and rigorous supervisor. His faith in this research project sometimes even surpassed mine. All I can say is, 'Thank you'.

Along with my supervisor, I would like to thank my international law teachers in Oxford. First and foremost, Professor Vaughan Lowe QC, Emeritus Chichele Professor of International Law, who introduced me to novel ways of thinking about legal argumentation during the Public International Law Research Seminars held at All Souls College. I should also like to thank Professor Dan Sarooshi and Dapo Akande, from whom I have learnt so much.

At the University of Athens Law School, I am particularly indebted to Emeritus Professor Emmanuel Roucounas for ushering me into the realm of public international law in the first place. Many thanks are further due to Professors Antonios Bredimas, Angelos Yiokaris, Linos-Alexandros Sicilianos (now Judge at the European Court of Human Rights), Lena Divani, Photini Pazartzis, Maria Gavouneli, Achilles Skordas (now at the University of Bristol) and Lina Kouskouna, as well as Eleni Michal, Aspasia Zirou and everyone else at the International Studies Department of the Athens School of Law.

Special mention should here be made of the generous support I received from IKY, the Hellenic State Scholarship Foundation. IKY granted me a scholarship for doctoral studies, without which my research could not have been completed. I would also like to thank my College, St. Catherine's, for unwavering support through rough times, and especially Dr Justine Pila, Ashok Handa, Cressida Chappell and—last but definitely not least—James Bennett. Finally, I should also thank Ruth Bird and the staff at the Bodleian Law Library, who never failed to provide help when needed.

Special thanks are naturally due to Oxford University Press and its Delegates, as well as personally to John Louth, Merel Alstein and Antony Hinton for their patience and support while turning the manuscript into a book, as well as two anonymous referees for their comments.

I should here take the opportunity to thank my fellow D.Phil. students at Oxford University for their friendship and camaraderie. I was blessed with the good fortune to study international law in the company of Veronika Fikfak, Gleider Hernández, Mehmet Karlı, Keren Michaeli, Mārtiņš Paparinskis, James Upcher, Lema Uyar and Farid Ahmadov. A personal 'thank you' goes out to Antonios Tzanakopoulos for sharing Carrel XXI at the Bodleian Law Library and for everything else.

I would further like to thank all Greek students in Oxford, but most of all those with whom I shared a roof or jammed during a music rehearsal: Lydia Bolani, John Hodges, Mike Riddell, Georgios Magdis, Denise Xifaras, Salim Mansoor, Loukas and Christina Moutsianas, Sam Bhatt, Erato Basea and the fabulous St. Mary's Road Crew.

My friends in Athens and elsewhere; particularly Fivos, Andreas, Roi, Eleni, Catherine, Alessandro and Ilaria and the people at the Asylum Appeals Committees. Ilias Plakokefalos, Efthymios Papastavridis, and Anastasios Gourgourinis, thank you for your valuable help at various stages.

Valia, thank you for putting up with me during the final stages of preparing the manuscript.

Last but definitely not least, my deepest gratitude goes out to my loving family, my father Captain Kostas Karavias, my mum Fotini and my sister Vicky, as well as my aunt Vera who always made sure I was home for Easter. This book is dedicated to them.
