PREFACE

This book has taken shape over several years during which my ideas on administrative law have developed. I am indebted to a number of people with whom I have discussed the subject during that period. I would like to thank Jack Beatson and John Evans, both of whom found time to read large parts of the manuscript despite having heavy commitments of their own. I have also profited from discussion of particular aspects of administrative law with Harry Arthurs, Peter Cane, Michael Elliott, Dennis Galligan, Martin Matthews and Stephen Perry. The work was expedited by the grant of sabbatical leave by Worcester College, Oxford and the University of Oxford, and I am grateful also to Osgoode Hall Law School and the University of Virginia for making the sabbatical so rewarding. A special note of thanks is due to Francis Reynolds, my former tutor and present colleague, who first stimulated my interest in law.

Sweet & Maxwell Ltd. has provided constant support and encouragement. I cannot apologise enough to all those who have had to read my appalling handwriting, and who have succeeded in producing wonderful typescripts in the face of such adversity.

The law is as stated on May 31, 1983.
