Foreword

The chief announcement about persons associated with this annual is that James L. Woodress plans to retire as principal editor after next year's volume, ALS 1981. I plan to edit ALS 1982 and the following volume, covering 1983, will have Warren G. French as editor.

It was James Woodress who saw how scholarship in American literature grew and grew, threatening each who strove to "keep up" with his specialties and be an informed "generalist" as well. Each year that effort became harder. Jim Woodress decided to do something about it. As he explains in the first sentence of the foreword in the first volume (ALS 1963), "The idea for this book originated when I returned from a year in Europe and was overwhelmed by the quantity of scholarship produced during my absence." And so the series began. ALS 1981 will be the nineteenth volume. Of these Jim will have edited eleven, and in all nineteen of them his advice and guidance have been essential. American Literary Scholarship has become a constantly useful research and teaching resource and many, I'm sure, would agree with the cliché, I don't know what we would do without it. Thanks to Jim's vision and year in Europe, we haven't had to.

I want to thank G. R. Thompson for helping us out with the Poe chapter this year. The chapter next year will be done by Donald B. Stauffer (SUNY, Albany), who has handled the Chapter 3 assignment for us in the past. Replacing Hershel Parker, a veteran of the Melville chapter for nine years, will be Robert Milder (Washington University, St. Louis). After seven years covering Fiction: 1900 to the 1930s, David Stouck will be replaced by John Murphy (Merrimack College, North Andover, Mass.). And this is Winifred Frazer's fifth and final year of reviewing Drama for us. Her successor, a former author of that chapter, is Walter J. Meserve, Department of Theatre and Drama, Indiana University, Bloomington. Among the foreign scholars, coverage of Japanese Contributions will alternate, Hiroko Sato as author this year and Keiko Beppu next year. Professor Rolf Lundén has covered Scandinavian Contributions for the past eight years, since we instituted the chapter on Foreign Scholarship in the ALS 1973 volume. Next year that portion of Chapter 21 will be prepared by Mona Pers, of the University College of Västerås, Sweden. Warm thanks to these retirees for their long and faithful service.

We have touched upon some of these matters before, but it may be useful to remind readers of our procedures. Taking the present volume as illustration, we have followed this pattern. (1) We have received batches of 1980 citations of current festschriften and essay collections during 1980 and 1981 from James L. Harner (Bowling Green State University), head of that portion of the MLA International Bibliography (MLAB). The editor distributed these to concerned chapter authors. (2) During 1981 the off-year editor (James Woodress) researched and distributed article citations. Each chapter author, of course, made his own search for materials, especially in obvious journals relevant to his topic. Richard Crowder—at work on Chapter 16, Poetry: 1900 to the 1940s—for example, learned of critical and biographical works in that area, wrote for review copies, and read them. He also routinely covered such standard journals as American Literature and Concerning Poetry and such author journals as the Robinson Jeffers Newsletter, William Carlos Williams Review, and Wallace Stevens Journal. He worked on article leads sent him by Professor Woodress. (3) Target date for completed manuscripts was August 15, 1981. On July 13 I received from the New York office of MLA an advance printout of the 1980 MLAB and I cut out and sorted items for distribution to chapter authors. In most cases, the chapter author had seen these items, but the few he was unaware of, he read and added to his manuscript. (4) The printed MLA Bibliography reached members on or around October 31, 1981, after many authors had finished and mailed manuscripts to me. The published MLAB, too late to be of primary use, was a final checklist, alerting a chapter author to the occasional item which escaped his net.

The point I wish to make is this: for all practical purposes we operate independently of MLAB. If we waited for the printed volume to appear in the fall of 1981, it would take us close to an extra year to read, compose, edit, and print ALS.

One might well ask, Does ALS turn up a significant number of items not in the corresponding MLAB? To get some sense of this,

I ran a test check of the first 30 of the 72 typescript pages in Jerome Klinkowitz' chapter 15, Fiction: The 1950s to the Present. What I found was that MLAB does a splendid job in reporting articles and a not-so-splendid job in citing books. Though MLAB covers MELUS, Descant, and Commentary, the bibliography staff missed three articles which Professor Klinkowitz cites. Klinkowitz also cites articles which impressed him as significant in the following journals not covered by MLAB: New Republic, Granta (a revived British journal), Fiction International, the Ohio Library Association Bulletin, Harper's and Atlantic Monthly. MLAB fails to cite John Barth's important essay in the January Atlantic, "The Literature of Replenishment."

The oversight by MLAB of important books is more striking. Professor Klinkowitz cites the following titles not recorded in the 1980 MLAB: James M. Mellard, The Exploded Form: The Modernist Novel in America; Sanford Pinsker, Between Two Worlds: The American Novel in the 1960s; Ihab Hassan, The Right Promethean Fire: Imagination, Science, and Cultural Change; John Griffiths' Three Tomorrows: American, British, and Soviet Science Fiction; Richard Kostelanetz, Text-Sound Texts, Jerome Klinkowitz's The American 1960s: Imaginative Acts in a Decade of Change and the enlarged editions of his Literary Disruptions and his The Practice of Fiction in America; James E. Kibler, Jr.'s American Novelists Since World War II, 2nd series.

As we have advised readers of ALS repeatedly, this annual is selective and no substitute for the MLA Bibliography. Our chapter authors cannot cover "everything." Now, if the above sample is valid, I can advise readers of ALS: In your search for materials, be sure to look at both MLAB and ALS. ALS provides some citations you won't find in the Bibliography for the same subject year.
