

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY

second edition

STEVEN PENROD

2nd Edition

Social Psychology

Steven Penrod

University of Wisconsin

Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632

Library of Congress Cataloging-in-Publication Data

PENROD, STEVEN.
Social psychology.

Bibliography: p.
Includes indexes.

1. Social psychology. I. Title.

HM251.P416 1986 302 85-19311
ISBN 0-13-817958-1

To Joan and Rachel

Editorial/production supervision: Barbara Alexander

Development editor: Caroline Tapley

Interior design: Anne T. Bonanno

Cover design: Photo Plus Art

Cover art: Morris Louis, Unfolding Light, 1962.

Courtesy Andre Emmerich Gallery, New York.

Photo research: Christine A. Pullo

Manufacturing buyer: Barbara Kelly Kittle

© 1986, 1983 by Prentice-Hall

A Division of Simon & Schuster, Inc.

Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey 07632

All rights reserved. No part of this book may be reproduced, in any form or by any means,
without permission in writing from the publisher.

Printed in the United States of America

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

ISBN 0-13-817958-1 01

Prentice-Hall International (UK) Limited, London

Prentice-Hall of Australia Pty. Limited, Sydney

Prentice-Hall of Canada Inc., Toronto

Prentice-Hall Hispanoamericana, S.A., Mexico

Prentice-Hall of India Private Limited, New Delhi

Prentice-Hall of Japan, Inc., Tokyo

Prentice-Hall of Southeast Asia Pte. Ltd., Singapore

Editora Prentice-Hall do Brasil, Ltda., Rio de Janeiro

Whitehall Books Limited, Wellington, New Zealand

Social Psychology

Preface

Anyone who has taught social psychology a few times and has had the opportunity (or misfortune) to use several different texts knows that despite the superficial similarities in Tables of Contents, textbooks really do differ from one another. I know that in my own teaching I have encountered texts that students find stultifyingly dull; texts that students have difficulty understanding; texts that devote too much time to esoteric topics and miss the basics; texts that are too “cute” and miss the substance of social psychology; texts that are organized in peculiar ways; texts that are ugly—the list of complaints could go on and on. What are we, as instructors and students, to do? As I emphasized in the Preface to the first edition of this volume, no social psychology textbook can aspire to be all things to all people. But, authors can at least aspire to avoid some of the major pitfalls they have encountered in other people’s work. It is difficult to capsuleize a volume in a few paragraphs, but let me highlight a few of the characteristics of this book. Perhaps you will find that we share textbook “sensibilities.”

Point of view The sheer volume of research conducted by social psychologists since the turn of the last century assures that any even-handed treatment of the discipline will necessarily be shallow. Although some may believe that a “gloss” on social psychology would serve the interests of novices to the discipline, I roundly disagree. If one examines the social psychology textbooks published over the past eighty years (back to and including the 1908 volumes by Ross and McDougall) it is clear that the more interesting and influential have combined a “point of view” with a broad, but not overly expansive, coverage of the discipline. My point of view on the discipline, a point of view that permeates this text, is that of an applied social psychologist who believes that our discipline has much to “give away” to the rest of the world. I think few social psychologists are so divorced from the world outside the discipline that their research proceeds in disregard of that world, and I think few social psychologists conduct research without some concern for how and by whom their findings can be used.

Balancing basics and applications Nonetheless, and this is a major qualification, I believe that an introduction to our discipline has to be grounded in a firm understanding of 1. the theoretical orientations that guide our research, 2. the scientific research methods we employ, and 3. the research findings in “basic” areas of social psychology. What we, as a discipline, have to offer the rest of the world could be only poorly described in a text that focused on just applied research findings. Although I have tried to illustrate the points of contact between basic and applied social psychology throughout the textbook, the emphasis in the first fourteen chapters is on basic theory and research.

Cohesion One of the advantages of preparing a second edition of a textbook is that it is possible to stand back from the original product, adopt a critical stance, and make improvements. I have sought to make a number of improvements. One of my primary objectives in writing the new edition was to weave the text together more tightly by focusing upon a few theoretical orientations (primarily social learning, social cognition, and social exchange) and illustrating their role in research throughout the text. In doing this, I have not imposed theory on research (something I have found irritating in other textbooks), nor have I represented social psychological theories as more “advanced” than they really are.

Classics and contemporary research I have updated all the chapters in order to include new and provocative research. There is a temptation, of course, to regard “new” as “better,” and I have tried to resist that temptation. Rather, the guiding criteria for including new material has been: does the new research shed light on old problems or raise interesting new issues? Of course, much of the research that we conduct is directed to refinements in theory and description that are too advanced for an introductory social psychology textbook. I have avoided the pursuit of esoteric lines of research just because they are new. One aspect of the updating process has been to condense and delete materials that properly should give way to new theoretical developments and research. Social psychology is a cumulative science, but that does not mean that yesterday’s “classic” research still merits attention. I have tried not to write a history of social psychology—older research is represented when it serves sound pedagogical ends such as illustrating the development of theory and the resolution of major research questions.

Active areas of research As part of the updating process I have provided expanded coverage of those areas which are currently hotbeds of research activity. For example, Section 2 of the text (Chapters 3 through 6) has been extensively revised to reflect the rapid changes in Social Cognition theory and research. As a result, Chapter 3 has expanded coverage of sex difference research; Chapter 4 has expanded coverage of research on self-perception, self-presentation, and self-monitoring; Chapter 5 has been substantially revised to further strengthen its representation of research on the cognitive aspects of person perception, and Chapter 6 has been thoroughly revised to reflect current theory and research on interpersonal attraction and the development and dissolution of social relationships. At the same time, the more traditional areas of research have not been neglected: every chapter in the text has been revised, reorganized when appropriate, and updated. I have tried to make the presentation clearer. This means that throughout the text I have rewritten sections when I thought that ideas and findings could be presented more clearly or more simply without sacrificing accuracy.

Theory, methods, and social implications

As I emphasized before, the text continues to give attention to the real world application of basic research. This orientation is reflected throughout the text. The very first chapter emphasizes that research is not undertaken for its own sake and that one of the major objectives of research and theory development is the application of that research and theory to real world problems. Chapter 2 presents a broad overview of research methods. While it is still true that the bulk of social psychological research still occurs in the laboratory, a growing proportion of research employs other research methods that enjoy certain advantages over laboratory research. Each of the chapters includes a research box that explicitly illustrates the application of basic research and theory. Finally, the last two chapters focus on applied research. Chapter 15 closely examines the application of social psychological theory and methods to the law, while Chapter 16 presents a broad survey of applied topics that relate to the “Quality of Life.”

Organization This text is organized in a logical sequence that is adaptable to most instructors’ course organizations. We start in part 1 by examining the historical framework and guiding principles of social psychology, and describing its scientific foundations and means of operation. Chapter 2 is devoted to a description of the research methods employed in social psychology.

The remainder of the text moves from the micro or personal level outward to the macro perspective of society as a whole. In part 2 the individual is the focus, as we look at the social cognition of the self and others and at interactions between individuals. Part 3 explores the effects of society on the individual, while in part 4 we examine the development of anti- and prosocial behaviors. Finally, in part 5, we look at people’s roles and behaviors in the real world, examining such applied areas for social psychological insights as organizational behavior, environmental psychology, psychology and the law, and psychology and the quality of life in key areas. The sequence used is sufficiently flexible to allow the chapters to be assigned in any order, and to omit or assign as supplementary reading only those topics that lie beyond the purview of a particular course. The rich project suggestions as well as additional readings to be found in the Instructor’s

Manual, on the other hand, make possible the expansion of a given topic for fuller emphasis where this might be desirable. The Instructor’s Manual also includes the Test Item File, which is made up of multiple choice questions and an answer key.

Pedagogical strengths The goal in writing has been clarity. Each chapter is preceded by a summary outline of its content, and a few “Questions about . . .” the subject under discussion, which was designed to get students to start considering relevant issues even before they begin reading an assignment. These questions are answered at the end of each chapter, where a chapter summary and a list of Suggested Additional Reading can also be found. Within each chapter descriptive heads guide the reader from topic to topic; generous use of tables and figures graphically supplements text discussion; and photographs and a cartoon provide additional illustrative comment on the relevance of the chapter content. The writing tends to be personal—the text was written for students and is meant to speak to them. I have tried to spice it with examples that they can relate to, and to steer a sensible course on the use of jargon, selecting and defining those terms that are central to the discipline and avoiding those that are merely pedantic. In every chapter, key terms are boldfaced and defined in context. These terms appear again in the extensive Glossary at the back of the book.

Acknowledgments

No book is the product of a single person’s efforts. In the case of a textbook I have learned that there are many essential people “behind the scenes” and I would like to bring them on stage for a bow. I must start by thanking my wife Joan for her support and my daughter Rachel for letting me skip an occasional Sesame Street to work at my computer. I also want to thank, once again, the people who made the first edition of this text possible—Daniel Linz, Sarah Tanford, Michael Atkinson, and Carol Krafka at the University of Wisconsin and John Isley and Marjorie P. K. Weiser at Prentice-Hall. I am grateful also to Toni Goldfarb, Alice Harvey, Robert Mony, Jerry Ralya, and Henry Weinfield for their writing skills and professional assistance in the preparation of the first edition manuscript.

For the second edition Daniel Linz made an invaluable repeat appearance as a sounding board, editor, writer, friend, and babysitter. James Coward's ever-steady hand steered thousands of articles, hundreds of pages of my drafts, and what seemed like infinite numbers of references through the production gauntlet without a miscue. And, Thomas O'Rourke and Nancy Irons carried tremendous loads as library researchers and word-processors. To them all, a heartfelt thank you.

Thanks should also be extended to many other people at Prentice-Hall: to Marilyn Coco, editorial assistant; Paul Rosengard, marketing manager. I especially want to thank Caroline Tapley for her excellent editing of the second edition, and Barbara Alexander, whose patience, good humor, and hard work got the book through the production process.

A number of reviewers provided guidance along the way:

Jennifer Crocker, State University of New York at Buffalo

Clive M. Davis, Syracuse University

William H. James, University of Washington

James A. Kulik, University of California, San Diego

Lawrence La Voie, University of Miami

Mark Mitchell, Villa Maria College

Steven Neuberg, Carnegie-Mellon University

Stuart Oskamp, Claremont Graduate School

Miles L. Patterson, University of Missouri, St. Louis

Harry T. Reis, University of Rochester

Milton Rosenbaum, University of Iowa

Abraham Wandersman, University of South Carolina

Finally, thanks once again to the hundreds of social psychologists whose work made this text possible.

Contents

Preface xiii

1

Defining Social Psychology 1

UNDERSTANDING SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY 3

A Commonsense Look at Human Behavior 4 • The Discipline of Social Psychology 6 • A Brief History of Social Psychology 7

Research: Milestones in the Development of Social Psychology 8

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY AS A SCIENCE 11

*Scientific Methods 12 • Theory Building, Theory
Testing 12 • Scientific Objectives of Social Psychology 14*

Controversy: Is Social Research a "Golden Fleece"? 15

Is Social Psychology Really a Science? 16

Application: Eyewitness Reliability 17

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGICAL THEORIES 18

Social Learning and Social

*Exchange 18 • Cognitive Theories 20 • Role Theory and Symbolic Interactionism 21 • Biological and Instinctual Approaches 21 • The Major Perspectives
Compared 23*

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY AS A COURSE AND A CAREER 23

This course and This Text 24 • Careers and Research in Social Psychology 25

2

Research In Social Psychology 29

BASIC RESEARCH CONCEPTS 31

Hypothesis Generation 32 • Experimental vs. Nonexperimental Methods 33 • Variables and Constructs 33 • Assessing Casual Relationships 34 • Experimental Control 35 • Random Assignment in Experiments 35 • Reliability 36 • Validity 36 • Collection and Analysis of Data 37
Research: Eight Threats to Internal Validity 38
Interpreting and Reporting the Results 43

NONEXPERIMENTAL RESEARCH TECHNIQUES 43

Content Analyses 43 • Archival Studies 44 • Case Studies 45 • Field Studies and Observational Techniques 46 • Surveys 47 • Simulation and Role-Playing Techniques 49

EXPERIMENTAL RESEARCH TECHNIQUES 50

Preexperiments 51 • Quasi-Experimental Designs 52 • Experimental Designs 52 •

Field Experiments 54 • Evaluation Research 55
Application: Evaluation Research and the Head Start Program 56
Laboratory Experiments 57

PROBLEMS IN EXPERIMENTAL RESEARCH 58

Threats to Experimental Research
Findings 58 • Ethical Issues in Research 60
Controversy: Disagreements Over Research Findings 62

3

Social Development 66

THEORIES OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT 67

The Nature-Nurture Controversy 69

DEVELOPMENT OF MORAL BEHAVIOR 70

The Cognitive-Developmental Approach 70
Theory: Philosophical and Historical Views on Social Development 71
Social Learning Theory 75 • Comparing Theories of Development 77

SOCIAL INFLUENCES ON DEVELOPMENT 77

Interactions between Parents and Children 78 • Other Social Influences on Development 81

SEX-ROLE SOCIALIZATION 82

Sexual Identification 82 • Development of Sex Roles 83
Application: Sex-Role Stereotyping and Career Choices Today 85
Sex Roles in Transition 89

SEX DIFFERENCES 94

Differences in Male and Female Behavior 94 • Differences in Social Behavior • 96

4

Self-Perception and Self-Presentation 102DEFINING THE SELF 103

Our Multiple Selves 104 • The Looking-Glass Self 105

PERCEIVING THE SELF 106

The Influence of Self-Schemas 107
Research: Changing Self-Schemas 108
The Malleability of Self-Schemas 109

GAINING SELF-KNOWLEDGE 110

Information from Our Own Behavior 110 • Self-Awareness 114 • The Self And Others 117
Controversy: Which Is More Informative, Self-Knowledge or Social Knowledge? 120

SELF-EFFECTIVENESS 122

Self-Esteem 122 • Self-Serving Biases 123 •

Self-Handicapping Strategies 124 • Self-Control 124 • Learned Helplessness 125

SELF-PRESENTATION 127

Self-Presentation Motives and Strategies 128 • Impression Management 128 • Self-Monitoring 129
Application: Do You Salt Before You Taste? 131

5

Social Perception and Attribution 135IMPRESSION FORMATION 136

Central Trait Theory 137 • Implicit Personality Theories 138 • Integrating Information about Others 139 • Negativity and Positivity Effects 140

SOCIAL COGNITION AND SCHEMAS 142

Person Schemas 143 • Role Schemas and Stereotypes 144
Research: Changes in Racial Stereotypes 146
Event Schemas 148

ATTRIBUTION THEORY: MAKING SOCIAL INFERENCES 151

Causality and Naïve Psychology 151 • Correspondent Inferences 152 • The Covariation Principle 153 •

Inferring Causes of Behavior or Events 154 • Attributions of Success and Failure 155 • Deficiencies in Attribution Processes 156

Controversy: Why Do We Boost Our Egos? 158

SOCIAL INFORMATION PROCESSING 161

Social Attention—The Influences of Salient Stimuli 161 • Social Memory 162 • Social Inferences 164
Research: Cognitive Heuristics 168

6

Interpersonal Relationships 173

LONELINESS AND AFFILIATION 174

- What Is Loneliness?* 175 • Sources of Loneliness 176 • Everyday Affiliation • 178 • Conditions Promoting Affiliation with Strangers • 178
- Research: Stress and Affiliation* 180
- Theories of Affiliation in Stressful Situations* 181

THEORIES OF INTERPERSONAL ATTRACTION 182

- Reinforcement Theory* 183 • Social Exchange Theory 183 • Equity Theory 184

THE DETERMINANTS OF INTERPERSONAL ATTRACTION 184

- Familiarity* 185 • Proximity 185 • Similarity 186 •

- Complementarity* 187 • Physical Attractiveness 187 • Reciprocity 191

THE DEVELOPMENT OF RELATIONSHIPS 192

- Stages in the Development of Relationships* 192 • Self-Disclosure 194
- Research: Sex Differences in Self-Disclosure* 194
- Friendship and Love* 195
- Controversy: Can We Really Measure Love?* 196
- Ending Relationships* 198

HUMAN SEXUALITY 198

- Studying Human Sexuality* 199 • Changes in Sexual Attitudes and Behavior 199 • Sexual Behaviors 202

7

Communication 209

COMMUNICATION AND LANGUAGE 211

- A Model of Communication* 211 •
- Meaning* 212 • Language 213

NONVERBAL COMMUNICATION 215

- Nonverbal Channels of Communication* 215 • Multichannel Communication 223 • Deception 225
- Research: Detecting Deception* 226

MASS COMMUNICATION 229

- Users of Mass Media* 230 • Violence and TV 231
- Application: Mitigating the Effects of TV Violence* 235
- Politics, News, and Information* 236
- Controversy: Fall-out from The Day After* 238
- Television and Socialization* 239 • Sex-Role Stereotypes 241 • Other Stereotypes Perpetuated by the Mass Media 242 • Commercials and Consumer Behavior • 242 • Critical Viewing Skills 243

8

Attitudes and Attitude Change 247

THE NATURE OF ATTITUDES 248

- The Tripartite Model of Attitudes* 249 • The Measurement of Attitudes 250 • How Attitudes Form 252 • The Function of Attitudes 255

CHANGING ATTITUDES: THEORETICAL PERSPECTIVES 256

- Consistency Theories of Attitude Change* 256 • Social Judgment Theory 260

Research: Cognitive Dissonance and Physiological Arousal 261

CHANGING ATTITUDES THROUGH PERSUASION 262

The Source 262 • The Communication 265

Application: Fear, Persuasion, and Attitude Change 268

The Target 270 • Environmental and Situational Factors 274 • Attitude Change Over Time 274

Controversy: Preferences Need No Inferences 275

9

Attitudes and Behaviors 279

PREDICTING BEHAVIOR FROM ATTITUDES 280

Do Attitudes Foretell Behavior? LaPiere's Findings 281

Research: LaPiere's Study—The Chinese Couples Didn't Fit the Prototype 282

Problems in Attitude-Behavior

Research 283 • Improving Attitude-Behavior

Research 285 • Areas of Successful Prediction 286

AVOIDING MEASUREMENT PITFALLS 289

Biases in Attitude Measures 289 • Correspondence between Attitude Measures and Behavior 292

CONDITIONS PROMOTING AND REDUCING CONSISTENCY 294

Attitudes Formed through Experience 294 •

Individual Differences and Personality Factors 294 • Social Norms 295 • Situational Context 296

Controversy: Self-Contemplation and Attitude Behavior Consistency 296

ATTITUDE-BEHAVIOR MODELS 297

Ajzen and Fishbein: The Behavioral Intentions Model 298

Application: Will Sally Take Birth Control Pills? 300

THE RECIPROCAL RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN ATTITUDES AND BEHAVIOR 302

Influence of Previous Behavior 302

10

Social Processes 308

SOCIAL INFLUENCE PROCESSES 310

Conformity 310

Research: Conformity and Sex Differences 318

Compliance 318 • Obedience 320

SOCIAL EXCHANGE PROCESSES 325

Cooperation and Competition 325

Controversy: The Authoritarian Personality 326

Bargaining and Negotiation 330 •

Relative Deprivation and Procedural Justice 331

INTERPRET CONFLICT—PREJUDICE AND DISCRIMINATION 334

Intergroup Relations 334 •

Prejudice and Discrimination 335

Application: Competition in the Robbers Cave 336

Reducing Intergroup Hostility 339

11

Aggression and Violence 344

VIOLENCE IN OUR SOCIETY 345

Violence in the Home 346

WHAT IS AGGRESSION? 348

Measuring Aggression 348

Research: The Buss Aggression Machine 348

IS THERE A BIOLOGICAL BASIS FOR AGGRESSION? 350

Konrad Lorenz on Aggression 350 • Critique of Instinctual Theories 352

SITUATIONAL DETERMINANTS OF AGGRESSION 352

Frustration and Aggression 352 • Arousal and Aggression 355 • Verbal and Physical Attack 357 • Heat 357 • Drugs and Alcohol 359

SOCIAL LEARNING AND AGGRESSION 360

Media and Modeling 361

Controversy: The Effects of Television Violence on Aggressiveness 362

Causal Mechanisms Involved in Exposure to Media Violence 363 • Media Violence against Women 365 • A Cognitive Analysis of Modeling Effects 367

Application: The Impact of Mass Media Stories on Homicide 368

INDIVIDUAL DIFFERENCES IN AGGRESSIVE BEHAVIOR 370

Gender Differences in Aggression 370 • Aggression and XYY Personality 371 • Aggressive Behavior by Criminal Psychopaths 372

THE VICTIMS OF VIOLENCE 372

Does Violence Beget Violence? 373 • War and Violence in Other Cultures 373

REDUCING AGGRESSION 375

Catharsis 375 • Social Learning and Control 375

12

Prosocial Behavior 379

ORIGINS OF PROSOCIAL BEHAVIOR 382

Sociobiology and Altruism 382 • Altruism and Cognitive Development 383 • Learned Helpfulness 385

SOCIAL NORMS AND PERSONAL IDEALS 387

Social Norms 387 • Criticism of Normative Theories 390

EMERGENCY INTERVENTION 390

Latané and Darley's Model of Intervention 392 • Diffusion of Responsibility and Pluralistic Ignorance 395

CHARACTERISTICS OF THOSE WHO HELP 397

Personality and Helping 397 • Characteristics Associated with Helping 398 • Moods and Feelings 399

WHOM DO WE HELP? 399

Helping Attractive Others 399

Controversy: When Do We Help Out of Selfishness? 400

Helping the Blameless 400

Research: Helping Those Like Ourselves 402

When Helping Does Not Help 402

Application: If You Want Help, Ask for It! 403

CULTURE AND ALTRUISM 404

13

Groups, Leadership, and Organizations 408INDIVIDUALS AND GROUPS 409

Social Psychological Perspectives 410 • Social Facilitation 411 • Social Inhibition 413 • Social Impact Theory 414

GROUP STRUCTURE 416

Cohesiveness 416 • Differentiation among Members 418

GROUP PROCESSES 419

Group Productivity 419 • Decision Making 420 Application: Brainstorming 421

Group Polarization 422 • Communication in Groups 424

LEADERSHIP 426

The Contingency Model 428 Controversy: Are Leaders Born or Made? 429

BEHAVIOR IN ORGANIZATIONS 431

Defining Organizations 432 • Individuals in Organizations 432 • The Structure of Groups in Organizations 435 • The Total Organization 436 Research: The Hawthorne Effect 437

14

Environmental Influences on Social Behavior 441ENVIRONMENTAL PSYCHOLOGY 443*PRIVACY 444*TERRITORIALITY 445

Human Territorial Behavior 445 • Types of Territories 446 • Territorial Marking 447 Controversy: The Commons Dilemma 448 Territoriality and Behavior 449

CROWDING 451

Animal Studies 451 • Density versus Crowding 454 • Human Crowding 455 • The Cultural Context of Crowding 455 • Crowding in Laboratory Settings 456 • Explanations of Crowding Effects 457

ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND SOCIAL BEHAVIOR 458

Controversy: Is Crowding in Prisons "Cruel and Unusual Punishment"? 459 Heat and Aggression 460 • Air Quality 461 • Noise 461

THE IMPACT OF OUR SURROUNDINGS 462

Effects of Interior Design 462 • Effects of Architectural Design 466 Application: When a Housing Project Fails 466 Urban Life 471 Research: Cognitive Maps 472

15

Social Psychology and the Law 476THE CRIME, THE VICTIM, AND THE CRIMINAL 480

Criminal Victimization of Minorities and the Elderly 480 •

Criminal Victimization of Women 482 The Criminal 483

BEFORE THE TRIAL 484

Bail Setting 484

Research: Rape Victims on Trial 486

Plea Bargaining 488 • Pretrial Publicity 489

Controversy: Do Lie Detectors Really Work 490

THE TRIAL 492

How Social Psychologists Study the

Courtroom 492 • Jury Selection 493 • Eyewitness

Testimony 496 • Other Aspects of

Testimony 501 • The Role of Defendant

Characteristics 503 • The Influence of Trial
Procedures 504 • Deliberation

Procedures 507 • Jury Size and Decision

Rules 508 • Do Judge and Jury Always Agree? 509

AFTER THE TRIAL 510

Sentencing 510 • Imprisonment 510

Application: Setting Sentences 511

Parole 514 • Trends in Social Psychology and Law
Studies 514

16

Quality of Life 517

QUALITY OF LIFE 517

Measuring the Quality of Life 519 • Domains of Life Satisfaction 521 • Social Psychological

Well-Being 523

WORK AND WELL-BEING 524

The Effects of Unemployment 524 • Coping with

Economic Pressures 525

THE WORKING WOMAN 525

Job Discrimination 526 • Stresses on Working

Women 527

MARRIAGE 528

Marital Satisfaction 528 • Marital

Dissatisfaction 530

ADVERTISING AND CONSUMER BEHAVIOR 532

Theoretical Approaches 532 • What Consumers

Think about Advertising 533

Controversy: Who Needs Nutrition Labeling? 535

PUBLIC HEALTH 533

Smoking 536 • Heart Disease 538

Research: The Mass Media and Your Health 539

ATTITUDES, BEHAVIOR, AND ENERGY CONSERVATION 538

Behavioral Approaches to Energy

Conservation 540 • Persuasive Approaches to

Energy Conservation 541

AGING AND LIFE QUALITY 543

Ageism Stereotypes 544 • Loss of Control 546

USING SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF LIFE 547

Glossary 551

Bibliography 558

Name Index 600

Subject Index 610

1

Defining Social Psychology

UNDERSTANDING SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY

A Commonsense Look at Human Behavior • The Discipline of Social Psychology • A Brief History of Social Psychology

Research: Milestones in the Development of Social Psychology

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY AS A SCIENCE

Scientific Methods • Theory Building, Theory Testing

Controversy: Is Social Research a "Golden Fleece"?

Scientific Objectives of Social Psychology • Is Social Psychology Really a Science?

Application: Eyewitness Reliability

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGICAL THEORIES

Social Learning and Social Exchange • Cognitive Theories • Role Theory and Symbolic Interactionism • Biological and Instinctual Approaches • The Major Perspectives Compared

SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY AS A COURSE AND A CAREER

This Course and This Text • Careers and Research in Social Psychology